utter this song of Moses and of the Lamb! Since the LORD hath brought me through fire and water to a goodly heritage, since he hath brought me out of a fearful pit, and out of the miry clay, let me believe his mighty works, and sing his praise. Let there be a new song in my heart, and in my mouth, even praises to our God. Let my meditation of him be sweet: and let my soul, which he hath redeemed, rejoice in God, my only Lord. With sweet astonishment, with heart-burning affection, and with enrapturing joy, let me sing what JEHOVAH, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, have done, and will do for me; what they have given, and will give to MEN—to ME!—what they are, and for ever will be to men—to ME! And while I go up, through this wilderness-world, to my Canaan above, let me kindly accept the mixture of crosses and comforts which God allots to me. If parching thirst, if bitter gall, succeed my noted deliverances, let me never once doubt of his love; never once fear that all things are against me. If I am dear to God, it is proper that he make me smart for my sin. If he love me, let him not spare his rod of correction, which drives folly from my heart. If Jesus' presence sweeten my bitter draughts, it is enough. The cup which my Father giveth me, shall I not drink it? If JEHOVAH be my God that healeth me, let him make me wounds all over, that I may feel his word, his blood, his Spirit applied, and his hands binding up and making me whole. If I get Elim refreshments here, let me adore his sovereign kindness. But let my last march be to the river of life, clear as crystal; to the living fountains of waters, where God himself shall wipe all tears from mine eyes. Meanwhile, let me not be unaffected with the great deliverances which God hath wrought, and shall work, for his gospel-church; with his destruction of her heathenish and antichristian enemies; while exercised herself with a vicissitude of embarrassing troubles and joyful deliverances.

CHAPTER XVI. Ver. 4. The manna fell from heaven in the manner of rain or dew; and by it God proved the Israelites; tried whether miraculous favours would induce them to an exact observation of his laws.

Ver. 5. It was the sixth day of the week on which the double portion of manna was gathered, but whether it was the sixth after the Hebrews murmured, or sixth of the fall of the manna, is not certain.

Ver. 10. While the cloud marched before them into the wilderness, an extraordinary brightness appeared in it.

Ver. 16. Every man had about five English pints of it allotted him for his daily provision.

as up out of Egypt to kill us, and our children, and our cattle, with thirst?

4 And Moses cried unto the LORD, saying, What<sup>1</sup> shall I do unto this people? they be almost ready to stone me.

5 And the LORD said unto Moses, <sup>1</sup>Go on before the people, and take with thee of the elders<sup>2</sup> of Israel; and thy rod, <sup>2</sup>wherewith thou smotest the river, take in thine hand, and go.

6 Behold,<sup>1</sup> I will stand before thee there upon the rock in Horeb; and thou shalt smite the rock, and there shall come water out of it, that the people may drink. And Moses did so in the sight of the elders of Israel.

7 And he called the name of the place Massah,<sup>7</sup> and Meribah,<sup>8</sup> because<sup>m</sup> of the chiding of the children of Israel, and because they tempted the LORD, saying, Is the LORD among us, or not?

8 ¶ Then<sup>n</sup> came Amalek, and fought with Israel in Rephidim.<sup>9</sup>

9 And Moses said unto Joshua, Choose us out men, and go out, fight with Amalek: tomorrow I will stand on the top of the hill with the <sup>2</sup>rod of God in mine hand.

10 So Joshua did as Moses had said to him, and fought with Amalek: and Moses, Aaron, and Hur, went up to the top of the hill.

11 And it came to pass, when Moses <sup>3</sup>held up his hand, that Israel prevailed; and when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 Jethro bringeth to Moses his wife and two sons. 7 Moses entertaineth him. 13 Jethro's counsel is accepted. 27 Jethro departeth.

WHEN <sup>1</sup>Jethro the priest of Midian, Moses' father-in-law, <sup>2</sup>heard of all that God had done for Moses, and for Israel his people, and that the LORD had brought Israel out of Egypt;

2 Then Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, took <sup>3</sup>Zipporah, Moses' wife, after he had <sup>4</sup>sent her back,<sup>5</sup>

3 And her two sons; of which the <sup>6</sup>name of the one was <sup>7</sup>Gershom; (for he said, I have been an alien in a strange land;)

tempt the Lord, (1) By sinning wilfully, and thus putting him to the trial, whether he be omniscient, just, powerful, &c., Ac. 5. 3. (2) By unnecessary rushing on visible dangers without any lawful call, Mat. 4. 6, 7. (3) By a presumptuous demanding of miracles, to try whether God can work them, Mat. 16. 1; Lu. 11. 16. (4) By presumptuously prescribing to him when and how he should accomplish his promises or threatenings as the token of his presence with them, Ps. 78. 41.

Ver. 5. The elders of the people were to witness Moses' bringing forth water from the rock, and to report it to the people.

Ver. 6. God stood above the rock in the pillar of cloud, the token of his presence, to show that it was his powerful influence, not Moses' stroke, that brought forth the water.—This rock, it is reported, remains visible to this day as a kind of large stone, with twelve or twenty-four openings, in the valley of Rephidim.

Ver. 8. Whether these Amalekites were in league with the Egyptians, or were Canaanites or Edomites, or whether they attacked them merely for the sake of the riches they had brought out of Egypt, we know not.

Ver. 9. Moses stood on the top of the hill, in view of the Israelites, with his wonder-working rod lifted up as their banner, and as a token of the Lord's presence with and assistance of them.

Ver. 11. This different success, answerable to Moses' elevation of his hands and rod, marked the power and efficacy of prayer; and that they could do nothing but as God encouraged and strengthened them.

Ver. 12. This marked the human weakness of Moses; and that Christ, by his presence and Spirit, must help our infirmities in prayer.

Ver. 14. Joshua was to hear it, as he and his successors, who commanded the armies of Israel, were to watch every opportunity of destroying the Amalekites.—[From under heaven. This is one of those judgments of God against a nation, which infidels have most frequently assailed, as indicative of implacability, and therefore, as they assert, unworthy of God. The answer is plain. (1) If God be holy, he must be implacable against sin; and if against sin, he must also be implacable against impenitent sinners. (2) It is to be presumed that every shepherd holds it right to be implacable against the wolf—the cruel and insatiable destroyer of his defenceless flock. Such was the crime of Amalek, De. 25. 17. Cruel and cowardly, he attacked the defenceless rear of the Israelites' line, when 'feeble, faint, and weary.' (3) Has any philanthropist denounced the punishment of pirates, robbers, and murderers? Have the merchants of the Mediterranean wept over the fall of Algiers, or the travellers of India protested against the extirpation of the Thugs? No. How then dare infidels accuse God for a sentence which all men pronounce righteous, when they judge in another case? Out of their own mouths, and on their own principles, will they be condemned, and God will be 'justified when he speaks, and clear when he judges,' Ps. 51. 4. (4) Besides, the remembrance of Amalek, which God determined utterly to put out, implied, not the extirpation of individual, but of national life, an occurrence of which history affords many striking examples. Do men ever, in such cases, accuse Providence for what is actually done? No. How then dare they accuse God for denouncing the same judgment he intended to inflict? C.]

Ver. 15. The design of this altar was to commemorate the victory divinely bestowed, and to offer sacrifices of thanksgiving thereupon.

REFLECTIONS.—The straits of the people of God frequently recur upon them; and how commonly do they afford occasion for repeated unbelief, and a sinful rage of spirit, under them, while the greatest kindnesses are forgotten or ill-required. Humble prayer is most effectual to compose the spirit under such injurious treatment. Did we then but recollect the circumstances of our sins, it would tend rather to our humiliation; and did we but wait with humble patience, we should soon discover that God can open the most abundant supplies in our greatest distresses. How heartily wicked men hate the saints, and take all opportunities to distress them! But terrible is the justice that awaits them on account of it. The prayers of the saints and the word of JEHOVAH are sure to bring victory. Let me then never murmur against, never distrust, my God of infinite power and grace! Let me, in every case, cry to him who can turn flinty rocks into water springs! If I receive mercies amidst my provocations, I may expect new trials. But let me depend upon God in all my warfare, and praise him for all my victories.—But in this smitten rock I behold Jesus, the firm, the unchangeable God and Mediator of his people, who, for our danger of hell and despair, appeared in our nature!—Jesus, the stone smitten by Moses' fiery law before the rulers and people of Israel, that streams of atoning blood and sanctifying virtue might issue forth and run in this wilderness of our world, for the purification and refreshment of sinful men. In this warfare I behold Jesus, MY ALL IN ALL, as the Captain of salvation directing the Lord's host.—Jesus, the rod, the branch, lifted up as an ensign to the Gentiles!—Jesus, as my unwearied intercessor at the right hand of the Majesty on high!—Jesus, through whom I am more than a conqueror; and who hath sworn that he will have war with the enemies of his people, from generation to generation, till they be utterly defeated.

CHAPTER XVIII. Ver. 1. [Jethro was a believer in Jehovah, and a patriarchal though not a Levitical priest; that priesthood being not yet instituted, and Moses, Aaron, and the elders, enter into church fellowship with him (see ver. 7-12). The domestic part of the scene described presents a lively example to Christian families. (1) Moses' care to send his wife and children to a place of safety (ver. 2) during his dangerous negotiation with Pharaoh. (2) Jethro's affectionate restoration of them (ver. 6) when the danger was past. (3) The religious character of their entire intercourse, truly worthy of priesthood, prophets of the most high God. The political part of the narrative may afford the noblest lesson to all statesmen. Jethro speaks in the name of God, and no doubt by his inspiration (ver. 19, 23), when he draws the true character of rulers (ver. 21), viz. 'able men,' in modern language, men of talent, such as fear God, men of heart-religion, 'men of truth,' who abhor the temporary aid of falsehood, 'hating covetousness,' who endure the toils of state, not for the advantage it may bring to the

GARDEN OF GIZEH MUSEUM, CAIRO—A SCENE AROUND THE PALACE OF A MODERN PHARAOH. [Exodus, —:—: 10.]—"And Jethro said, Blessed be the Lord, who hath delivered you out of the hands of the Egyptians, and out of the hands of Pharaoh; who hath delivered the people from under the hands of the Egyptians." We give a picture here of a scene in the garden of the Gizeh Museum. This museum was originally built by Isma'il Pasha for his harem. He was made Khedive in 1867. The Suez Canal was opened during his reign. Owing to the enormous debt he fastened upon the Egyptian government, Isma'il Pasha was dethroned in 1879. This harem, in which the Egyptian antiquities are now housed, was built at an expense of five million pounds sterling. After the great Pasha was dethroned, this, among the rest of his property, was confiscated and turned over to the government. In love of pleasure and magnificence of fancy he fitly represents in modern times the luxurious Pharaohs who reigned in Egypt during the sojourn of the

4 And the name of the other was <sup>9</sup>Eliezer; (for the God of my father, said he, was mine help, and delivered me from the sword of Pharaoh.)

5 And Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, came with his sons and his wife unto Moses into the wilderness, where he encamped at the <sup>h</sup>mount of God:

6 And he said<sup>4</sup> unto Moses, I thy father-in-law Jethro am come unto thee, and thy wife, and her two sons with her.

7 ¶ And Moses went out to <sup>h</sup>meet his father-in-law, and did obeisance, and kissed him; and they asked each other of their <sup>h</sup>welfare: and they came into the tent.

8 And Moses <sup>told</sup> his father-in-law all that the LORD had done unto Pharaoh and to the Egyptians for Israel's sake, and all the travail that had <sup>come</sup> upon them by the way, and how the LORD delivered them.

9 ¶ And Jethro <sup>rejoiced</sup> for all the goodness which the LORD had done to Israel, whom he had delivered out of the hand of the Egyptians.

10 And Jethro said, <sup>Blessed be</sup> the LORD, who hath delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of Pharaoh, who hath delivered the people from under the hand of the Egyptians.

11 Now I <sup>know</sup> that the <sup>LORD is</sup> greater than all gods: <sup>for</sup> in the thing wherein they dealt proudly he was above them.<sup>5</sup>

12 And Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, took a <sup>burnt-offering</sup> and sacrifices<sup>6</sup> for God: and Aaron came, and all the elders of Israel, to <sup>eat</sup> bread with Moses' father-in-law before God.

13 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses <sup>sat</sup> to judge the people; and the people stood by Moses from the morning unto the evening.

14 And when Moses' father-in-law saw all that he did to the people, he said, What is this thing that thou doest to the people? why sittest thou thyself alone, and all the people stand by thee from morning unto even?

15 And Moses said unto his father-in-law, Because the people come unto me to <sup>inquire</sup> of God.

16 When they have a matter, they come unto me; and I judge between one and another;<sup>7</sup> and I do make them know the statutes of God, and his laws.

17 And Moses' father-in-law said unto him, The thing that thou doest is not good.

<sup>2</sup> Mount Sinai, which the Arabians call Tor, or the mountain (a word of most extensive diffusion), and Gebel Mousa, or the mount or rock of Moses, is situated between the two northern arms of the Red Sea, which thus formed a natural defence to the Israelites on the east, the south, and the west, while the mountains of El Tyh defended them to the north. Sinai and Horeb are often used promiscuously by the sacred writers: Horeb being probably the general name of the region, Sinai of a particular mountain.—C.

At one end of it rises precipitously the rugged peak now called Jebel Safedeh, the mountain of the willow, but anciently Sinai, or the mount of the Lord. Its summit is visible from every part of the plain; and so rugged is its base, so distinctly marked that the people could touch it. The whole topography of the spot corresponds in every respect to the Scripture narrative.—P.

18 Thou wilt surely wear away, both thou and this people that is with thee:<sup>8</sup> for this thing is too heavy for thee; <sup>thou</sup> art not able to perform it thyself alone.

19 Harken now unto my voice, I will give thee counsel, and <sup>God shall be</sup> with thee: Be thou for the people to God-ward, that thou mayest bring the <sup>causes</sup> unto God:

20 And thou shalt <sup>teach</sup> them ordinances and laws, and shalt show them the way wherein they must walk, and the <sup>work</sup> that they must do.

21 Moreover, thou shalt <sup>provide</sup> out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness; and place such over them, to be rulers of thousands, and rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens:

22 And <sup>let</sup> them judge the people at all seasons: and it shall be, that every great matter they shall bring unto thee, but every small matter they shall judge: so shall it be easier for thyself, and they shall bear the burden with thee.

23 If thou shalt do this thing, and God <sup>command</sup> thee so, then thou shalt be able to endure, and all this people shall also go to their place in peace.<sup>9</sup>

24 So Moses <sup>hearkened</sup> to the voice of his father-in-law, and <sup>did</sup> all that he had said.

25 And Moses <sup>chose</sup> able men out of all Israel, and made them heads over the people, rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens.

26 And they judged the people at all seasons: the hard causes they brought unto Moses, but every small matter they judged themselves.

27 ¶ And<sup>1</sup> Moses let his father-in-law depart; and he went his way into his own <sup>land</sup>.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 The people come to Sinai. 3 God's message by Moses unto the people out of the mount. 7 The people's answer returned again. 10 The people are ordered to be prepared against the third day. 12 The mountain must not be touched. 16 The fearful presence of God upon the mount.

IN the third month, when the children of Israel were gone forth out of the land of Egypt, the same day came they into the wilderness of Sinai.<sup>2</sup>

2 For they were <sup>departed</sup> from Rephidim, and were come to the desert of Sinai, and had pitched in the wilderness; and there Israel camped before the mount.<sup>3</sup>

3 ¶ And<sup>h</sup> Moses went up unto God, and the LORD called unto him out of the mountain, ruler, but for the blessing it may enable him to confer upon others. Lord, hasten the time when the 'kings of the earth will be wise,' when the 'judges of the earth will be instructed!' when the 'officers' of Israel 'shall be peace,' and her 'exactors righteousness.' C.]

Ver. 11. Even in the Egyptians' haughty and insolent detaining of his people Israel, imagining it impossible for their God to deliver them, he showed himself infinitely their superior in wisdom and might.

Ver. 12. They feasted before God, near to the symbol of his presence in the cloud, or on the mount, and in holy awe of him, and as in his sight.

Ver. 17, 18. What thou dost is not convenient either for thyself or the people. This tedious attendance will destroy thine own health and theirs.

Ver. 19. I make no doubt but God will bless thee in following the course to which I advise.

Ver. 20. Thou shalt deliver and explain to them

God's laws, which they may apply to their particular cases and occasions.

Ver. 21. Men of understanding, courage, piety, candour, faithfulness, and honesty, and who will discourage every wicked thing.

REFLECTIONS.—It is highly becoming that professed saints should mark every turn of providence that betails them; and in a dependence on God as their help, reckon themselves strangers on earth; and that

ENGLISH ORPHANAGE, NAZARETH—AN INSTITUTION EXPRESSING CHRIST'S SPIRIT STANDING IN THE TOWN WHERE CHRIST GREW UP. [EXODUS, xx.]—The twentieth chapter of Exodus contains the ten commandments. We put this picture of the English Orphanage at Nazareth to illustrate it, because in Christ the whole law was summed up and fulfilled, and the beautiful view we give above was taken in the city where Christ grew up. The English Orphanage at Nazareth is a school under the direction of the Established Church of England. It is conducted by consecrated women, and has been the means of accomplishing a great deal of good for the poor orphans in Palestine. No institution could more fittingly stand as a concrete illustration of what Christ has done and is doing for childhood. This school is an embodiment of His own love as expressed through the words: "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

thee down and thou shalt come up; thou, and Aaron with thee: but let not the priests and the people break through, to come up unto the LORD, lest he break forth upon them.

25 So<sup>s</sup> Moses went down unto the people, and spake unto them.

CHAPTER XX.

1 The ten commandments. 3 The first table. 12 The second table. 18 The people are afraid. 20 Moses comforteth them. 22 Idolatry is forbidden. 24 Of what sort the altar should be.

AND God<sup>s</sup> spake all these words, saying, 2 I<sup>d</sup> am the LORD thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

3 ¶ Thou<sup>c</sup> shalt have no other gods before me

4 Thou<sup>d</sup> shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth.

5 Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them: for I the LORD thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me;<sup>8</sup>

6 And showing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments.

7 Thou<sup>h</sup> shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God in vain: for the LORD will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.

8 Remember the sabbath-day, to keep it holy.

9 Six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work:

10 But the seventh day is the sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates:

11 For in six days the LORD made heaven

25 And if thou wilt make me an altar of stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn stone: for if thou lift up<sup>a</sup> thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it.<sup>3</sup>

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Laws for men-servants. 5 For the servant whose ear is bored. 7 For men-servants. 12 For man-slaughter. 16 For stealers of men. 17 For cursers of parents. 18 For smiters. 22 For a hurt by lance. 28 For an ox that goreth. 33 For him that is an occasion of harm.

NOW these are the judgments<sup>a</sup> which thou shalt set before them.

2 If thou buy an Hebrew servant, six years he shall serve, and in the seventh he shall go out free for nothing.

3 If he came in by himself, he shall go out by himself; if he were married, then his wife shall go out with him.

4 If his master have given him<sup>a</sup> a wife, and she have born him sons or daughters; the wife and her children shall be her master's,<sup>5</sup> and he shall go out by himself.

5 And if the servant shall plainly say, I love my master, my wife, and my children, I will not go out free:

6 Then his master shall bring him unto the judges; he shall also bring him to the door, or unto the door-post; and his master shall bore his ear through with an awl; and he shall serve him<sup>a</sup> for ever.

7 ¶ And if a man sell his daughter to be a maid-servant, she shall not go out as the men-servants do.<sup>6</sup>

8 If she please not<sup>7</sup> her master, who hath betrothed her to himself, then shall he let her be redeemed: to sell her unto a strange nation he shall have no power, seeing he hath dealt deceitfully with her.

9 And if he have betrothed her unto his son,

4 The ten commandments, or words, ch. xx., contained the principles of divine law, as between God and man. This chapter enumerates certain judgments, or judicial application of these principles, where the cases are between man and man.—C.

6 This law has been represented by some as relaxed in favour of female servants. De. 15. 12; but the idea of relaxation seems not consistent with the divine origin of a law. But in point of fact the law in Exod. and the law in Deut. are on two different subjects. That in Exod. relates to a maid-servant not only purchased, but betrothed to her master or his son; that in Deut. to a maid-servant merely purchased. Both are glorious specimens of the justice and mercy of the divine legislation.—C.

12 ¶ He that smiteth a man, so that he die, shall be surely put to death.

13 And if a man lie not in wait, but God deliver him into his hand,<sup>8</sup> then I will appoint thee a place whither he shall flee.

14 But if a man come presumptuously upon his neighbour, to slay him with guile; thou shalt take him from mine altar, that he may die.

15 ¶ And he that smiteth his father or his mother shall be surely put to death.

16 ¶ And he that stealeth a man, and selleth him, or if he be found in his hand, he shall surely be put to death.

17 ¶ And he that curseth<sup>9</sup> his father or his mother shall surely be put to death.

18 ¶ And if men strive together, and one smite another with a stone, or with his fist, and he die not, but keepeth his bed;

19 If he rise again, and walk abroad upon his staff, then shall he that smote him be quit: only he shall pay for the loss of his time, and shall cause him to be thoroughly healed.

himself to me, in the gospel-promise, for my God, my Redeemer, and my ALL IN ALL: and let my leading exercise be to receive him as such. Let his being JEHOVAH, my God and Redeemer, be the foundation, the great reason and motive, of all that I do. Influenced by this, let me renounce and detest every idol which robs him of his honour, or me of my enjoyment of him. Let me embrace every instituted ordinance as coming from my God, and observe it in the nearest fellowship with him. Having received JEHOVAH as my God, let me have grace from him to serve him with reverence and godly fear. Copying after his pattern, and desiring the enjoyment of him as my chief good, let me observe the appointed seasons of intercourse with him. Let me regard relations and property among men as the constitutions of my God: and in all my dealings with them, let me act as a possessor of God, that needs nothing in an unlawful manner, and as a cordial imitator of God, who is gracious and merciful, long-suffering, and abundant in holiness, righteousness, goodness, and truth. But having tasted the terrors of a broken law and an angry God, let me rejoice that, without my request, I have one Mediator between God and me, the man Christ Jesus. Detesting every species of false worship, let me rejoice that Jesus, the fruit of the earth, Jesus, the chosen stone, is my all-sanctifying altar, on which I must present all my services before God; and my unfailing security for the presence of God in ordinances: and God forbid that I should disgrace him with any light, licentious, or injurious behaviour.

CHAPTER XXI. Ver. 2. (1) A Hebrew might sell himself or his children in extreme poverty, De. 15. 12; Le. 25. 39; Ne. 5. 5. (2) Magistrates might sell a person for theft, ch. 22. 3. (3) He might be sold by his creditors for debt, 2 Ki. 4. 1; Mat. 18. 25. To such bond-servants masters often gave heathen maid-slaves as a kind of wives or concubines, to beget other slaves.—[No Hebrew could be sold unless a debtor or malefactor. When a man got into debt and was unable to pay, he was sold to, or he became the property of, the creditor for a period not exceeding six years, so that by his labour he might in some degree satisfy the just demands of the man he had wronged, Le. 25. 39, 40. In case of theft the thief was compelled to restore double, or four-fold, or five-fold, according to the nature of the crime. If he had not the means of making full restitution, then he was sold, i.e. he became the property of the man he had robbed until by his labour he had made legal compensation. These were the only ways in which a Hebrew could become a bondman. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—How just, gracious, and condescending must God, the giver of these laws, be! How mindful of the welfare of mankind! How profitable to be his voluntary servants! His providence extends even to that which appears accidental; and he exercises the most exact care to preserve the innocent, and at the same time punish the guilty. Let me therefore take heed that neither I, nor what pertains to me, prove hurtful to my neighbour or to his property! Suppose no laws of men can punish me, the justice of God can overtake me. Let me rather, as a faithful man, put on bowels of mercy and long-suffering, put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. Meanwhile, in those voluntary bond-servants I may behold Jesus, the only begotten Son of God, from love to his Father, from love to all the world, solemnly sur-

26 ¶ And if a man smite the eye of his servant or the eye of his maid, that it perish; he shall let him go free for his eye's sake.

27 And if he smite out his man-servant's tooth, or his maid-servant's tooth; he shall let him go free for his tooth's sake.<sup>5</sup>

28 ¶ If an ox gore a man or a woman, that they die: then the ox shall be surely stoned, and his flesh shall not be eaten; but the owner of the ox shall be quit.

29 But if the ox were wont to push with his horn in time past, and it hath been testified to his owner, and he hath not kept him in, but that he hath killed a man or a woman; the ox shall be stoned, and his owner also shall be put to death.

30 If there be laid on him a sum of money, then he shall give, for the ransom of his life, whatsoever is laid upon him.

31 Whether he have gored a son, or have gored a daughter, according to this judgment shall it be done unto him.

32 If the ox shall push a man-servant or maid-servant; he shall give unto their master thirty shekels of silver, and the ox shall be stoned.

33 ¶ And if a man shall open a pit, or if a man shall dig a pit, and not cover it, and an ox or an ass fall therein;

34 The owner of the pit shall make it good, and give money unto the owner of them; and the dead beast shall be his.

35 ¶ And if one man's ox hurt another's, that he die; then they shall sell the live ox and divide the money of it; and the dead ox also they shall divide.

36 Or if it be known that the ox hath used to push in time past, and his owner hath not kept him in; he shall surely pay ox for ox; and the dead shall be his own.<sup>6</sup> tions of the laws on behalf of widows and orphans, may appear almost superfluous. But by those who have carefully observed how these defenceless parties are sometimes treated, the benevolence of these laws, and the deep practical acquaintance with human life on which they are founded, will be readily perceived, and gratefully acknowledged. C.]

Ver. 26. [Kament. The raiment of the poor modern Arab of the desert is, most probably, near akin to that 3 If the sun be risen upon him, there shall be blood shed for him; for he should make full restitution: if he have nothing, then he shall be sold for his theft.

4 If the theft<sup>1</sup> be certainly found in his hand alive, whether it be ox, or ass, or sheep; he shall restore double.

5 ¶ If a man shall cause a field or vineyard to be eaten, and shall put in his beast, and shall feed in another man's field; of the best of his own field, and of the best of his own vineyard, shall he make restitution.

6 ¶ If fire break out, and catch in thorns, so that the stacks of corn, or the standing corn, or the field, be consumed therewith; he that kindled the fire shall surely make restitution.<sup>2</sup>

7 ¶ If a man shall deliver unto his neighbour money or stuff to keep, and it be stolen out of the man's house; if the thief be found, let him pay double.

8 If the thief be not found, then the master of the house shall be brought unto the judges, to see whether he have put his hand unto his neighbour's goods.<sup>3</sup>

9 For all manner of trespass, whether it be for ox, for ass, for sheep, for raiment, or for any manner of lost thing, which another challengeth to be his, the cause of both parties shall come before the judges; and whom the judges shall condemn, he shall pay double unto his neighbour.

10 If a man deliver unto his neighbour an ass, or an ox, or a sheep, or any beast, to keep; and it die, or be hurt, or driven away, no man seeing it:

11 Then shall an oath of the LORD be between them both,<sup>5</sup> that he hath not put his hand unto his neighbour's goods; and the owner of it shall accept thereof, and he shall not make it good.

12 And if it be stolen<sup>6</sup> from him, he shall make restitution unto the owner thereof.

13 If it be torn in pieces, then let him bring it for witness, and he shall not make good that which was torn.

14 ¶ And if a man borrow<sup>7</sup> ought of his neighbour, and it be hurt, or die, the owner thereof being not with it; he shall surely make it good.

15 But if the owner thereof be with it,<sup>8</sup> he shall not make it good: if it be an hired thing, it came for his hire.

16 ¶ And if a man entice a maid that is of the poor Jew supposed to be given in pledge. It is generally woollen, nearly square, reaching from the shoulders to the calf of the leg or the ankles. Two slits admit the arms, and it is joined at the neck, so as to form a hole, through which the head passes. It is open before from top to bottom; and is wrapped round the body, or let loose, at the pleasure of the wearer. This, with an under shirt, forms all the poor Arab's dress. It is generally both his bed and covering at not betrothed, and lie with her; he shall surely endow her to be his wife.

17 If her father utterly refuse to give her unto him, he shall pay money according to the dowry of virgins.

18 Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live.

19 Whosoever lieth with a beast shall surely be put to death.

20 He that sacrificeth unto any god, save unto the LORD only, he shall be utterly destroyed.

21 Thou shalt neither vex a stranger, nor oppress him: for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.<sup>9</sup>

22 Ye shall not afflict any widow, or fatherless child.

23 If thou afflict them in any wise, and they cry at all unto me, I will surely hear their cry:

24 And my wrath shall wax hot, and I will kill you with the sword; and your wives shall be widows, and your children fatherless.

25 If thou lend money to any of my people that is poor by thee, thou shalt not be to him as an usurer, neither shalt thou lay upon him usury.<sup>1</sup>

26 If thou at all take thy neighbour's raiment to pledge, thou shalt deliver it unto him by that the sun goeth down:

27 For that is his covering only; it is his raiment for his skin: wherein shall he sleep? and it shall come to pass, when he crieth unto me, that I will hear; for I am gracious.

28 Thou shalt not revile the gods, nor curse the ruler of thy people.

29 Thou shalt not delay to offer the first of thy ripe fruits,<sup>2</sup> and of thy liquors: the first-born of thy sons shalt thou give unto me.

30 Likewise shalt thou do with thine oxen, and with thy sheep: seven days it shall be with his dam; on the eighth day thou shalt give it me.

31 And ye shall be holy men unto me: neither shall ye eat any flesh that is torn of beasts in the field; ye shall cast it to the dogs.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 Of slander and false witness. 4 Of charitableness. 6 Of justice. 10 Of the year of rest. 12 Of the sabbath. 13 Of idolatry. 14 Of the three feasts. 18 Of the blood and the fat of the sacrifice. 20 An Angel is promised for a guide, with a blessing, in case they obey him.

THOU shalt not raise<sup>5</sup> a false report: put not thine hand with the wicked to be an unrighteous witness.

2 Thou shalt not follow a multitude to do evil;<sup>6</sup> neither shalt thou speak in a cause to decline after many to wrest judgment.

3 Neither shalt thou countenance a poor man in his cause.

4 If thou meet thine enemy's ox or his ass going astray, thou shalt surely bring it back to him again.

5 If thou see the ass of him that hateth thee lying under his burden, and wouldest forbear to help him;<sup>7</sup> thou shalt surely help with him.

6 Thou shalt not wrest the judgment of thy poor in his cause.

7 Keep<sup>8</sup> thee far from a false matter; and the innocent and righteous slay thou not:<sup>8</sup> for I will not justify the wicked.

8 And thou shalt take no gift: for the gift blindeth the wise,<sup>9</sup> and perverteth the words of the righteous.

9 Also thou shalt not oppress a stranger: for ye know the heart<sup>1</sup> of a stranger, seeing ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.

10 And six years thou shalt sow thy land, and shalt gather in the fruits thereof:

11 But the seventh year thou shalt let it rest and lie still; that the poor of thy people may eat: and what they leave the beasts of the field shall eat. In like manner thou shalt deal with thy vineyard, and with thy olive-yard.<sup>2</sup>

12 Six days thou shalt do thy work, and night; and a mat, or carpet, if it can be obtained, is all he requires to constitute perfect luxury. If nearly such was the raiment of the poor Jew, and there is good reason to believe it was, the law that restored it in the evening, when pledged through the day, indicates the Lord's minute and benevolent regard to the health and comfort of his creatures. C.]

Ver. 28. [The Hebrew word is elohim, the usual meaning and translation of which is 'God.' The same word is rightly rendered 'judges' in ver. 8 and 9; but there it has the article, while here it has not. The meaning given to it in the Authorized Version is opposed alike to the common use of the word, and to the spirit of the Mosaic laws. The true meaning is, 'Thou shalt not blaspheme God.' P.]

Ver. 29. The proportion of the first-fruits was between the fortieth and sixtieth part of the increase. By giving this, they acknowledged themselves the Lord's tenants; and thus their crop was sanctified. These first-fruits also typified Jesus Christ and his people, who are dedicated to God, and bring blessings on mankind.—[Literally, 'Thou shalt not delay (to offer) from thy fulness (of corn), and thy tear (of the vine).'] 'The tear of the vine' is a common metaphor in wine-growing countries. It signifies the best or choicest produce of the grape. P.]

revealed in the gospel teach me to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, and to live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world, rendering unto God and men their respective dues. If God be my portion, all covetousness, injustice, and infidelity should be far from my heart and hand. If God be my pleasure, never should I wallow in fleshly lusts, or render others disgraced and miserable by any means. If God be my blessed Husband and Lord, I should, as under the sweetest and strongest obligation, resist the devil, and detest his influence. Let me therefore honour JEHOVAH with due worship, and with the first-fruits of all my increase; and regard magistrates as his deputies on earth, who are bound in the most exact manner to punish crimes against God or men. If God be my pattern, let me prepare of my goodness for the poor. It is more blessed to give than to receive. While I have gracious provision, let my soul never live on that which is corrupt, or can be torn from me; but, despising the blessings of earth, show myself fully satisfied with the rich provisions of divine grace.

CHAPTER XXIII. Ver. 1. They were neither to invent a slander, nor to receive or report it, but to discourage and reprove every spreader of it.—[The full meaning is 'Thou shalt neither raise nor propagate an unfounded report.' In giving testimony each man is here bound to state only what he knows to be true, and to avoid countenancing anything that is false. P.]

Ver. 2. Neither the counsel nor example of multitudes in evil is to be followed; nor must either parties, friends, judges, witnesses, or vulgar opinions move us to lessen great faults, aggravate small ones, vindicate offenders, accuse the innocent, or misrepresent anything to procure an unjust sentence.

Ver. 3. In judgment none must be favoured either for their poverty or their wealth.—[Countenance a poor man in his cause. The foregoing law forbids to follow, the succeeding forbids to court the multitude. A high profession of sympathy with the poor, loud and pretended boasted efforts to alleviate their sufferings, and redress wrongs, have ever distinguished the traffickers in popularity; from Absalom, who rebelled against his king and his father (2 Sa. 15. 2-6), to Judas, who, for thirty pieces of silver, betrayed and sold his Lord (Jn. 12. 5, 6).—Note. The believer must follow Christ, and seek no praise but that which cometh of God, Jn. 12. 23; Ro. 2. 29. C.—When justice is at stake neither the wealth nor the poverty of the party is to be taken into consideration. No favour must be shown even to the poor. Strict and impartial justice must be done to all. P.]

Ver. 8. Bribes corrupt the minds of judges, and make them, though sensible and ordinarily upright, to judge unjustly.

Ver. 11. The design of this rest of their land was to teach them that they and their land were the Lord's: this year of release, as well as their weekly Sabbaths in the seventh day thou shalt rest; that thine ox and thine ass may rest, and the son of thy handmaid and the stranger may be refreshed.

13 ¶ And in all things that I have said unto you be circumspect: and make no mention of the name of other gods, neither let it be heard out of thy mouth.

14 ¶ Three<sup>a</sup> times thou shalt keep a feast unto me in the year.

15 Thou<sup>b</sup> shalt keep the feast of unleavened bread: (thou shalt eat unleavened bread seven days, as I commanded thee, in the time appointed of the month Abib; for in it thou camest out from Egypt; and none shall appear before me empty.)

16 And the feast of harvest,<sup>c</sup> the first-fruits of thy labours, which thou hast sown in thy field; and the feast of ingathering, which is in the end of the year, when thou hast gathered in thy labours out of the field.<sup>d</sup>

17 Three times in the year all thy males shall appear before the LORD God.

18 ¶ Thou<sup>e</sup> shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leavened bread; neither shall the fat of my sacrifice<sup>f</sup> remain<sup>g</sup> until the morning.

19 The<sup>a</sup> first of the first-fruits of thy land thou shalt bring into the house of the LORD thy God. Thou shalt not seethe a kid in his mother's milk.

20 ¶ Behold,<sup>h</sup> I send an Angel before thee, to keep thee in the way, and to bring thee into the place which I have prepared.

21 Beware<sup>i</sup> of him, and obey his voice, provoke him not; for he will not pardon your transgressions: for my name<sup>j</sup> is in him.

Ver. 15, 16. The feast of unleavened bread was in March; the feast of harvest, weeks, or pentecost, at Whitsunday; the feast of ingathering, or tabernacles, in September.—[Ver. 15. The passover is here called 'the feast of unleavened bread.' It was the first and greatest of the feasts. The last clause of the verse, 'None shall appear before me empty,' applies not to the passover exclusively, as might be inferred from the English version, but to all the feasts. No man was to appear at any of them without suitable offerings. P.]

Ver. 17. Women were not required, but they might attend their solemn feasts if they pleased.

Ver. 19. This taught them to detest cruelty, and any imitation of idolatrous rites.—[Thou shalt not seethe a kid in his mother's milk. Whatever be the meaning of this prohibition, there can be no doubt of its importance, as it is thrice enforced in the same words. It is here the last of the judgments delivered to Moses during his first interview with God on the mount, ch. 20. 21, 22; 21. 1; 24. 34. On the renewal of the broken tables, ch. 34. 1, and solemn annunciation of the covenant, ch. 34. 10, the same words are repeated in ver. 26; and lastly, in De. 14. 21, holiness to the Lord, as exhibited in abstaining from forbidden food, immediately precedes. Maimonides, a Jewish expositor, considers it merely a precept against an unwholesome food. Philo, another Jew, considers it a precept against cruelty; and a Cairite Jew, quoted by Cudworth, represents it as a reference to a heathen custom of boiling a kid in its mother's milk, and sprinkling it on fields and trees, with the superstitious idea of rendering them fruitful; and in either the first or last of these opinions, there is a general concurrence of Christian expositors. It is with much diffidence we would venture to present another view. To prepare our way, two facts in Scripture history require to be considered—(1) That the Jews, and the Jewish priesthood, even 'from the days of their fathers, have gone away from God's ordinances, and have not kept them,' Mal. 3. 7, and have 'transgressed, and rendered of none effect the commandments of God by their traditions,' Mat. 15. 3, 6. (2) That one of the sins that did most early and most easily beset or entangle the nation, was the appetite for flesh. Hear the proof from their own lips, Ex. 10. 3, 'Would to God we had died in Egypt, when we sat by the flesh-pots.' See it in their fretful and angry tears, Nu. 11. 3, when they weped, and said, Who shall give us flesh to eat?' To a people and priesthood so disposed, it became therefore necessary to give 'precept upon precept' against epicurism in food, and especially against its introduction in their religious festivals. It is remarkable that this prohibition is twice connected with the offering of first-fruits, a festival peculiarly privileged as an occasion of domestic and national joy, De. 26. 11. But on no solemn occasion of thanksgiving has the disposition to indulgence been more observable than in the celebration of the harvest-home—the very festival, in modern language, to which the prohibition is appended. Of this festival, amongst the Jews, a kid constituted an essential part, being appointed for a sin-offering and atonement, Le. 23. 19; Nu. 28. 30. This being observed, two questions present themselves. (1) Why prohibit no other young animal but a kid? According to the manner of Scripture—which ever avoids prolixity in its laws, one of the sacrificial animals stands for them all. This abbreviation may be exemplified, Ex. 20. 7, where 'the name of the Lord' stands, by irresistible inference, for his 'names, titles, attributes, ordinances, words, and works, or anything whereby he maketh himself known.' (2) Can the reference be to seething this kid, seeing it was a sacrifice? It will appear from examining Le. 23. 19; 4. 23; 3. 13-15 that the chief parts of the sin-offering, Le. 6. 25, 29, were to be 'eaten in the holy place by all the males among the priests.' (3) A third question still remains, Why specially prohibit seething in the mother's milk? From Zec. 14. 21 it appears that seething was the common mode of preparing the feast of the sacrifices. But amongst God's ordinances for sacrifice, we find the following: Le. 22. 27, 'When a bullock, or goat, or sheep, is brought forth, then it shall be seven days under the dam, and from the eighth day and thenceforth it shall be accepted for an offering made by fire unto the Lord.' Now it is during these seven reserved and prohibited days that the kid is said to be in or on its mother's milk; and as during that period it could not be sacrificed to the honour of God, so, during a like period, it should not be devoted either to the sustenance or epicurism of man. The prohibition was therefore a special memorial to the priests, for a strict adherence to the ritual of divine service, and a solemn caveat against any infringement, through temptation of appetite—a restraint, which, if the priests faithfully imposed upon themselves, there was every reason to expect would extend its self-denying influence to the people. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Think, O my soul, have I taken heed to my ways, that I might not sin with my tongue? Have I always acted with conscience and impartiality in all my conduct? Have I always spoken only the truth, and that in due season and with a good intent? Have I been a hater of bribery and all perverting of

WADY 'ALI—IN THE LAND PROMISED TO THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL. [Exodus, xxiii:23.]—"For mine angel shall go before thee, and bring thee in unto the Amorites, and the Hittites, and the Perizzites, and the Canaanites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites." Wady 'Ali is a view of the country on the way between Jaffa and Jerusalem. We left Ramleh at six o'clock, and started for Jerusalem, and came to the Wady 'Ali, which is the valley of entrance to the mountains of Judea, about nine o'clock. This picture was taken as we started up the mountains. This part of the country was embraced in the promise early made to the children of Israel if they would obey the voice of God and provoke Him not to anger. There is something of sublimity combined with delicate beauty about this part of the Judean mountains. Rocks and cliffs broken into large or small fragments are piled in successive layers to form these hills, while between and above and around are wild flowers of all colors.

The Israelites numbered about two millions, and were therefore nearly equal to the present population of Syria and Palestine. At this moment three-fourths of the country is desolate. Some of the richest plains are uninhabited; and wild beasts—bears, leopards, hyenas, jackals, wild boars, &c.—commit great ravages. God's promise, therefore, recorded above in ver. 29, was wise and good.—P.

The nobles of Israel were the typical representatives of those who are truly ennobled by being called to be 'sons of God.' Such a noble may be the poorest, who is yet rich in faith, and an heir of the kingdom of Jesus. Am I careful to keep his Sabbaths, and to observe every instituted opportunity of fellowship with him? Are even his most circumstantial laws hidden in my heart?—While I thus seriously examine myself, endeavour to conform myself to his will, and lament my infirmities and failings, let me rejoice that Jesus, the angel of the covenant, will safely lead me through this wilderness-world to the promised Canaan above, where no accursed inhabitant shall ever molest me, nor idols deceive me. Meanwhile, let him put out my inward corruptions, and the enemies of his people, by little and little; and let me keep myself from idols, and from voluntary intimacy with wicked men, cheerfully obeying his gracious voice, that I may not feel the rod of his chastisement, but in all my ways rejoice in his presence, blessing, and protection.

CHAPTER XXIV. Ver. 4. The altar represented God the chief party in the covenant, and the twelve stony pillars the tribes of Israel, as having hard and stony hearts.

Ver. 6-8. The sprinkling of the blood on the altar, the book, the young men, the elders, and the pillars which represented the people, denoted the satisfaction of God's perfections, the fulfilment of the broken law, and the purification of men's consciences by the blood of Jesus. Hence, in ver. 9, 10, God, perhaps in human shape, appears as smiling on them; and they, with comfort and safety, feast in his presence.

Ver. 10. [Body of heaven in his clearness. It is only in the unclouded skies of the countries within or approaching the tropics, that the power of this expression can be fully appreciated. C.]

Ver. 12. [The ten commandments had already been spoken by the voice of Jehovah from Sinai; but no authentic copy of them had yet been given to Moses. It was for the purpose of giving him an authentic copy that the Lord now summoned Moses to the mount. P.]

Ver. 16. In these six days Moses is prepared to receive new commandments, as the people were in three days prepared for hearing the law.

REFLECTIONS.—One instance of fellowship with God insures and prepares for another more remarkable, while believers are allowed to come even to his seat—for this purpose his oracles are revealed and his ordinances dispensed to us. But how many rashly consent to God's word, and resolve on duty, who in the issue prove very unsteadfast! Let me then bless the Lord that our testament is made with all the true, however unworthy in themselves; and that it is a new testament in Christ's blood. His finished atonement hath glorified his Father's compassion to the highest; hath magnified the law; and pacifies and purges our conscience from dead works. By these means I am determined to receive his words into my heart as indeed the word of God, since I am allowed the clear and amiable displays of a reconciled God, while in his presence I feast on the flesh and blood of his Son. But behold, likewise, how my Redeemer, having fulfilled the law, and by himself purged away our sins, ascends into the hill of God, sits down on the right hand of the Majesty in the heavens, and thence, in due time, he will return without sin unto salvation.

SARCOPHAGUS OF APIS BULL, MEMPHIS—SHOWING WHERE THE ISRAELITES GOT THE IDEA OF THE GOLDEN CALF. [EXODUS, XXV: 22.]—"And there I will meet with thee, and I will commune with thee from above the mercy seat, from between the two cherubims which are upon the ark of the testimony, of all things which I will give thee in commandment unto the children of Israel." It is impossible to imagine a contrast greater than that found between the elements of worship among the Egyptians and such as were introduced among the Hebrews by Moses. The great difference in the civilizations developed by the Egyptians and the Israelites may be accounted for by considering the infinite distance between their religions. In this twenty-second verse we have reference made to the mercy seat between the two cherubims which are upon the ark of the testimony, and in this picture we have a view of an immense sarcophagus of an Apis Bull in the Serapeum near Memphis. The Apis Bull was the sacred animal of Ptah. No wonder the Egyptians were a degraded people, and that the Israelites through a pure form of worship came to the highest civilization of ancient times.

31 ¶ And<sup>1</sup> thou shalt make a candlestick of pure gold; of beaten work shall the candlestick<sup>8</sup> be made: his shaft, and his branches, his bowls, his knops, and his flowers, shall be of the same.

32 And <sup>6</sup>six branches shall come out of the sides of it; three branches of the candlestick out of the one side, and three branches of the candlestick out of the other side:

33 Three bowls made like unto almonds, with a knop and a flower in one branch; and three bowls made like almonds in the other branch, with a knop and a flower: so in the six branches that come out of the candlestick.

34 And in the candlestick shall be four bowls made like unto almonds, with their knops and their flowers.

35 And there shall be a knop under two branches of the same, and a knop under two branches of the same, and a knop under two branches of the same, according to the six branches that proceed out of the candlestick.

36 Their knops and their branches shall be of the same: all of it shall be one beaten work of pure gold.

37 And thou shalt make the seven lamps hereof: and they shall light<sup>9</sup> the lamps thereof, that they may give light over against it.<sup>1</sup>

38 And the tongs thereof, and the snuffdishes thereof, shall be of pure gold.

39 Of a talent of pure gold shall he make it, with all these vessels.

40 And look that thou make them after their pattern, which was showed thee<sup>2</sup> in the mount.

1 The ten curtains of the tabernacle. 7 The eleven curtains of goats' hair. 14 The covering of rams' skins. 15 The boards of the tabernacle, with their sockets and bars. 31 The veil for the ark. 36 The hanging for the door.

MOREOVER, thou shalt make the tabernacle with ten curtains of fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet: with cherubims<sup>6</sup> of cunning work<sup>3</sup> shalt thou make them.

2 The length of one curtain shall be eight and twenty cubits, and the breadth of one curtain four cubits: and every one of the curtains shall have one measure.

3 The five curtains shall be coupled together one to another; and other five curtains shall be coupled one to another.

4 And thou shalt make loops of blue upon the edge of the one curtain, from the selvedge in the coupling; and likewise shalt thou make

8 The candlestick, or rather lamp-bearing, consisted of one upright shaft, with six branches, each adorned with flowers, supposed to resemble lilies; with large knops, supposed to resemble pomegranates, and smaller ones resembling an almond.

Upon the top of the shaft and extremities of the branches were seven lamps, fed with pure olive-oil, and lighted every evening by the priests in their courses. It was situated in the holy place, and gave light to the altar of incense and table of show-bread, which stood in the same apartment. The candlestick, with its upturnances, is the emblem of the church of Christ, Mat. 5. 14-16. All, even to the tongs and snuffdishes, is pure gold—the most precious metal of exchange, use, or ornament. Believers of every rank and office must be pure, Mat. 5. 8; being renewed, Ep. 4. 23. 24; cleansed, 1 Co. 6. 11; and enriched, as with gold, for they buy it, 1 Co. 3. 15; which buying, according to Is. 55. 1, is without money and without price—the gift of free and loving grace, which faith appropriates on the authority of God, while their light shines before men, who, seeing their good works, glorify their Father who is in heaven, Mat. 5. 16.—C.

9 Why there should have been four coverings does not appear. They might have been designed partly for ornament, and partly to keep off dust and dirt, and the extremely fine sand, which, in the desert, rises as it were on every breeze; and partly to keep off the intense heat of the sun, which would otherwise have destroyed the poles, bars, &c.—J.

1 In the coverings of the tents the Orientals regard both the stuff and the colour; this royal tent was to be distinguished in both particulars. The curtain which lay under the beams was the most beautiful and the most costly.

On the finest linen stuff were embroidered cherubims of dark blue, purple, and scarlet. Over the under curtain a covering of goats' hair was spread, and to prevent the covering from injury by the dust, two others made of skins were laid over it.

The whole represents the person and doctrine of Christ, his true church, and all heavenly things, which are outwardly, and to the carnal eye, mean; but inwardly, and in the sight of God, exceedingly glorious and precious. The secure protection which he prepares for those who are precious in his sight, may also be denoted, and the unity of the whole, formed of so many pieces, and of such different materials, into one covering of the sanctuary, represents the spiritual temple, formed of persons of different nations, dispositions, abilities, and attainments, compacted together by the Spirit of love. in the uttermost edge of another curtain, in the coupling of the second.

5 Fifty loops shalt thou make in the one curtain, and fifty loops shalt thou make in the edge of the curtain that is in the coupling of the second, that the loops may take hold one of another.

6 And thou shalt make fifty taches of gold, and couple the curtains together with the taches: and it shall be one tabernacle.

7 ¶ And thou shalt make curtains of goats' hair,<sup>5</sup> to be a covering upon the tabernacle; eleven curtains shalt thou make.

8 The length of one curtain shall be thirty cubits, and the breadth of one curtain four cubits: and the eleven curtains shall be all of one measure.

9 And thou shalt couple five curtains by themselves, and six curtains by themselves, and shalt double the sixth curtain in the forefront of the tabernacle.

10 And thou shalt make fifty loops on the edge of the one curtain that is outmost in the coupling, and fifty loops in the edge of the curtain which coupleth the second.

11 And thou shalt make fifty taches of brass, and put the taches into the loops, and couple the tent together, that it may be one.

12 And the remnant that remaineth of the curtains of the tent, the half-curtain that remaineth, shall hang over the backside of the tabernacle.

13 And a cubit on the one side, and a cubit on the other side, of that which remaineth in the length of the curtains of the tent, it shall hang over the sides of the tabernacle on this side and on that side, to cover it.

14 ¶ And thou shalt make a covering for the tent of rams' skins dyed red, and a covering above of badgers' skins.<sup>1</sup>

15 ¶ And thou shalt make boards for the tabernacle of shittim-wood, standing up.

16 Ten cubits shall be the length of a board, and a cubit and a half shall be the breadth of one board.

17 Two tenons shall there be in one board, set in order one against another: thus shalt thou make for all the boards of the tabernacle.

18 And thou shalt make the boards for the tabernacle, twenty boards on the south side southward.

19 And thou shalt make forty sockets of REFLECTIONS.—Since, in deep compassion to human poverty, JEHOVAH hath freely taken upon himself the immensity of the work of redemption; the infinite duty of raising up a Saviour, erecting a church, and preparing a new life and a heavenly state, as means of his residence amongst us;—since he has made Jesus an ARK for holding and fulfilling his law; a propitiatory or MERCY-SEAT, whence, to the everlasting astonishment of angels and men, and by their ministration, he may declare his oracles, promises, and laws; a TABLE to feed his people, and on which the tribes of the redeemed are, in their successive generations, safely and honourably to come before God; and a LIGHT to his church, by his word and Spirit;—may I, may thousands more, be the willing members of his church! Let us surrender ourselves, and all that we have, whether more or less valuable, to the service of Christ! Following with care the prescriptions of Heaven, let us come boldly to the throne of his grace, and commune with our God! Let us feast from day to day, especially from one Sabbath to another, upon Jesus, the bread indeed—Jesus, the finest of the wheat; that we may be to God a sweet savour of Christ! And even in this earthly tabernacle and militant church let us walk in the light of the Lord; so shall we shine as lights in the world, holding forth the word of life!

CHAPTER XXVI. REFLECTIONS.—How graciously God suits the tokens of his favour to our circumstances, as he formed a movable residence and furniture for himself to the wandering condition of believing people. But herein may I contemplate Jesus; mean and debased in the view of carnal beholders, but

20 And for the second side of the tabernacle, on the north side, there shall be twenty boards,

21 And their forty sockets of silver: two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board.

22 And for the sides of the tabernacle westward thou shalt make six boards.

23 And two boards shalt thou make for the corners of the tabernacle in the two sides.

24 And they shall be coupled together beneath, and they shall be coupled together above the head of it unto one ring: thus shall it be for them both; they shall be for the two corners.

25 And they shall be eight boards, and their sockets of silver, sixteen sockets: two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board.

26 ¶ And thou shalt make bars of shittim-wood; five for the boards of the one side of the tabernacle, 27 And five bars for the boards of the other side of the tabernacle, and five bars for the boards of the side of the tabernacle, for the two sides westward.

28 And the middle bar in the midst of the boards shall reach from end to end.

29 And thou shalt overlay the boards with gold, and make their rings of gold for places for the bars: and thou shalt overlay the bars with gold.

30 And thou shalt rear up the tabernacle, according to the fashion thereof which was showed thee in the mount.

31 ¶ And thou shalt make a vail of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen, of cunning work: with cherubims shall it be made;

32 And thou shalt hang it upon four pillars of shittim-wood overlaid with gold: their hooks shall be of gold upon the four sockets of silver.

33 And thou shalt hang up the vail under the taches, that thou mayest bring in thither within the vail the ark of the testimony: and the vail shall divide unto you between the holy place and the most holy.

34 And thou shalt put the mercy-seat upon the ark of the testimony in the most holy place.

35 And thou shalt set the table without the vail, and the candlestick over against the table, other type of Christ.

1. It was one, so wehave but one sacrifice. 2. It had four horns, to which the victims were bound, denoting that the 36 ¶ And thou shalt make an hanging for the door of the tent of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen, wrought with needle-work.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 The altar of burnt-offering, with the vessels thereof. 9 The court of the tabernacle inclosed with hangings and pillars. 18 The measure of the court. 20 The oil for the lamp.

AND thou shalt make an altar of shittim-wood, five cubits long,<sup>1</sup> and five cubits broad; the altar shall be four-square: and the height thereof shall be three cubits.

2 And thou shalt make the horns of it upon the four corners thereof; his horns shall be of the same:<sup>2</sup> and thou shalt overlay it with brass.

3 And thou shalt make his pans to receive his ashes, and his shovels, and his basons, and his flesh-hooks, and his fire-pans: all the vessels thereof thou shalt make of brass.

4 And thou shalt make for it a grate of net-work of brass; and upon the net shalt thou make four brazen rings in the four corners thereof.

5 And thou shalt put it under the compass of the altar beneath, that the net may be even to the midst of the altar.

6 And thou shalt make staves for the altar, staves of shittim-wood, and overlay them with brass.

7 And the staves shall be put into the rings, and the staves shall be upon the two sides of the altar, to bear it.

8 Hollow with boards shalt thou make it: as it was showed<sup>3</sup> thee in the mount, so shall they make it.

9 ¶ And thou shalt make the court of the tabernacle: for the south side southward there shall be hangings for the court of fine twined linen, of an hundred cubits<sup>4</sup> long, for one side.

10 And the twenty pillars thereof, and their twenty sockets, shall be of brass: the hooks of the pillars and their fillets shall be of silver.

11 And likewise for the north side in length there shall be hangings of an hundred cubits long, and his twenty pillars, and their twenty sockets of brass: the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver.

inwardly decked with all the golden glories of Godhead and the pure graces of manhood! I see how everything about him, as Mediator, is founded and fixed in, erected and joined together, according to the love and by the infinite wisdom and power of God. Let me behold, likewise, the Christian church, outwardly despicable in the view of a carnal world, but inwardly decked, established, and knit together by every precious ordinance, spiritual grace, faithful minister, or true saint! Let my entrance into her be by Jesus Christ, the door, the way, the truth, and the life: and amidst all my outward infirmities, let me be all-glorious within, a meet habitation of God through the Spirit! Thus shall I have access with boldness, by the blood of Jesus, into the sanctuary of fellowship with God on earth, and in due time into the heavenly state, the holiest of all.

CHAPTER XXVII. REFLECTIONS.—Since

I have the once debased the all-atoning, all-perfect, powerful, and all-accessible Jesus for my altar;—since I have his church and ordinances for a court and place of worship, divinely bounded and protected;—the oracles, gifts, and graces of his Spirit, for my all-illuminating oil;—let me, conscious of crimes unnumbered, flee to him as my refuge, and by faith lay hold on his horns of saving power and authority. Let me give up myself, and all that I have, to God through him; that

MUMMIES OF PRIESTS—THE BODIES OF PRIESTS EMBALMED BEFORE AARON AND HIS SONS WERE APPOINTED TO THE PRIESTHOOD IN ISRAEL. [EXODUS, xxviii: 1.] — "And take thou unto thee Aaron thy brother, and his sons with him, from among the children of Israel, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office." The difference between the functions of the priests in Egypt and the priests in Israel were as great as the difference between the Apis Bull, the god of the Egyptians, and the Holy Law of God. The priests of Egypt had a work to do which kept the people degraded.

The priests of Israel performed a work that gradually elevated and ennobled the people. The view we give above is a picture taken in the Gizeh Museum. By the special request of E. Brugsch Bey, the doors of this book-case-like framework in which the priests were placed one upon another were opened so that our artist had the opportunity of direct access to the priests by his camera. There were a great many in the same room, of which the above picture gives us a fair sample. They are well preserved mummies, and illustrate for us how thoroughly the ancient Egyptians understood the art of embalming.

INTERIOR LATIN CHURCH OF ANNUNCIATION, NAZARETH—STANDING OVER THE SITE OF THE HOME OF JOSEPH AND MARY IN WHICH CHRIST GREW UP. [EXODUS, xxviii: 36.]—"And thou shalt make a plate of pure gold, and grave upon it, like the engravings of a signet, HOLINESS TO THE LORD." All the rites and ceremonies, and types and shadows, and burnt offerings and sin offerings and peace offerings that were used by divine appointment among the children of Israel tended to teach two great truths: first, that the Lord God is holy, and second, that he demands holiness on the part of his people. For two thousand years God was preparing the children of Israel through the appointments of the Jewish church for the coming of His own Son. The Church of the Annunciation in Nazareth stands as a memorial of what the angel said to Mary: "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee, and therefore, also, that Holy Thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." This church is situated within the walls of the Latin monastery in Nazareth and is generally the first place visited by travelers to this city of our Savior's boyhood.

20 And the fourth row a beryl, and an onyx, and a jasper; they shall be set in gold in their enclosings.<sup>4</sup>

22 And<sup>a</sup> thou shalt make upon the breastplate chains at the ends of wreathen work of pure gold.

23 And thou shalt make upon the breastplate two rings of gold, and shalt put the two rings on the two ends of the breastplate.

24 And thou shalt put the two wreathen chains of gold in the two rings which are on the ends of the breastplate.

25 And the other two ends of the two wreathen chains thou shalt fasten<sup>5</sup> in the two ouches, and put them on the shoulder-pieces of the ephod before it.

26 And thou shalt make two rings of gold, and thou shalt put them upon the two ends of the breastplate, in the border thereof, which is in the side of the ephod inward.

27 And two other rings of gold thou shalt make, and shalt put them on the two sides of the ephod underneath, toward the fore-part thereof, over against the other coupling thereof, above the curious girdle of the ephod.

28 And they shall bind the breastplate by the rings thereof unto the rings of the ephod with a lace of blue, that it may be above the curious girdle of the ephod, and that the breastplate be not loosed from the ephod.

29 And Aaron shall <sup>bear</sup> the names of the childrer of Israel in the breastplate of judgment upon his heart, when he goeth in unto the holy place, for a memorial before the LORD continually.<sup>6</sup>

30 ¶ And thou shalt put in the breastplate of judgment the <sup>Urim</sup> and the Thummin; and they shall be upon Aaron's heart when he goeth in before the LORD: and Aaron shall bear the judgment of the children of Israel upon his heart before the LORD continually.

31 ¶ And thou shalt make <sup>the</sup> robe of the ephod all of blue.

32 And there shall be an hole in the top of it, in the midst thereof: it shall have a binding of woven work round about the hole of it, as it were the hole of an habergeon, that it be <sup>not</sup> rent.<sup>7</sup>

33 And beneath upon the hem<sup>8</sup> of it, thou shalt make <sup>pomegranates</sup> of blue, and of purple,

6 The breastplate of judgment was so called, because the high-priest wore it whenever he consulted the Lord about the concerns of religion and government in order to deliver the judgment of God to the rulers in the congregation. It was a piece of fine linen cloth, woven, dyed, and embroidered, like the golden ephod, and being doubled it was a span square. Upon it were fixed twelve precious stones, set in ouches, or sockets, of gold; and on each of them was engraven the name of one of the sons of Israel; these being considered as the representatives of the twelve tribes. It is doubted whether the name of Levi was engraven, as that tribe might be sufficiently represented by the high-priest himself, or whether Manasseh and Ephraim had each a separate stone as forming two tribes; but the text seems to imply that the names of all Jacob's sons were engraven and no other.—Scott.

And, though in all things he must have the pre-eminence, let me, and all his children, be arrayed in our priestly robes of righteousness imparted, grace implanted, and of a holy conversation; and let me ever remember that it is death, eternal death, to all, but chiefly to ministers, if they attempt to serve God without putting on the Lord Jesus, as made of God to them righteousness, sanctification, and redemption.

CHAPTER XXIX. Ver. 1. Their oblations signified that they and their services should be holy, gracious, and excellent. Their washing signified justification and regeneration by the blood and Spirit of Christ.—[The priest's office. In this case also, Aaron and his sons were to lay their hands on the head of the victim, to denote that their guilt was transferred to it. f This remarkable ceremony appears to have been intended to indicate the complete dedication of the priests to the service of the Lord, and their complete purification by blood. The ears, organs of hearing, were representatives of the mental powers; the hands and feet, instruments of acting, represented the life and walk.—P.

16 And thou shalt slay the ram, and thou shalt take his blood, and sprinkle it round about upon the altar.

17 And thou shalt cut the ram in pieces, and wash the inwards of him and his legs, and put them unto his pieces, and unto his head.

18 And thou shalt burn the whole ram upon the altar: it is a burnt-offering unto the LORD: it is a sweet savour, an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

19 And thou shalt take the other ram; and Aaron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the ram.

20 Then shalt thou kill the ram, and take of his blood, and put it upon the tip of the right ear of Aaron, and upon the tip of the right ear of his sons, and upon the thumb of their right hand, and upon the great toe of their right foot, and sprinkle the blood upon the altar round about.

21 And thou shalt take of the blood that is upon the altar, and of the anointing oil, and sprinkle it upon Aaron, and upon his garments, and upon his sons, and upon the garments of his sons with him: and he shall be hallowed, and his garments, and his sons, and his sons' garments with him.

22 Also thou shalt take of the ram the fat, and the rump, and the fat that covereth the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and the right shoulder; for it is a ram of consecration;

23 And one loaf of bread, and one cake of oil bread, and one wafer out of the basket of the unleavened bread that is before the LORD:

of life to God. (2) In the three forms of bread the surrender of the means of life. (3) In the consecration, we may remark the washing of Aaron and his sons. In this we have set forth, in emblem, the introduction of believers, 'by the washing of regeneration,' and renewing of the Holy Ghost, Tit. 3. 5; in the clothing we have their justification by 'the righteousness which is of God through faith,' Phi. 3. 9; in the crowning we have that honour to which the Father raises all who serve the Son, Jn. 12. 26; in the anointing we have that outpouring of the Spirit by which believers are endowed, instructed, and qualified for the holy offices and duties to which they are called, 1 Jn. 2. 20, 27; while in the girding of the garments we have that firm determination with which true believers maintain their principles and protect their graces. Farther, in the laying of their hands on the head of the sacrifice, Le. 16. 23, we have Christ confessing, not his own sins (for he knew no sin), but our sins which he bore, 1 Pe. 12. 24; and we have believers repeating daily in the Lord's prayer, 'forgive us our trespasses.' In the killing of the sacrifices we have the mortification of sin as an indweller, and the death to sin as a ruler, Ro. 8. 13; 6. 18. In the commencement of the sacrifice with the inwards, especially with the fat, as the emblem of abundance, health, ease, we have that purification as by fire of the inner man, which God specially desires, Ps. 51. 6, while in the final and total burning of the outwards, and more worthless inwards, we have the final and total deliverance of believers from the body of sin and death, Ro. 7. 24, 25. The ear of Aaron and his sons was first touched with the blood, for 'faith cometh by hearing,' and nothing to a sinner is worth the hearing but the 'blood that cleanseth from all sin,' 1 Jn. 1. 7. The thumb, the chief instrument of holding, and the thumb of the right hand, as the emblem of active power, was next touched; then the great toe of the right foot, the chief supporter of speedy and equable movement in walking or running, the Spirit signifying the need of pardon to the active powers of the whole man. Next the blood was sprinkled round about the altar, to remind believers of the sinfulness of their holy things. Finally the blood, the emblem of redemption; the oil, the emblem of the Spirit, were conjointly sprinkled upon Aaron and his sons, and their garments, thus reminding us that it is the Spirit that 'applies to us the redemption purchased by Christ, provoking faith and thereby uniting us to Christ in our spiritual life.' Aaron and his sons thus consecrated, appear to give a wave-offering, which moved by their hands, as a branch moves in every wind, and to every quarter of the earth, acknowledged the Lord, who, 'as far as the east is from the west, removes our transgressions,' Ps. 103. 12. He likewise offered a heave-offering; that is, heaving upwards the sacrifice, as an emblematic address to 'our Father who is in heaven,' and 'who, as the heaven is high above the earth, hath love so great to them that fear him,' Ps. 103. 11. The high-priest's garments were hereditary, ver. 28, so is the righteousness of God, upon the High-priest of our profession, Christ Jesus, He. 3. 1, 'unto all and upon all that do believe,' Ro. 3. 22. Aaron and his sons did eat in the holy place; even so, 'whether we eat or drink, or whatsoever we do, (should be) all to the glory of God,' 1 Co. 10. 3. They were consecrated seven days, which represent all time; one week being a repetition of another, and denote the perpetual service which the eternal One requires. C.]

Ver. 7. The common priests were, at least at first, anointed by sprinkling; but the high-priest had oil poured out plentifully upon his head, Ps. 133. 3.

Ver. 12. The brazen altar was thus solemnly sanctified, that it might sanctify the offerings of the people.

Ver. 19. This was a kind of peace-offering, to thank God for calling them to the office, and to solicit his assistance in the discharge of it.

REFLECTIONS.—Through these dark shadows of good things to come, these washings, arrayings, oblations, and unctions, I look to Jesus and his ransomed offspring. I see his solemn call to his work, and theirs to their station. The infinite purity of his Godhead, the perfect holiness of his manhood, the complete humanity which he assumed; the extensive office which he undertook; the humble obedience which he fulfilled; the unbounded influences of the Holy Ghost which he received—fully qualified him to offer himself in his death, and to make continual intercession for us.

25 And thou shalt receive them of their hands, and burn them upon the altar for a burnt-offering, for a sweet savour before the LORD; it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

26 And thou shalt take the breast of the ram of Aaron's consecration, and wave it for a wave-offering before the LORD: and it shall be thy part.

27 And thou shalt sanctify the breast of the wave-offering, and the shoulder of the heave-offering which is waved, and which is heaved up, of the ram of the consecration, even of that which is for Aaron, and of that which is for his sons.

28 And<sup>b</sup> it shall be Aaron's and his sons' by a statute for ever from the children of Israel; for it is an heave-offering: and it shall be an heave-offering from the children of Israel of the sacrifice of their peace-offerings, even their heave-offering unto the LORD.

29 And the holy garments of Aaron shall be his son's after him, to be anointed therein, and to be consecrated in them.

30 And that son<sup>c</sup> that is priest in his stead shall put them on seven days,<sup>d</sup> when he cometh into the tabernacle of the congregation, to minister in the holy place.

31 And thou<sup>e</sup> shalt take the ram of the consecration, and seethe his flesh in the holy place.<sup>f</sup>

32 And Aaron and his sons shall eat the flesh of the ram, and the bread that is in the basket, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

33 And they shall eat those things where-with the atonement was made, to consecrate and to sanctify them: but a stranger shall not eat thereof, because they are holy.

34 And if ought of the flesh of the consecrations, or of the bread, remain unto the morning, then thou shalt burn the remainder with fire: it shall not be eaten, because it is holy.

35 And thus shalt thou do unto Aaron, and to his sons, according to all things which I have commanded thee: seven days shalt thou consecrate them.

36 And thou shalt offer every day<sup>g</sup> a bullock for a sin-offering for atonement: and thou shalt cleanse the altar, when thou hast made an atonement for it, and thou shalt anoint it, to sanctify it.

37 Seven days thou shalt make an atonement for the altar, and sanctify it; and it shall be an

9 The number seven is what is called among the Hebrews a number of perfection; and it is often used to denote the completion, accomplishment, fullness, or perfection of a thing, as this period contained the whole course of that time in which God created the world, and appointed the day of rest. As this act of consecration lasted seven days, it signified a perfect consecration; and intimated to the priest that his whole body and soul, his time and talents, should be devoted to the service of God and his people.—Clarke.

3 And thou shalt overlay it with pure gold, the top<sup>2</sup> thereof, and the sides<sup>3</sup> thereof round about, and the horns thereof: and thou shalt make unto it a crown of gold round about.

4 And two golden rings shalt thou make to it under the crown of it, by the two corners thereof; upon the two sides of it shalt thou Promised before the foundation of the world, promised and typified at the fall, and manifested in the evening and end of the world, to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself, he is the daily, the continued salvation, provision, and comfort of our souls; and as reconciled in him, God dwells with and blesses us with all spiritual blessings.—Let none then approach to the sacred ministry without being washed in Jesus' blood, regenerated by his Spirit, endowed with his gifts and graces, and, at the same time, using due care and deliberation to prepare for their awful work. In the exercise of that ministry, let them daily exhibit Jesus as the atonement, food, and consolation of sinners; so shall God be present in his ordinances and bless the attenders.—Let every Christian likewise, as a redeemed priest unto God, always improve Jesus, as made of God unto him wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption; that being purged in his atoning blood, clothed with his blessed righteousness, and endowed with his Spirit, he may daily live by faith on the Son of God, and offer up the spiritual sacrifices of prayer, praise, and good works; nay, his whole self, as acceptable to God through him; and let him constantly hold fellowship with a sanctifying God as his God, and his ALL IN ALL.

CHAPTER XXX. [Ver. 6. The altar of incense thus stood directly in front of the priest as he entered the tabernacle, between him and the veil which covered the mercy-seat in the holy of holies. In offering incense the face of the priest was necessarily directed toward the mercy-seat, though he could not see the glory of God which rested there. This indicates that

HALL OF GODS, MUSEUM, CAIRO—ILLUSTRATING THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE GODS THE EGYPTIANS WORSHIPED AND THE ONE GOD THE ISRAELITES WORSHIPED. [Exodus, xxx:10.]—"And Aaron shall make an atonement upon the horns of it once in a year with the blood of the sin offering of atonement: once in the year shall he make atonement upon it, throughout your generations; it is most holy unto the Lord." We give another illustration of a view taken in the Hall of the Gods in the Egyptain Museum, which enables us to see again what a vast contrast there was between the gods of wood and stone worshiped by the Egyptians and the God of the whole earth worshiped by the Israelites. The horns of the altar upon which Aaron was to make an atonement were by the ark of the testimony, directly in front of the mercy seat and very close to the Divine presence. The truth taught by this was that prayer brings us into the presence of God. The heart, instead of being fixed upon idols of stone, is to be drawn upward and fixed in worship and adoration upon its Creator and Redeemer.

The incense and perfume.

34 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Take unto thee sweet spices, stacte, and onycha, and galbanum; these sweet spices, with pure frankincense; of each shall there be a like weight.

35 And thou shalt make it a perfume, a confection after the art of the apothecary, tempered together, pure and holy.

36 And thou shalt beat some of it very small, and put of it before the testimony in the tabernacle of the congregation, where I will meet with thee: it shall be unto you most holy.

37 And as for the perfume which thou shalt make, ye shall not make to yourselves according to the composition thereof: it shall be unto thee holy for the LORD.

38 Whosoever shall make like unto that, to smell thereto, shall even be cut off from his people.

CHAPTER XXXI.

1 Bezaleel and Aholiab are called, and qualified for the work of the tabernacle. 12 The observation of the sabbath is again commanded. 18 Moses receiveth the two tables.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 See, I have called by name Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah;

3 And I have filled him with the spirit of God, in wisdom, and in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship,

4 To devise cunning works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass,

5 And in cutting of stones to set them, and in carving of timber, to work in all manner of workmanship.

6 And I, behold, I have given with him Aholiab the son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan; and in the hearts of all that are wise-hearted I have put wisdom, that they may make all that I have commanded thee;

7 The tabernacle of the congregation, and the ark of the testimony, and the mercy-seat that is thereupon, and all the furniture of the tabernacle,

8 And the table and his furniture, and the pure candlestick with all his furniture, and the altar of incense;

9 And the altar of burnt-offering with all his furniture; and the laver and his foot;

cacy, since he presents his infinite merits before God, answerable to the circumstances of every man who believes in Christ! Let all the Israel of God rest and rejoice in him as the one dying to save from sin, while we daily wash in the fountain of his blood and Spirit, till we be without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing: and let the genuine Spirit and grace of Christ dwell in us, and not the counterfeit appearance; for dreadful is the hazard of turning his grace into licentiousness, pretending the possession of the Spirit, or counterfeiting the work of God!

CHAPTER XXXI. Ver. 15. Notwithstanding the work of the tabernacle was holy, and to be speedily and diligently done, yet nothing of it must be done on the Sabbath-day. The Sabbath was a sign of God's acknowledging them for his people; and their observation of it was a sign of their acknowledging him for their God, Creator, Redeemer, and Sanctifier.

Ver. 18. The stony matter of these tables marked the perpetual obligation of the moral law and the hardness of men's hearts, in which the Spirit of God alone can write it.

REFLECTIONS.—Nothing, even of natural excellency, but cometh from God. How easily and completely he can furnish his instruments for whatever service he calls them to; and therefore with courage and comfort may such as have once his call, venture on the hardest work! But commonly we may observe, for the honour of Christ, who needed no assistant, and especially for the comfort of his servants, God sends forth his noted agents by twos! Great is the danger of Sabbath-profanation: and yet how many are men disposed to it, especially if they can pretend the sacred-Observance of the Sabbath.

10 And the clothes of service, and the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and the garments of his sons, to minister in the priest's office;

11 And the anointing oil, and sweet incense for the holy place: according to all that I have commanded thee shall they do.

12 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

13 Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, Verily my sabbaths ye shall keep: for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the LORD that doth sanctify you.

14 Ye shall keep the sabbath therefore; for it is holy unto you. Every one that defileth it shall surely be put to death: for whosoever doeth any work therein, that soul shall be cut off from among his people.

15 Six days may work be done; but in the seventh is the sabbath of rest, holy to the LORD: whosoever doeth any work in the sabbath-day, he shall surely be put to death.

16 Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the sabbath, to observe the sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual covenant.

17 It is a sign between me and the children of Israel for ever: for in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested, and was refreshed.

18 ¶ And he gave unto Moses, when he had made an end of communing with him upon mount Sinai, two tables of testimony, tables of stone, written with the finger of God.

CHAPTER XXXII.

1 The people, in the absence of Moses, cause Aaron to make a calf. 7 God is angered thereby. 11 At the entreaty of Moses he is appeased. 15 Moses cometh down with the tables. 19 He breaketh them. 20 He destroyeth the calf. 21 Aaron's excuse for himself. 25 Moses causeth the idolaters to be slain. 30 He prayeth for the people.

AND when the people saw that Moses delayed to come down out of the mount, the people gathered themselves together unto Aaron, and said unto him, Up, make us gods which shall go before us; for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him.

2 And Aaron said unto them, Break off the golden ear-rings which are in the ears of your wives, of your sons, and of your daughters, and bring them unto me.

ness or the necessity of their work as an excuse! What exalted account God makes of Jesus Christ and his church. He, who spent but six days in creating a world, spends forty in prescribing a typical representation of those. But the most remarkable visits of God to men upon earth quickly come to an end; though he wisely frames everything about his ordinances so as that it may be instructive and comforting. In these typical architects I may therefore behold Jesus, called of God to finish a work of redemption, and rear up a gospel-church—Jesus, qualified of God, by the unmeasured unction of the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, to fulfil the arduous task, and actually completing his design, of his own heart and the salvation of the people.

THE STEP PYRAMID, SAKKARAH, NEAR MEMPHIS—IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD WHERE MOSES IS SUPPOSED TO HAVE GROWN UP.
[Exodus, xxxii:4].—"And he received them at their hand, and fashioned it with a graving tool, after he had made it a molten calf; and they said, These be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt." We have in this thirty-second chapter of Exodus the account of Aaron's molten calf, which was made of the earrings of the women of Israel while Moses delayed on the mount. The children of Israel got their idea of the worship of a calf from the Egyptians. The Serapeum, where the Apis Bulls were buried, is not far from the Step Pyramid, a picture of which we give above. The Step Pyramid is generally thought to have been built by the fourth king of the first dynasty. It is therefore regarded as older than the Pyramids of Gizeh. The door which led into it was inscribed with the name of a king called Ra-nub. The steps of the pyramid are six in number, and are respectively 38, 36, 34½, 32, 31 and 29½ feet in height.

8 And <sup>all</sup> the people brake off the golden ear-rings which were in their ears, and brought them unto Aaron.

4 And <sup>he</sup> received them at their hand; and fashioned it with a graving tool, after he had made it a molten calf: <sup>and</sup> they said, 'These be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.'<sup>8</sup>

5 And when Aaron saw it, <sup>he</sup> built an altar before it; and Aaron made proclamation, and said, 'To-morrow is a feast to the LORD.'<sup>9</sup>

6 And <sup>they</sup> rose up early on the morrow, and offered burnt-offerings, and brought peace-offerings; and the people sat down to eat and to drink, and rose up to play.

7 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, 'Go, get thee down; for thy people, which thou broughtest out of the land of Egypt, have corrupted themselves:'

8 They <sup>have</sup> turned aside quickly out of the way which I commanded them: they have made them a molten calf, and have worshipped it, and have sacrificed thereunto, and said, 'These be thy gods, O Israel, which have brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.'

9 And the LORD said unto Moses, 'I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiff-necked people:'

10 Now therefore <sup>let</sup> me alone, that my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them: and I will make of thee a great nation.

11 ¶ And <sup>Moses</sup> besought the LORD <sup>his</sup> God, and said, LORD, why doth thy wrath wax hot against thy people, which thou hast brought forth out of the land of Egypt with great power, and with a mighty hand?

12 Wherefore <sup>should</sup> the Egyptians speak, and say, For mischief did he bring them out, to slay them in the mountains, and to consume them from the face of the earth? Turn from thy fierce wrath, and <sup>repent</sup> of this evil against thy people.

13 Remember <sup>Abraham</sup>, Isaac, and Israel, thy servants, to whom thou swarest by thine own self, and saidst unto them, I will multiply your seed as the stars of heaven, <sup>and</sup> all this land that I have spoken of will I give unto your seed, and they shall inherit it for ever.

14 And the LORD <sup>repented</sup> of the evil which he thought to do unto his people.<sup>2</sup>

Am. 5, 4-5.

7 The calf was intended not as a deity, but as a representation of JEHOVAH.

8 The Israelites did not intend to break the first commandment. They still believed in, and sought to worship, Jehovah.

But they had been long taught to look for a visible manifestation of God—some person or thing embodying, or supposed to embody, his glory and power. Moses was such to them hitherto. He was gone. They desired something in his place. The Hebrew

word translated

'gods' in the first and fourth verses is

'Elohim', the usual

name of 'God', and was used by the Israelites in that sense.

Their meaning was,

'Make us God' &amp;c.

something which will represent and embody God. And

Aaron said, 'This is thy God, O Israel, which brought thee up, &amp;c. it is intended to represent him. This was a flagrant breach of the second commandment, though not of the first.—P.

15 ¶ And Moses turned, and <sup>went</sup> down from the mount, and the two tables of <sup>the</sup> testimony were in his hand: the tables were written on both their sides; on the one side and on the other were they written.

16 And the <sup>tables</sup> were the work of God, and the writing was the writing of God, graven upon the tables.

17 And when <sup>Joshua</sup> heard the noise of the people as they shouted, he said unto Moses, There is a noise of war in the camp.

18 And he said, It is not the voice of them that shout for mastery, neither is it the voice of them that cry for being overcome,<sup>3</sup> but the noise of them that sing do I hear.<sup>4</sup>

19 ¶ And it came to pass, as soon as he came nigh unto the camp, that <sup>he</sup> saw the calf, and the dancing; and Moses' <sup>anger</sup> waxed hot, and he cast the tables out of his hands, and brake them beneath the mount.<sup>5</sup>

20 And <sup>he</sup> took the calf which they had made, and burnt it in the fire,<sup>6</sup> and ground it to powder, and strewed it upon the water, and made the children of Israel drink of it.

21 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron, What did this people unto thee, that thou hast brought so great a sin upon them?

22 And Aaron said, Let not the anger of my lord wax hot: thou knowest the people, that they <sup>are</sup> set on mischief.

23 For <sup>they</sup> said unto me, Make us gods, which shall go before us: for <sup>as</sup> for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him.

24 And I said unto them, Whosoever hath any gold, let them break it off. So they gave it me: then I cast it into the fire, and <sup>there</sup> came out this calf.<sup>7</sup>

25 ¶ And when Moses saw that the people were <sup>naked</sup>, (for Aaron had made them naked unto <sup>their</sup> 'shame among their' enemies),<sup>9</sup>

26 Then Moses stood in the gate of the camp, and said, <sup>Who</sup> is on the LORD's side? let him come unto me. And <sup>all</sup> the sons of Levi gathered themselves together unto him.

27 And he said unto them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Put every man his sword by his side, <sup>and</sup> go in and out from gate to gate throughout the camp, and slay every man <sup>his</sup> brother, and every man his companion, and every man his neighbour.

fies stubborn and disobedient, like unruly or unbroken bullocks, that will not submit their neck to the yoke.

Ver. 19. Moses brake the tables, not in rage, but in holy zeal, to mark that their sin might justly provoke God to give up his covenant-relation to them, and deprive them of his precious laws.

Ver. 25. They were deprived of their innocence, and of the favour and protection of their God, exposed to danger, and stained with the reproach of inconstancy among their enemies.

Ver. 29. This holy service, for the Lord's honour, prepared them for their sacred office.

Ver. 30. [Moses acted with extraordinary courage, determination, and wisdom. He divided the people into two sections—those who rebelled for Jehovah, and those who persevered in rebellion. Among the latter he sent the armed Levites with orders to kill, not all absolutely, but all the ringleaders, and all who would not submit to God's authority. They were to spare neither friend nor relative. P.]

Ver. 32. God hath his book of unfailing remembrance, Re. 20, 12; his book of special providential care and regard, Ps. 56, 8; 139, 16; 69, 28; 87, 6; and his book of all who believe to everlasting life, Da. 12, 1;

Lu. 10, 20; Phi. 4, 3; Re. 3, 5; 13, 8; 20, 12. Moses does not here wish that he might be reprobated, accursed, or damned, rather than his people should perish; but refuses to survive them, or to have his seed raised up in their stead.

REFLECTIONS.—It is highly necessary that magistrates and ministers should attend to their charges closely, lest their absence occasion mischief: for those who reckon God's counsels slow, readily rush headlong into ruin by their own; and most men are much readier to serve the devil than God, and to sacrifice one lust, pride itself not excepted, for the promotion of another

START OF THE PROCESSION OF THE FESTIVAL OF THE MAH'MAL.
[Exodus, xxxii:23, 24.]—We see in the 23d and 24th verses of the 32d chapter of Exodus how the children of Israel had imbibed the ideas of idolatry in vogue among the Egyptians. In the view above we have a scene representing idolatry among the Egyptians of to-day. While the Mohammedans are said to worship the one God, yet they attach a sacredness and divine significance to things which make of them as complete idols as were held in adoration by their ancient ancestors.

This festival of the Mah'Mal is annually observed in Cairo. It is popularly called the procession of the Holy Carpet. It has reference to the pilgrimage that is made every year to Mecca by devout Mohammedans. The Mah'Mal is a litter made of wood in the form of a pyramid, in which the carpet is placed to be carried to Mecca. This carpet for the mosque at Mecca is manufactured in Constantinople and sent to Cairo at the expense of the Sultan.

28 And the children of Levi did according to the word of Moses: and there fell of the people that day about three thousand men.

29 For Moses had said, 'Consecrate' yourselves to-day to the LORD, even every man upon his son, and upon his brother; that he may bestow upon you a blessing this day.

30 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses said unto the people, Ye have sinned a great sin: and now I will go up unto the LORD; peradventure I shall make an atonement for your sin.

31 And Moses returned unto the LORD, and said, Oh this people have sinned a great sin, and have made them gods of gold!

32 Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin—; and if not, blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book which thou hast written.<sup>2</sup>

33 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Who-soever hath sinned against me, him will I blot out of my book.

34 Therefore now go, lead the people unto the place of which I have spoken unto thee. Behold, mine Angel shall go before thee: nevertheless, in the day when I visit, I will visit their sin upon them.

35 And the LORD plagued the people, because they made the calf, which Aaron made.<sup>3</sup>

CHAPTER XXXIII.

1 The Lord refuseth to go with the people. 4 The people mourn thereat. 7 The tabernacle is removed out of the camp. 9 The Lord talketh familiarly with Moses out of the cloudy pillar. 12 Moses desireth to see the glory of God.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, Depart, and go up hence, thou, and the people which thou hast brought up out of the land of Egypt, unto the land which I sware unto Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, saying, Unto thy seed will I give it;

2 And I will send an angel before thee; and I will drive out the Canaanite, the Amorite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite;

3 Unto a land flowing with milk and honey: for I will not go up in the midst of thee;<sup>4</sup> for thou art a stiff-necked people, lest I consume thee in the way.

4 ¶ And when the people heard these evil tidings, they mourned; and no man did put on him his ornaments.

unto the children of Israel, Ye are a stiff-necked people; I will come up into the midst of thee in a moment, and consume thee: therefore now put off thy ornaments<sup>5</sup> from thee, that I may know what to do unto thee.

6 And the children of Israel stripped themselves of their ornaments by the mount Horeb.

7 ¶ And Moses took the tabernacle, and pitched it without the camp, afar off from the camp, and called it, The Tabernacle of the congregation. And it came to pass, that every one which sought the LORD went out unto the tabernacle of the congregation, which was without the camp.<sup>6</sup>

8 And it came to pass, when Moses went out unto the tabernacle, that all the people rose up, and stood every man at his tent-door, and looked after Moses, until he was gone into the tabernacle.

9 ¶ And it came to pass, as Moses entered into the tabernacle, the cloudy pillar descended, and stood at the door of the tabernacle, and the LORD talked with Moses.

10 And all the people saw the cloudy pillar stand at the tabernacle-door; and all the people rose up and worshipped, every man in his tent-door.

11 And the LORD spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend. And he turned again into the camp; but his servant Joshua the son of Nun, a young man, departed not out of the tabernacle.

12 ¶ And Moses said unto the LORD, See, thou sayest unto me, Bring up this people; and thou hast not let me know whom thou wilt send with me: yet thou hast said, I know thee by name, and thou hast also found grace in my sight.

13 Now therefore, I pray thee, if I have found grace in thy sight, show me now thy way, that I may know thee, that I may find grace in thy sight; and consider that this nation is thy people.

14 And he said, My presence shall go with thee, and I will give thee rest.

still more sottish and absurd. Yea, even after the most solemn transactions with God, men quickly and fearfully stumble into sin; and the choicest saints are too apt to follow a multitude to do evil. But surely it is highly shameful when professed Christians imitate these idolaters in their mad revelling and mirth! All our wickedness is obvious and odious before God. And let professors of the true religion beware how they so corrupt themselves, lest God be ashamed to acknowledge them as his people! What a mercy is it for a guilty nation when they have powerful intercessors at the throne of grace! They have to do with a gracious God, who takes pleasure to repent himself of the evil. Holy zeal for God, when prudently manifested on proper occasions, is highly becoming: but backsliders in heart shall be filled with their own ways, and have their idols broken before their eyes. And O, what misery and shame do good men bring on nations by joining them in their wickedness! The best excuse which they can make for their conduct is pitiful and absurd; and therefore it deeply concerns all men, in an evil day, to know whether they be on the Lord's side or on that of his enemies. It is both necessary, honourable, and useful, to employ the strictest impartiality in the matters of God, and to use the most earnest intercessions with God to avert, even for a time, his exact justice from falling upon a nation which is ripened for destruction. And we have here the greatest encouragement to expect a gracious answer to our prayers.

CHAPTER XXXIII. Ver. 5. That I may try whether thou wilt repent of or persist in thy sin, and act towards thee accordingly.

Ver. 7. This tabernacle was a tent, erected by Moses for the worship of God till the appointed one should be finished; and the removal of it from the camp intimated the Lord's displeasure with them, and departure from them.

Ver. 9, 11. God's familiar talking with Moses was a public approbation of what he had done against the calf, and the worshippers thereof.

17 And the LORD said unto Moses, <sup>b</sup>I will do this thing also that thou hast spoken: for thou hast found grace in my sight, and I know thee by name.

18 ¶ And he said, I beseech thee, show me thy glory.

19 And he said, I will make all my goodness pass before thee, and I will proclaim the name of the LORD before thee; and will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will show mercy on whom I will show mercy.<sup>7</sup>

20 And he said, Thou canst not see my face; for there shall no man see me and live.

21 And the LORD said, Behold, there is a place by me, and thou shalt stand upon a rock:

23 And I will take away mine hand, and thou shalt see my back parts; but my face shall not be seen.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

1 The tables are renewed. 4 The name of the LORD proclaimed. 8 Moses entreatheth God to go with the people. 10 God maketh a covenant with them, repeating certain duties of the first table. 27 Moses after forty days in the mount cometh down with the tables. 29 His face shineth, and he covereth it with a vail.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first; and I will write upon these tables the words that were in the first tables, which thou brakest:

2 And be ready in the morning, and come up in the morning unto mount Sinai, and present thyself there to me in the top of the mount:

3 And no man shall come up with thee, neither let any man be seen throughout all the mount; neither let the flocks nor herds feed before that mount.<sup>8</sup>

4 ¶ And he hewed two tables of stone like unto the first: and Moses rose up early in the morning, and went up unto mount Sinai, as the LORD had commanded him, and took in his hand the two tables of stone.

5 And the LORD descended in the cloud, and stood with him there, and proclaimed the name of the LORD.<sup>9</sup>

f It does not mean that grace and mercy are more ordinary decisions, without reason, but that the moving causes not in the sinner, who is utterly unworthy, and guilty before him; but, in God, whose will is essentially gracious and merciful, who, indeed, worketh in all things after the counsel of his own will, Ep. 1. 11, yet ever worketh, and merely worketh, according to the good pleasure of his will, Ep. 1. 5.—C.

j The words 'the guilty' are an allusion to show they are not in the original, but are supplied by the translators. As they stand, they would seem to contradict Ro. 4. 5, where God is said to justify the ungodly. If we substitute the word impenitent, the difficulty is removed, and the meaning will be, that God, in the very overflowings of his grace, retains and exercises judgment against sin and sinners. So true is the expression 'a God all mercy is a God unmerciful.'—Note. Newman translates the passage 'But he will not let them go wholly unpunished.'—C.

mercy which had been so signally exhibited, and which required to be continued to Israel. 2. God's reply. He did not grant all that was asked. It could not be. Man's weak nature could not bear it. The manifestation of the full glory of God is incompatible with man's present condition. God did grant, however, all that it was possible for Moses to endure—his goodness passed before him. How this was done we know not. But there must have been some wondrous display of divine goodness, love, and mercy. May it not have been some clear insight, some glorious vision, of the atoning work of Him who is 'the brightness of God's glory, and the express image of his person?' P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Fearful is the danger and woe that attend apostasy from God, and the worshipping of

6 And the LORD passed by before him, and proclaimed, The LORD, The LORD God, merciful and gracious, long-suffering, and abundant in goodness and truth;

7 Keeping<sup>b</sup> mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity, and transgression, and sin, and that will by no means clear the guilty;<sup>1</sup> visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children's children, unto the third and to the fourth generation.

8 ¶ And Moses made haste, and bowed his head toward the earth, and worshipped.

9 And he said, If now I have found grace in thy sight, O LORD, let my Lord, I pray thee, go among us, (for it is a "stiff-necked people," and pardon our iniquity and our sin, and take us for thine inheritance.

10 ¶ And he said, Behold, I make a covenant; before all thy people I will do marvels, such as have not been done in all the earth, nor in any nation: and all the people among which thou art shall see the work of the LORD; for it is a terrible thing that I will do with thee.

11 Observe<sup>c</sup> thou that which I command thee this day; Behold, I drive out before thee the Amorite, and the Canaanite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, and the Hivite, and the Jebusite.

12 Take<sup>d</sup> heed to thyself, lest thou make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land whither thou goest, lest it be for a snare in the midst of thee.

13 But ye shall destroy their altars, break their images,<sup>2</sup> and cut down their groves.

14 For thou shalt worship no other god: for the LORD, whose name is Jealous, is a jealous God;

15 Lest<sup>e</sup> thou make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land, and they go a whoring after their gods, and do sacrifice unto their gods, and one call thee, and thou eat of his sacrifice;

16 And thou take of their daughters unto thy sons, and their daughters go a whoring after their gods, and make thy sons go a whoring after their gods.

17 Thou shalt make thee no molten gods.

18 ¶ The feast of unleavened bread shalt thou keep. Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, as I commanded thee, in the time of the idols in his room! His eye beholds the inward hardness and obstinacy of our hearts. And painful indeed are the convictions of an awakened conscience, when God displays his terrors and appears as an enemy! There is need of uncommon humiliation and prayer when God's wrath is once kindled against a people, and he has begun to remove his ordinances from them. But when a gracious God, and a multitude of groaning hearts, meet together at the throne of grace, it is a token of his merciful designs; for he is ready to return to his praying people, and indulge them with the most astonishing familiarity. Their desire of fellowship and boldness of faith increases in his presence: and he will not refuse them anything they ask, though it were to the whole of his kingdom. What blessing of direction, month Abib; for in the month Abib thou camest out from Egypt.

19 All<sup>a</sup> that openeth the matrix is mine; and every firstling among thy cattle, whether ox or sheep, that is male.

21 ¶ Six<sup>b</sup> days thou shalt work; but on the seventh day thou shalt rest: in eaving-time and in harvest thou shalt rest.<sup>2</sup>

22 ¶ And<sup>c</sup> thou shalt observe the feast of weeks, of the first-fruits of wheat-harvest, and the feast of in-gathering at the year's end.<sup>3</sup>

23 ¶ Thrice<sup>d</sup> in the year shall all your men-children appear before the LORD God, the God of Israel.

26 The<sup>p</sup> first of the first-fruits of thy land thou shalt bring unto the house of the LORD thy God. Thou<sup>a</sup> shalt not see the a kid in his mother's milk.<sup>5</sup>

27 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, <sup>e</sup>Write thou these words:<sup>6</sup> for <sup>e</sup>after the tenor of these words I have made a covenant with thee, and with Israel.

28 And<sup>d</sup> he was there with the LORD forty days and forty nights; he did neither eat bread nor drink water: and <sup>e</sup>He wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, the ten commandments.<sup>7</sup>

29 ¶ And it came to pass, when Moses came down from mount Sinai with the two tables of testimony in Moses' hand, (when he came down from the mount,) that Moses<sup>8</sup> wist not that presence, or spiritual manifestation, can he deny us, who have Jesus our advocate within the vail! Come then, my soul, be no more a trifler in prayer, but make intercession with groans which cannot be uttered. Whatever I ask, believing, for myself, or my family, or the church, God will give it. Let me, adoring the universality of his grace, press after clearer and clearer displays of his glory, his goodness, till at last I see him as he is! Awake, ye prayerless wasters of time!—Base and unprofitable are your fellowships with men, if compared to this of Moses with his God!

CHAPTER XXXIV. Ver. 1. Thus God left a mark of their rebellion on the tables in their not being <sup>e</sup>down by himself; yet nevertheless he made his law to retain the same force; and manifested, that it is not graciously inscribed in our hearts, till once they be hewn and broken by Moses' covenant form of it.

Ver. 7. It is a part of goodness to hate and punish evil.

Ver. 13. For privacy and solemnity, to prevent interruption, and perhaps in imitation of the patriarchs, the heathens planted groves, in which they worshipped their idols.

REFLECTIONS.—It is a great mercy to have God's law manifested to us; but especially written on our hearts, when hewn by convictions of sin; and the necessity of reconciliation with God, through Christ, discovered thereby. Ministers must labour to hew men's hearts: but it is only God who can write divine truths in them. The most ready and believing despatch is necessary in making up the breaches between God and our soul. But pleasant and transporting indeed are remarkable discoveries of the glory and grace of God! His new-covenant name is exactly suited to our sinful and destitute condition! Clear and distinct views thereof produce the boldest pleadings of faith at his throne of grace, and we cannot sufficiently admire that God should so often repeat his promises, warnings, and laws to us, who are so ignorant, heedless, and forgetful. How great is their safety who live in close fellowship with him! He takes pleasure to 31 And Moses <sup>a</sup>called unto them; and Aaron and all the rulers of the congregation returned unto him: and Moses talked with them.

32 And afterward all the children of Israel came nigh: and he <sup>a</sup>gave them in commandment all that the LORD had spoken with him in mount Sinai.

33 And till Moses had done speaking with them, he put <sup>a</sup>a vail on his face.<sup>9</sup>

34 But when Moses went in before the LORD, to speak with Him, he <sup>e</sup>took the vail off until he came out. And<sup>a</sup> he came out, and spake unto the children of Israel that which he was commanded.

35 And the children of Israel saw the face of Moses, that the skin of Moses' face shone; and Moses put <sup>e</sup>the vail upon his face again, until he went in to speak with Him.

<sup>ad</sup> The ignorance of Moses beautifully illustrates an important fact in religious experience, viz. that one believer sees more grace in another, than that other sees in himself. honour such as honour him; and clear views of the glory of God beget in his people the most glorious conformity to him, and elevate above all the fears or hopes of nature.—But it is very becoming when those who are most distinguished with gifts and graces are, through lowliness of mind, scarcely conscious of their own excellences! when others are more sensible of our spiritual beauty than we ourselves are! and when ministers, who have the deepest insight into divine things, accommodate their instructions to their people's capacity!—In the whole of this breach and reconciliation between God and Israel, let me behold how the law entered that the offence might abound: but where sin abounded, grace did much more abound; that, as sin had reigned unto death, grace might reign, through righteousness, unto eternal life, by Jesus Christ our Lord!

CHAPTER XXXV. REFLECTIONS.—As this and the following chapters generally relate no more but the execution of what was directed in chapters xxv.-

7 And rams' skins dyed red, and badgers' skins, and shittim-wood, 8 And oil for the light, and spices for anointing oil, and for the sweet incense, 9 And onyx-stones, and stones to be set for the ephod, and for the breastplate.
10 And every wise-hearted among you shall come, and make all that the LORD hath commanded;
11 The tabernacle, his tent, and his covering, his taches, and his boards, his bars, his pillars, and his sockets;
12 The ark, and the staves thereof, with the mercy-seat, and the vail of the covering;
13 The table, and his staves, and all his vessels, and the show-bread;

19 The clothes of service, to do service in the holy place; the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and the garments of his sons, to minister in the priest's office.
20 ¶ And all the congregation of the children of Israel departed from the presence of Moses.<sup>2</sup>
21 And they came, every one whose heart stirred him up, and every one whom his spirit made willing, and they brought the LORD's offering to the work of the tabernacle of the congregation, and for all his service, and for the holy garments.
22 And they came, both men and women, as many as were willing-hearted, and brought bracelets, and ear-rings, and rings, and tablets, all jewels of gold: and every man that offered, offered an offering of gold unto the LORD.
23 And every man with whom was found blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen, and goats' hair, and red skins of rams, and badgers' skins, brought them.
24 Every one that did offer an offering of silver and brass brought the LORD's offering:

1 As Moses, 'faithful in all his house,' omits nothing of all that God had shown him, even to a pin or a cord; so the true believer omits nothing of the 'outward and ordinary' means whereby Christ communicates the benefit of redemption.—Note. As the cords and the pins preserved the tabernacle from falling, so these outward things of religion preserve the believer in his steadfastness. How many neglect the regular reading of the Scriptures, stated prayer in the closet or family, how many absent themselves from the Lord's table, and think they are Christians! When tempted to these fatal neglects, let them remember Moses, who was 'faithful,' not in a part, but in 'all his house.'—C.

2 When Moses had delivered his message to the people, they departed to their tents, to fetch their several oblations; and on this occasion a peculiar influence was felt, enlarging their hearts to liberality. Nothing but ex-ving seem to have been given to make the golden calf; but various other golden ornaments were offered on this occasion, principally of the spoils of Egypt; both men and women being willing to part with their newly acquired adornments, to beautify the sanctuary of God. A rare example! But besides these articles of manufactured gold, some of the people presented such as was unwrought, and used as money; for this is thought to be meant by the words rendered, 'Every man that offered, offered an offering of gold unto the Lord.'—L.

But in Egypt, though enslaved, they still had flocks and herds, and from their produce and sale must have had money. They also had houses and furniture, the valuable metallic parts of which they would naturally carry off in their baggage. Then they obtained large donations from the Egyptians, and probably many spoils from the host of Pharaoh, all of which will sufficiently account for their means of such liberal contributions to the tabernacle.—C.

This curious work signified the marvelous gifts and graces of Christ and his church.

God can effect his work by any means, yet he usually chooses those bestowed by his own Spirit. Of this Moses and Paul are a striking proof; and, in the case before us, Bezaleel and Aholiab, by the divine tuition, were trained to execute all his pleasure. They may very properly be styled men of universal genius. They were complete masters of the work assigned them, and supernaturally qualified to instruct others. What an honour does sanctified genius confer upon its possessor! Unsuspected, what a curse!—C.

25 And all the women that were wise-hearted did spin with their hands, and brought that which they had spun, both of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, and of fine linen.
26 And all the women, whose heart stirred them up in wisdom, spun goats' hair.
27 And the rulers brought onyx-stones, and stones to be set for the ephod, and for the breastplate;
28 And spice, and oil for the light, and for the anointing oil, and for the sweet incense.
29 The children of Israel brought a willing offering unto the LORD, every man and woman, whose heart made them willing to bring for all manner of work, which the LORD had commanded to be made by the hand of Moses.
30 ¶ And Moses said unto the children of Israel, See, the LORD hath called by name Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah;
31 And he hath filled him with the spirit of God, in wisdom, in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship;
32 And to devise curious works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass, 33 And in the cutting of stones to set them, and in carving of wood, to make any manner of cunning work.
34 And he hath put in his heart that he may teach, both he, and Aholiab the son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan.
35 Them hath he filled with wisdom of heart, to work all manner of work of the engraver, and of the cunning workman, and of the embroiderer, in blue, and in purple, in scarlet, and in fine linen, and of the weaver, even of them that do any work, and of those that devise cunning work.<sup>5</sup>

THEN wrought Bezaleel and Aholiab, and every wise-hearted man, in whom the LORD put wisdom and understanding, to know how to work all manner of work for the service of the sanctuary, according to all that the LORD had commanded.
2 And Moses called Bezaleel and Aholiab, and every wise-hearted man, in whose heart the LORD had put wisdom, even every one whose xxviii. xxx. xxxi. the notes and reflections there found are referred to. Only let me observe, that the glory of God, the happiness of men, are deeply interested in the exact observation of the Sabbath; and that God will either have voluntary service, or will not accept of it at all. Sincere repentance always issues in hearty dedications to God: and it is comely when professors, Vol. 1—23

according to their respective abilities, concur in promoting the honour and service of God. In such a work he graciously accepts, not according to what they have not, but according to what they have, if there be first a willing mind. And since God liberally furnishes such as he calls to public offices in his church, the greater our gifts or grace, or the higher our station, the more earnest ought to be our labour in the service of Christ and in helpfulness to our fellow-members.

CHAPTER XXXVI. REFLECTIONS.—How honourable is it when agents in the church are men faithful and to be trusted!—when private members are so liberal that they need to be restrained, and when heart stirred him up, to come unto the work to do it.

3 And they received of Moses all the offering which the children of Israel <sup>d</sup>had brought for the work of the service of the sanctuary, to make it withal. And they brought yet unto him free-offerings every <sup>e</sup>morning.

4 And all the <sup>f</sup>wise men, that wrought all the work of the sanctuary, came every man from his work which they made;

5 And they spake unto Moses, saying, The people bring <sup>g</sup>much more than enough for the service of the work which the LORD commanded to make.

6 And Moses gave commandment, and they caused it to be proclaimed throughout the camp, saying, Let neither man nor woman make any more work for the offering of the sanctuary. So the people were restrained from bringing.

7 For the stuff they had was sufficient for all the work to make it, and too much.<sup>4</sup>

8 ¶ And <sup>h</sup>every wise-hearted man, among them that wrought the work of the tabernacle, made ten curtains of fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet: with <sup>i</sup>cherubims<sup>5</sup> of cunning work<sup>6</sup> made he them.

9 The length of one curtain was twenty and eight cubits,<sup>7</sup> and the breadth of one curtain four cubits:<sup>8</sup> the curtains were all of one size.

10 And he <sup>k</sup>coupled the five curtains one unto another; and the other five curtains he coupled one unto another.

11 And he made loops of blue on the edge of one curtain, from the selvedge in the coupling: likewise he made in the uttermost side of another curtain, in the coupling of the second.

12 Fifty loops made he in one curtain, and fifty loops made he in the edge of the curtain which was in the coupling of the second: the loops held one curtain to another.

13 And he made fifty taches of gold, and coupled the curtains one unto another with the taches. So it became one tabernacle.<sup>9</sup>

14 ¶ And he made curtains of goats' hair for the tent over the tabernacle: eleven curtains he made them.

15 The length of one curtain was thirty cubits,<sup>1</sup> and four cubits was the breadth of one curtain: the eleven curtains were of one size.

16 And he coupled five curtains by themselves, and six curtains by themselves.

17 And he made fifty loops upon the uttermost edge of the curtain in the coupling, and fifty loops made he upon the edge of the curtain which coupleth the second.

4 It is seldom, when the cause of God is concerned, that people exceed in liberality. And it has too frequently happened, and happens every day, that the reverse is the case. It is said that superstition is more liberal than true piety. But the one springs from love to God, the other from love to ourselves.—L.

5 What cherubim represented, we cannot determine. Josephus says they were hying animals like none of those seen by man, but such as Moses saw about the throne of God. According to Ezekiel, the cherubim were creatures with four heads and one body, compounded from animals the noblest of their kind, the lion, the bull, the eagle, and man, so that they might be, says Dr. Priestley, the representatives of all nature.—L.

6 This probably means a sort of diaper, in which the figures appear equally perfect on both sides: this was probably formed in the loom. Another kind of curious work is mentioned, ver. 37, which we term needle-work. This was probably similar to our embroidery, tapestry, or cloth of Arras. It has been thought unlikely that these works were manufactured in the wilderness; what was done in the loom they might have brought with them from Egypt; what could be done by hand, without the use of complex machinery, the Israelitish women could readily perform with their needles during their stay in the wilderness. But still it seems probable that they brought even their looms with them. The whole of this account shows that not only necessary but ornamental arts had been carried to a considerable degree of perfection both among the Israelites and Egyptians.—Dr. Clarke.

2 The fine covering signified the internal glory of Christ and his church; and the covering is likened their meanness in the view of carnal men.

3 The Hebrew word translated badger is of uncertain meaning, but it is clear that it signifies some unclean animal. Why then is it the uppermost covering of the tabernacle? Because it is significant of the world, in which the church is still enveloped, and from which it is to be 'called out and gathered'; and of which our Lord says, 'In. 17. 15. I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world.' This covering is likewise significant of that protection which the world, though at heart a persecutor of Christ, does nevertheless often afford to the church. Thus Pharaoh protected Abram and protected Isaac in Egypt, Ge. 12. 16, 20. Thus Abimelech protected Isaac in Ger. 20. 11. Thus the town-clerk protected Paul at Ephesus, Ac. 19. 41. the chief captain at Jerusalem, Ac. 21. 31, 32. His Roman citizenship shielded him from scourging, Ac. 22. 25, 28. Claudius Lycus delivered him from assassination, Ac. 23. 23; and when venal sycophancy would have returned him to the hands of murderers, 'I appeal unto Caesar' rescued him from their daggers, and sent him to Rome, where 'his bonds were manifest in all the palace' of the emperor, and he continued 'two whole years in his own hired house, preaching the kingdom of God—no man forbidding him,' Ac. 28. 30, 31.—C.

u Morier, in his Travels in Persia, describes the tent of a Tartar chief thus:—

'It was composed of a wooden frame of circular laths, which was fixed on the ground, and then covered with large felts that were fastened down by a cord ornamented with tassels of various colours. A curtain curiously worked by the women with coarse needle-work of various colours. These hangings are not confined to tents, but are used for the doors of mosques and sitting-rooms of palaces and private houses.—L.

18 And he made fifty taches of brass to couple the tent together, that it might be one.

19 ¶ And he made a covering<sup>2</sup> for the tent of rams' skins dyed red, and a covering of badgers' skins above that.<sup>3</sup>

20 ¶ And he made boards for the tabernacle of <sup>i</sup>shittim-wood, standing up.

21 The length of a board was ten cubits,<sup>4</sup> and the breadth of a board one cubit and a half.<sup>5</sup>

22 One board had two tenons, equally distant one from another: thus did he make for all the boards of the tabernacle.

23 And he made boards for the tabernacle: twenty boards for the south side southward;

24 And forty sockets of silver he made under the twenty boards: two sockets under one board for his two tenons, and two sockets under another board for his two tenons.

25 And for the other side of the tabernacle, which is toward the north corner, he made twenty boards,

26 And their forty sockets of silver: two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board.

27 And for the sides of the tabernacle westward he made six boards.

CHAPTER XXXVII. REFLECTIONS.—How

unbounded is the excellency and usefulness of Christ, that so many things are necessary to represent him! Pleasant is the work of ministers and Christians, where he is ALL and IN ALL, the FIRST and the LAST! and it becomes them regularly to proceed from the inward to the outward concerns thereof. May I embrace

Jesus as my propitiation; feed on him as my provision; walk in him as my light; depend on him as my interceding advocate; and, being anointed with his Spirit, offer up my supplications, intercessions, and thanksgivings, kindled by the holy fire of his love shed abroad in my heart.

AND Bezaleel made the ark of shittim-wood: two cubits and a half was the length of it, and a cubit and a half the breadth of it, and a cubit and a half the height of it.

2 And he overlaid it with pure gold within and without, and made a crown of gold to it round about.

3 And he cast for it four rings of gold, to be set by the four corners of it; even two rings upon the one side of it, and two rings upon the other side of it.

4 And he made staves of shittim-wood, and overlaid them with gold.

5 And he put the staves into the rings by the sides of the ark, to bear the ark.

7 And he made two cherubims of gold, beaten out of one piece made he them, on the two ends of the mercy-seat:

8 One cherub on the end on this side, and another cherub on the other end on that side: out of the mercy-seat made he the cherubims on the two ends thereof.<sup>1</sup>

9 And the cherubims spread out their wings on high, and covered with their wings over the mercy-seat, with their faces one to another; even to the mercy-seat-ward were the faces of the cherubims.

10 ¶ And he made the table of shittim-wood: two cubits was the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof.

1 The two cherubims were expansions of the mercy-seat. Now God's mercy-seat or propitiation is Christ. Ro. 3.25. The cherubims represent the angels and all spiritual worshippers of God, and students of his mysteries. 1 Pe. 1. 12. Now all these are of one, Ep. 1. 10. Christ is the vine, branches are the believers the members, Ep. 5. 30. Nay, the angels that are in heaven are thus spiritually united to him, for they believe in him and worship him, He. 1. 6. The cherubims have their faces towards another, representing the communion of all pure spiritual minds. They look also down upon the mercy-seat, beneath which are laid the tables of the covenant. And the mystery on which these points comment is common with the spirits of men, is the wondrous and blessed union in one throne of the law that condemns and kills, and the mercy that pardons and saves.—C.

4 God's manifestations of himself, in this world, are but candle-light compared with the day-light of the future state. The Bible is a golden candlestick. It is of pure gold, Ps. 19. 10. From it light is diffused to every part of God's tabernacle; that by it his spiritual priests may see to minister to the Lord, and to do the service of his sanctuary. This candlestick has not only its bowls for necessary use, but its knobs and flowers for ornament; there are many things which God saw fit to beautify his world with, which we can no more give a reason for than for these knobs and flowers, and yet we are sure they were added for good purposes.—J.

i Is. 5.4, 5. 10. Ps. 51. 17.

6 Seven imports diversity and perfection, Re. 1. 12, 20; 2. 1. There were no windows in the tabernacle; but the candlestick being placed over against it, and the table of show-bread, each lamp would cast its light to the part of the tabernacle over against it, and the whole would thus be sufficiently lighted. This typified the light of revelation, and the teaching of the Holy Spirit through Christ Jesus, afforded to the church in this dark world; to her worship and obedience, and administer to her consolation; but in heaven, 'The Lord will be unto her an everlasting light, and God himself her glory.—J.

26 And he overlaid it with pure gold, both the top of it, and the sides thereof round about, and the horns of it: also he made unto it a crown of gold round about.

27 And he made two rings of gold for it under the crown thereof, by the two corners of it, upon the two sides thereof, to be places for the staves to bear it withal.

atonement for sin, and the purification of our conscience from dead works, are closely linked together; that fervent devotion disposes persons to part with that which others most admire, for the service of Christ. And it is necessary to examine ourselves in the glass of God's law when we go to the laver of Jesus' blood for 3 And he made all the vessels of the altar, the pots, and the shovels, and the basins, and the flesh-hooks, and the fire-pans; all the vessels thereof made he of brass.

4 And he made for the altar a brazen grate of net-work, under the compass thereof, beneath unto the midst of it.

5 And he cast four rings for the four ends of the grate of brass, to be places for the staves.

6 And he made the staves of shittim-wood, and overlaid them with brass.

7 And he put the staves into the rings on the sides of the altar, to bear it withal: he made the altar hollow with boards.

8 ¶ And he made the laver of brass, and the foot of it of brass, of the looking-glasses of the women assembling<sup>6</sup> which assembled at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.<sup>7</sup>

9 ¶ And he made the court: on the south side southward the hangings of the court were of fine twined linen, an hundred cubits.<sup>8</sup>

12 And for the west side were hangings of fifty cubits, their pillars ten, and their sockets ten: the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver.

13 And for the east side eastward, fifty cubits.<sup>9</sup>

14 The hangings of the one side of the gate were fifteen cubits; their pillars three, and their sockets three.

15 And for the other side of the court-gate, on this hand and that hand, were hangings of fifteen cubits; their pillars three, and their sockets three.

16 All the hangings of the court round about were of fine twined linen.

i There is considerable difference of opinion about the correct translation of this passage. Luther, Matthews, and others, render it, 'and he made the laver under the inspection of the women who ministered at the door.' It is true that the word rendered looking-glasses, is elsewhere in Scripture rendered 'light.' Still the idea of inspection seems inconsistent with the description of the qualifications of Bezaleel for all manner of work. We prefer the authorized translation, and consider it as conveying an important lesson. That the ancient mirrors were generally polished brass or silver is admitted. That the women were accustomed to carry them to public worship is also acknowledged. But, that beauty may not merely be pleasing to the beholder, but instructing to the possessor, is a melancholy fact in female history. Now, the minister of that beauty, presiding in its ornament—the friend that so often exhibits it to flatter and to fascinate the heart—is required for the service of God, and must be sacrificed, and freely these holy women who trusted in God did render up their second selves, evidencing by this act of self-sacrifice, that to all outward adorning of gold or putting on of apparel, they preferred that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price, 1 Pe. 3.—Note. Genuine Christianity has alone raised woman to her proper place in society, and largely has woman repaid the boon. Since Hannah presented Samuel to the Lord, 1 Sa. 1.28; since the faith of Lois and Eunice was transferred to Timothy, 2 Ti. 1.5; the instruction and prayers of godly self-denying mothers and sisters, in the family and the school, have conferred blessings on the church that eternity alone can reveal.—C.

And if we take into account those who fell by the hand of public justice for the sin of rebellious rebellion against God, ch. 32.28, we will have a still larger increase, amounting to about 6550. If this increase appear to any improbable, let them recollect that according to one of the best statistical authorities (Richmond in the introduction to the Population Returns) the number of males above twenty averages one half the entire number of males. The whole male population would thus be, at the exodus, 1,000,000. Now, taking the number of males under twenty at the exodus to be 600,000, and making the largest deduction for those who ordinarily die before attaining twenty, a number will remain still more than sufficient to supply the increase recorded in the text with all the casualties besides to which the people might be exposed, as well as for the further deduction of 22,000 Levites, excluded from the census by the command of God, Nu. 1.49.—C.

7 And he put them on the shoulders of the ephod, that they should be stones for a memorial to the children of Israel; as the LORD commanded Moses.

8 ¶ And he made the breastplate of cunning work, like the work of the ephod; of gold, blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen.

9 It was four-square; they made the breastplate double:<sup>3</sup> a span was the length thereof, and a span the breadth thereof, being doubled.

10 And they set in it four rows of stones: the first row was a sardius,<sup>4</sup> a topaz, and a carbuncle; this was the first row.

11 And the second row, an emerald, a sapphire, and a diamond.

12 And the third row, a ligure, an agate, and an amethyst.

13 And the fourth row, a beryl, an onyx, and a jasper: they were enclosed in ouches of gold in their enclosings.

14 And the stones were according to the names of the children of Israel, twelve, according to their names, like the engravings of a signet, every one with his name, according to the twelve tribes.<sup>5</sup>

15 And they made upon the breastplate chains<sup>6</sup> at the ends of wreathen work of pure gold.

16 And they made two ouches of gold, and two gold rings, and put the two rings in the two ends of the breastplate.

3 Every object endangered merits, and should receive, protection proportioned to its value, as consequently the heart, as a chief organ of life, is naturally defended as by a fortress of many bones and muscles, in addition to which the eye and the arms are appointed as auxiliaries. But besides these natural defences, artificial aid is called in, and the soldier is covered with the cuirass or the breastplate. So, the hidden man of the heart, 1 Pe. 3. 4. requires to be 'kept with all diligence.' Pr. 4. 23. and that of every representative, as was the high-priest, who required to keep it, first, on his own account, and secondly, on account of the people. Hence his typical breastplate was double, because the seal of the covenant was double, 'that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to the hope set before us.' He. 6. 18.—Note. The assurance of believers repose under the double protection of Christ's brotherhood with them, He. 2. 18, and his equality with the Father, Phil. 2. 6. Jn. 16. 15.—C.

4 Or, ruby. These precious stones represented believers in their various circumstances placed in comely order in the church and kingdom of grace.

5 The art of engraving on stone and metal is of remote antiquity. We read in Ge. 38. 18 of Judah's 'signet,' and the engraving on the gems of the high-priest's dress are always said to have been executed 'like the engravings of a signet.' It is remarkable that beautiful engraved signets have been found in some of the most ancient monuments of Chaldea, Assyria, and Egypt. Some of these are probably as old as the time of Abraham.—P.

6 The habergeon or hauberk was a small coat of mail, something in form of a half shirt, made of small iron rings curiously united together. It covered the neck and breast, was very light, and resisted the stroke of a sword. Sometimes it went over the whole head as well as over the breast. This kind of defensive armour was used among the Asiatics, particularly the ancient Persians, among whom it is still worn. It seems to have been borrowed from the Asiatics by the Norman crusaders.—Clarke.

7 The minute and lengthened specification delivered to Moses was at last finished. So our Lord says to the Father, 'I have finished the works which thou gavest me to do.' Jn. 17. 4. Not meaning that the work of saving sinners was yet finished (for that was not till he died and rose again, Ro. 4. 24), but the work of redeeming the Father on earth as the angels do in heaven. Again he said, 'It is finished.' Jn. 19. 30; yet still not the work of saving sinners, nor of casting out Satan (for that was effected by death, He. 2. 14, which he not yet passed upon him), but the last voluntary act foretold by the spirit of prophecy was finished, when having completed the will of him that sent him, he bowed the head and gave up the ghost.—Note. 18 And the two ends of the two wreathen chains they fastened in the two ouches, and put them on the shoulder-pieces of the ephod before it.

19 And they made two rings of gold, and put them on the two ends of the breastplate, upon the border of it, which was on the side of the ephod inward.

20 And they made two other golden rings, and put them on the two sides of the ephod underneath, toward the fore-part of it, over against the other coupling thereof, above the curious girdle of the ephod.

21 And they did bind the breastplate by his rings unto the rings of the ephod with a lace of blue, that it might be above the curious girdle of the ephod, and that the breastplate might not be loosed from the ephod; as the LORD commanded Moses.

CHAPTER XL. Ver. 1-33. The form of the tabernacle when erected was as follows: the court was sixty-one yards long, and half as much in breadth. It was inclosed by a linen hanging of about nine feet in height, suspended by silver hooks, on fifty-six brazen pillars, filleted with silver, and fixed in large sockets of brass.

TEMPLE OF THE SPHINX—BUILT BEFORE JOSEPH CAME TO EGYPT. [Exodus, xl: 2.]—Moses commanded the children of Israel on the first day of the month to set up the tabernacle of the congregation and to put therein the ark of the testimony and cover the ark with the veil. We give a view here of the temple of the Sphinx, the place of worship among the Egyptians which had been often seen by the Israelites. Yet it is remarkable that though they had been in Egypt 430 years and had for a part of that time been in the midst of absolute slavery, that upon leaving Egypt they were found to have so few of the heathen ideas of worship characteristic of the Egyptians. This can only be accounted for upon the hypothesis that the Jews from generation to generation handed down to their children their peculiar national ideas of religion. The worship of the temple of the Sphinx was a long way from the worship of the tabernacle.

But after Aaron and his sons were fully established in their office, it does not appear that Moses performed any of the services to which they were especially appointed. As, however, he went into the tabernacle to inquire of the Lord, it may be supposed that on these occasions he washed his hands and feet at the laver, as Aaron and his sons did in their daily ministrations.—Scott.

3 All Israel saw what Moses described. They saw it, not as a meteor that dazzles for a moment, but through many years; they saw it not occasionally, but permanently; and they moved or rested by its symbolic guidance, and their national institutions were so interwoven with the record, that we cannot account for the origin of institutions which were to be historic records, existing realities, without admitting the truth of the miracles under the divine influence of which these institutions were originally organized.—C.

ing of eleven curtains of goats' hair, coupled with taches of brass; the next was of rams' skins dyed red: the uppermost was of a strong leather, called badgers' skins. The whole east end was an entrance, and hung over with a fine veil of embroidered linen, suspended on five pillars or boards by golden hooks; and just before it, in the court, stood the brazen altar and laver. This tent was distinguished into two apartments. The first, or holy place, was in length twelve yards and six inches; into which only the clean priests might enter. At the inner or west end of it, stood the golden candlestick, altar of incense, and table of show-bread. The second, or most holy place, or oracle, was at the west end of the former, and separated from it by a fine veil of embroidered linen, suspended on four pillars, fixed erect in large sockets of silver. It was a square of ninety-six yards and three inches. Here, amidst gross darkness, at the west end, was set the ark covered by the mercy-seat, and over-shadowed by the golden cherubims; between which hovered the Shekinah, or cloud of the divine presence. The tables of the law were put into the ark. The golden pot of manna, Aaron's rod that budded, and a copy of the law of Moses, were afterwards reposit at the east or fore side of the ark. Into this apartment the high-priest alone entered, and he only upon the fast of general expiation, and perhaps four times that day.

REFLECTIONS.—It is comely when new years are commenced with remarkable transactions for God, and when everything is performed and placed in due order; for God is ready to meet such as are occupied in his service, and remember him in all their ways. Desolate and dreary are ordinances if without the presence of God; but if the Spirit of God and of glory rest upon us, we may be well comforted, for God is with us and for us; and who then can be against us! But was not this reared tabernacle a type of our once apparently mean but truly glorious Redeemer, in his manhood and mediatorial office; devised of God, and reared up with infinite skill; consecrated by the oil of the Holy Ghost and his own bloody sufferings! In him dwells all the fulness of the Godhead. He is the mean of all our fellowship with God; and the treasury of all that atonement, purification, light, food, intercession, and acceptance, which is necessary for our souls. In his debased state he was made the atonement, the laver of purification; in his exalted state he is the eternal rest of JEHOVAH, and the enlightener, advocate, and feeder of his people. Was it not likewise a figure of the gospel-church, planned by the wisdom of God, and reared up by inspired ministers of Christ! Outwardly mean, but inwardly glorious, she is the residence of God in Christ; and in her he is worshipped in an acceptable manner. In her a fulness of atonement, purification, spiritual light, and provision, of acceptable prayers, praises, and services, are to be found. Was it not a figure of heaven itself, where all its emblems are realized, and in which Jesus, JEHOVAH, and everything substantial, are to be found in the most eminent degree!

THE THIRD BOOK OF MOSES, CALLED LEVITICUS.

This book, so called from its connection with the Levitical tribe, contains the laws which God intimated to Moses from off the mercy-seat, during the first month after the tabernacle was erected; viz. (1) Laws relative to sacred oblations, burnt-offerings, meat-offerings, peace-offerings, sin-offerings, trespass-offerings, l.-vii. (2) The history of the consecration of Aaron and his sons, and the death of the two eldest; laws concerning priests' mourning and abstinence from liquor, viii.-x. (3) Laws of purifications from ceremonial uncleanness, contracted by means of unclean beasts, childbirth, leprosy, running issues, public and national sins, xi.-xvi. (4) Miscellaneous laws, prohibiting the eating of blood, sacrificing to devils, alliance with Canaanites, imitation of heathenish superstition and idolatry, theft, perjury, incest, sodomy, bestiality; or requiring abstinence from fruit of trees newly planted; leaving of gleanings to the poor; regulating the priests' mournings and marriages; marking the blemishes which disqualified them for their work, and partaking of the more sacred victuals, or which rendered animals unfit for sacrifice, xvii.-xxii. (5) Laws directing the observation of their sacred solemnities; sabbath, passover, pentecost, feast of trumpets, feast of expiation, feast of tabernacles, release, jubilee; intermixed with some regulations relative to the lighting of the lamps, show-bread, punishment of blasphemy, murder, &c., lending to or buying of poor Hebrews, xxiii.-xxv. (6) After promises of great favour to the obedient and penitent, and threatenings of manifold punishments to the disobedient, are subjoined laws regulating the dedication of things to the Lord, and redeeming them back, xxvi. xxvii.

Whatever this book, or some parts thereof, may appear to an ignorant and carnal mind,—to such as are truly sensible, and evangelical, it is a rich, though obscure mine of the gospel of Christ, typically exhibiting him as the great high-priest, sent and prepared of God for his work; exhibiting his sacrifice in its nature and form; and its influence disclosing the love of God, showing the curse of sin, procuring peace to the mind, quieting the guilty conscience, nourishing the soul, and purifying the heart; exhibiting the gospel-method of cleansing ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh or spirit, inherent or contracted, by due applications of his blood and Spirit: and, in fine, exhibiting the necessity of abstaining from sin in all its forms, appearances, and temptations; of exact attendance on instituted means of grace, and of perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord.

[The Moral Law, though in itself 'holy and just,' and 'the commandment good,' Ro. 7. 12, brings yet no gift to the sinner beyond 'the knowledge of sin;' while by that knowledge 'every mouth is stopped' from either palliation or denial of its sinfulness, and 'all the world stands guilty before God,' Ro. 3. 19, 20. Now this law was delivered on the mount, 'amidst blackness, and darkness, and tempest,' He. 12. 18. But the Ceremonial Law, as it has been called, which is partly delivered in Exodus, and partly in Deuteronomy, and is spread out at large in Leviticus, was delivered 'out of the tabernacle,' where God appeared in all the mild effulgence of the Shekinah, and spoke from the mercy-seat, 'God in Christ,' preparing the way for the 'word of reconciliation,' 2 Co. 5. 19. This book may accordingly be described as THE PICTORIAL GOSPEL;—the gospel for the eye as well as for the ear; the gospel to the sense, that it may conduct to faith.

Taking the Epistle to the Hebrews as the key to this book, we discover that the gospel was presented by it in types, figures, emblems, or shadows, He. 10. 1. A type is something shown as being more or less like another, and which it is intended to represent. The chief types of Christ are, (1) persons, as Adam, Noah, Moses, Joshua, David; (2) offices, as the priestly, prophetic, and kingly; (3) places, as Jerusalem, Zion; (4) times, as the jubilee; (5) laws, as of the Sabbath, of the first-born; (6) feasts, as of tabernacles; (7) special food, as of unleavened bread; (8) things made, or buildings erected, according to God's direction, as the golden candlestick, the tabernacle, the temple; (9) offerings and sacrifices of various kinds. Now these, with many other things, are severally called types of Christ, in so far as, by any inferior excellence, they contain and exhibit some correspondent but far more exceeding excellence in Christ. But whilst one great end of the Levitical institutions was to exhibit Christ to the eye and the understanding, another great end was—to gain him, as the promised seed and Saviour, a place in the heart. But when Christ enters, idolatry must be cast out. The Levitical institutions were therefore God's great antidote to idolatry. Now one of the most universal and besetting forms of idolatry is 'covetousness,' Col. 3. 5. To rebuke, to check, to condemn, and to mortify covetousness, will accordingly be found one great spiritual end of all the ceremonial enactments. Hence, at every approach of the sinner, God demands his heart, through a claim upon his hand, thus testing the sincerity of the worship offered, through the cheerfulness of the surrender made. But another of the most general objects of idolatry is the appetite. So general and so melancholy is this fact, that Paul records it 'weeping,' and so general, that he affirms that there are 'many whose god is their belly,' Phi. 3. 19. Now a large portion of the most stringent directions and interdicts of the Levitical institutions is dedicated to the subject of food; and in this department, no doubt, their primary reference was to him who is 'the bread of God which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world,' Jn. 6. 33. But another object was by every feeling of appetite which it was forbidden to gratify, unless with food which God had sanctioned, to impose a daily, habitual, and above all a divine, restraint upon the appetite, and thus to teach the true worshippers of God to 'keep under the body and bring it into subjection' in order to its being presented a 'living sacrifice,' Ro. 12. 1.

These views of the Levitical institutions, intended to condemn, and through the spiritual and mortifying use of the sacrifices utterly to cast out, the idols of covetousness and appetite, and thus to preserve undefiled the temple of the heart 'an habitation of God through the Spirit,' 1 Co. 3. 17; Ep. 2. 22, will serve to illuminate our path as we attempt to trace out their shadowy mysteries, till we discover their connection with the 'body of Christ,' 'the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth,' Ro. 10. 4. C.]

[Every type contained a prophecy. It was designed to foreshadow some greater event in the distant future. That design implied prophetic knowledge; and the embodiment of the design in the type was prophecy in act. All the ceremonies of the Mosaic law were types of Christ and his kingdom, expressly designed of God to prefigure the person or work of the Messiah. The rite of sacrifice embodied the grand truth of a crucified Saviour as the only ground of reconciliation between a guilty world and a holy God. The passover typified the character, sufferings, death, and salvation of Christ. So the sin-offering, the peace-offering, the red heifer, the day of atonement, &c., were all types of Christ in some aspect of his person or work. In a word, the whole Mosaic economy—its ordinances, vessels, observances, down to the minutest particular—was 'a shadow of good things to come;' but 'the body is of Christ.' It is only when the typical character of this book is kept fully before the mind that it becomes to the reader not merely interesting but most instructive. P.]

unto the LORD, ye shall bring your offering of the cattle, even of the herd, and of the flock.

3 ¶ If his offering be a burnt-sacrifice of the herd, let him offer a male without blemish: he shall offer it of his own voluntary will, at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the LORD.

CHAPTER I. Ver. 2-9. The Jewish oblations, in their matter and ceremonies, were not only typical of Christ, but most of them also emblems of the moral duties of Christians, whether ministers or people. The matter of the offerings pointed at qualities in Christ, or in his people and their service. The male sex figured out the excellency of these; the being without blemish their purity; the voluntariness, the willingness and cheerfulness with which God must be served. The presenting at the door of the tabernacle, in ordinary cases (for in extraordinary ones it might be otherwise, 1 Sa. 7. 9; 11. 15; 2 Sa. 24. 18; 1 Ki. 8. 64; 18. 32; Ju. 6. 26), imported the acceptableness to be through the person and mediation of Christ. The laying on of the offerer's hand imported the transferring of guilt on the sacrifice and devoting it to God. The sprinkling of the blood round about the altar imported the divinity of Christ's atonement, and the extensive virtue of it to all the church and ordinances thereof. The washing of the inwards and legs imports the perfect holiness of heart and life in Christ, and which ought to be in his people. The burning of the whole flesh imported that Christ was, and his people ought to be, wholly devoted to God. The holy fire denoted divine justice in Christ, and holy love in him and in his people. [Ver. 3. The gospel—and we may rightly so speak—the gospel revealed to Moses begins with an OFFERING, saying, 'If any man (even the chief of sinners) offer an offering, rather, bring near an offering, thus announcing that no one can come near to God but by sacrifice; and that those who were once afar off 'are made nigh by the blood of Christ,' Ep. 2. 13, 'who offered up himself,' He. 7. 27. It must be an offering without BLEMISH, either from malformation, disease, injury, or spot, comp. Mal. 1. 14; Nu. 19. 2, 9, 11, with 28. 3, wherein it is a lively image of him who was offered without 'blemish or spot,' 1 Pe. 1. 19, while it also demands of the offerer that 'holiness without which no man shall see the Lord,' He. 12. 14. It must be a FREE-WILL OFFERING; so Christ testifies, 'I lay down my life—no man taketh it from me—I lay it down of myself,' Jn. 10. 17, 18. It must be offered before the Lord, not within, but at the door of the tabernacle; so Christ was offered up not in heaven, but upon earth, in virtue of which offering he summons the 'everlasting doors to be lifted up' for the entrance of 'the King of glory,' Ps. 24. 7; 1 Co. 2. 8; into which he entered as our forerunner, at once a priest and a sacrifice for ever. Ver. 4. The laying of the hands on the head of the sacrifice, directs also to Christ, for 'the Lord laid on him the iniquities of us all,' Is. 53. 6; 1 Pe. 2. 24. The sacrifice was accepted for atonement, that is, as the original implies, for covering the sin, agreeably to Ps. 32. 1; Ro. 4. 6; and so, reconciling God and man by the honouring of the violated law, Ro. 5. 11; Is. 42. 21.—Ver. 5. The sacrifice must be killed, thus 'it behoved Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead,' Lu. 24. 46. Because, 'without shedding of blood there is no remission of sin,' He. 9. 22; and the believer receives this remission, because, in the sight of God and the law, and his own conscience, he is reckoned actually as dead in and with Christ, Ro. 6. 2-11; 1 Pe. 2. 24, and actually risen with him, and sitting with him in heavenly places, Col. 3. 1; Ep. 1. 19, 20; 2. 1, 5, 6, of all which, the Spirit working the life of faith in him is now the evidence and earnest, 2 Co. 5. 5. The blood is sprinkled, to exemplify its extended applicability. 'God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him might not perish,' Jn. 3. 16. It is sprinkled round about upon the altar, to exhibit the believer protected, on all sides, against the charge of the broken law; and thus, 'there is no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus,' Ro. 8. 1.—Ver. 6. The flaying of the sacrifice is the emblem of the grievous external cruelties inflicted on our Lord and his church, Mi. 3. 3. The cutting in pieces portrays the efforts at total extinction, first directed against our Lord and his apostles, and occasionally, in some countries and throughout all ages, against his faithful witnesses, Mat. 27. 20; 1 Co. 4. 9; Re. 6. 9.—Ver. 7. The fire—diffusing the savour, and causing the elementary parts to ascend towards heaven, in new forms, is first the emblem of that baptism, 'with the Holy Ghost, and with fire,' Mat. 3. 11, by which 'the love of God is shed abroad in the heart,' Ro. 5. 5, the desire to 'do good unto all men, and especially to them of the household of faith,' Ga. 6. 10, 4 And he shall put his hand upon the head of the burnt-offering; and it shall be accepted for him, to make atonement for him.

5 And he shall kill the bullock before the LORD: and the priests, Aaron's sons, shall bring the blood, and sprinkle the blood round about upon the altar that is by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.<sup>2</sup>

6 And he shall lay the burnt-offering, and cut it into his pieces.

7 And the sons of Aaron the priest shall put fire upon the altar, and lay the wood in order upon the fire.

8 And the priests, Aaron's sons, shall lay the parts, the head, and the fat, in order upon the wood that is on the fire which is upon the altar.

9 But his inwards and his legs shall he wash in water: and the priest shall burn all on the altar, to be a burnt-sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

10 ¶ And if his offering be of the flocks, namely, of the sheep, or of the goats, for a burnt-sacrifice; he shall bring it a male without blemish.

11 And he shall kill it on the side of the altar northward before the LORD: and the priests, Aaron's sons, shall sprinkle his blood round about upon the altar.

2 It is important to note the leading instructions regarding a sin-offering. It must be an animal with life in it. It must be a male without blemish, to typify Christ. It must be presented voluntarily, not against the will. The person offering must put his hands on its head, to typify the substitution of Christ. It must be killed without shedding of blood, there is no remission. The blood must be sprinkled on the altar before the mercy-seat.—P.

2 The burnt-offering, or whole burnt-offering, was the most important, as part but the skin being left unsaved, and so part as in other instances, being reserved for the priests. Great tenderness was exercised as to the value of the sacrifice, that the poor might not be excluded, and if presented in the right spirit, it was accepted.—J.

God asks but as he gives. But to the poorest he gives enough, an offering—the body for a sacrifice, Ro. 12. 1; the spirit for renewal, Ro. 12. 2; Christ for redemption and acceptance, Ep. 1. 6, 7.—C.

AND when any will offer a meat-offering unto the LORD, his offering shall be of becomes 'an odour of a sweet smell, a sacrifice acceptable, well pleasing to God,' Phi. 4. 18. Secondly, the fire is the emblem of divine feeling against sin which our Lord endured because he bare our sins, 1 Pe. 2. 24; Ps. 22. 1; comp. He. 10. 5-7 with Ps. 40. 6, then read Ps. 40. 2, 12, 13, as descriptive of the fire of suffering in which our Lord was tried. The wood in order, as necessary to the speedy kindling and maintenance of the fire; sets forth to us the regular observance of those various ordinances whose use is to 'stir up the gift that is in us,' 2 Ti. 1. 6, and cause 'our hearts to burn within us,' Lu. 24. 32, while Jesus 'talks with us by the way,' in the closet, in his word, or at his holy table. The head, the most elevated part of the body, the chief seat of the senses, the natural emblem of dignity and power—the fat of the inwards, the emblem of health, abundance, rest—are first devoted to the sacrifice. Most appropriate pictures of Him who is the head over all things to the church, Ep. 1. 22, who is the 'health of our countenance,' Ps. 42. 11, and who alone to the labouring and heavy laden can secure eternal rest, Mat. 11. 28.—Ver. 9. The inwards as the receptacle of unseen and natural impurity, the legs as exposed to visible and contracted uncleanness, are, before sacrifice, to be washed in water. The washing of the inwards is thus explained by David, 'Thou desirest truth in the inward parts,' Ps. 51. 6; see Ps. 139. 23, 24. Alas! what an unexpected discovery is made when the inwards of an unrenowned heart are laid bare. 'Decentful above all things, and desperately wicked,' Je. 17. 9, is the fountain, and out of it 'proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false-witness, blasphemies,' Mat. 15. 19, 'the things which defile a man,' the outward man, and demand that 'clean water' of the Spirit, which alone can cleanse the heart and the life from all their filthiness, Eze. 36. 25, of all this the spotless Saviour was the reverse, 'he knew no sin,' neither—when sought by his bitter enemies—'neither was guile found in his mouth,' 2 Co. 5. 21; 1 Pe. 2. 22. To complete the sacrifice, the priest burns all upon the altar. So Christ offered his whole person. Though in co-equal Godhead, he offered himself humbled, Phi. 2. 8; though in sinless manhood, he was numbered with the transgressors, his soul was troubled, and his body crucified, Mar. 15. 28; Jo. 12. 27; 1 Co. 1. 23. And so likewise the believer who draws 'nigh by the blood of Christ,' offers not a divided service, but his 'whole body, soul, and spirit,' to God. C.]

Ver. 11. [The former offering of the bullock, ver. 3, was at the door of the tabernacle which looks to the east, and there it appears to have been killed. The offering of the sheep or of the goats is however to be killed on the side of the altar northward. Why northward? Of Zion it is said, 'Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is Mount Zion, on the sides of the north, the city of the great King,' Ps. 48. 2. Now what excellence of situation is this! Simply, in the northern hemisphere, and beneath a burning sun, the excellence of shade. Now this is one of the Scripture emblems of Christ's protection. 'A man shall be an hiding-place from the wind, a covert from the tempest, the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.' 'The Lord is thy keeper, thy shade upon thy right hand. The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night,' Ps. 121. 5. Of a shade from the sun thus speaks the prophet, Is. 4. 6; 25. 1, 4, 'There shall be a tabernacle for a shadow in the daytime from the heat.' 'O Lord, thou hast been a refuge from the storm, a shadow from the heat.' According to these views, the sacrifice northward, being within the shadow of the altar, represents the refuge, protection, and covering, which the sacrifice of Christ affords to the believer, who can well adopt the words of the bride, Ca. 2. 3, 'I sat under his shadow with great delight, and his fruit was sweet to my taste.' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—In the oblation of these valuable, social, patient, pure, and peaceful animals, let me behold my all-excellent, social, patient, peaceful, and holy Redeemer, as presented before God in the counsel of peace, brought into this world, and in due time presented at Jerusalem; as bearing our sins in his own blessed body; and as offered by himself a sweet-smelling sacrifice, without spot unto God, to make possible our salvation through the pardon of our sin! How willingly he presented himself!

How painful and dolorous were his sufferings, and chiefly those of his soul, while his love to us made him to suffer the most cruel pain bearing our sins. He expired on a cross on the north-west of Jerusalem, and extends the virtue of his death daily to all known parts of the world! For us, poor and destitute criminals, he exerted all his care; suffered his soul and body to be divided asunder; but neither separated from his Godhead! And, after lying in his grave, he put off every mark of mortality and pain, and ascends to his throne on the right hand of God. What precious meat and drink offerings of blessings and comfort to himself and to my soul do attend this oblation!—Let me, therefore, all inflamed with his dying love, cheerfully render to the Lord the best that I have. Acknowledging myself the servant of death, and rejoicing that Jesus has borne my sins and guilt, let me, though unworthy to enter into God's house, offer my whole self, and all that I have, to the Lord, as a holy sacrifice, acceptable through Jesus Christ. Washed in every part, may my whole soul be inflamed with the sacred fire; the love of God shed abroad in my heart by the Holy Ghost! May a holy and prudent zeal for the Lord consume and burn up every selfish care and inward corruption; and influence me earnestly to lay out all my gifts and graces in winning poor sinners to a God in Christ.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 1. The original word translated 'meat-offering,' applies to any solemn gift either to God or man. Of the meat-offerings to God there were congregational. (1) The waved sheaf, Le. 23. 10, 11. (2) Waved loaves, Le. 23. 17. (3) Show-bread, Le. 24. 5. Eight other meat-offerings were personal. (1) The poor man's, Le. 5. 11. (2) Of jealousy, Nu. 5. 15. (3) Of initiation of the priest, Le. 8. 26. (4) Daily offering of the high-priest, Le. 6. 20. (5) Of fine flour. (6) That baked on a plate. (7) That of the frying-pan. (8) That of the oven. The last five are prescribed in this chapter. The offering well represents him who alone could say, 'My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work,' Jo. 4. 34; 'I am the living bread which came down

SECOND AND THIRD PYRAMIDS—STANDING WHEN ABRAHAM WENT TO EGYPT.
 [LEVITICUS, i.]—We place the picture of the Second and Third Pyramids in connection with the first chapter of Leviticus because that book was written by Moses, and these pyramids are found in the great cemetery of Memphis, where Moses is supposed to have been brought up. The Second Pyramid in the great cemetery of Memphis was built by Chephren, the third king of the fourth dynasty, B. C. 3666. A marble fragment inscribed with the name of Chephren was found near the temple close by this pyramid. This confirms the statements of Herodotus and Diodorus Siculus that Chephren built it. A statue of this king was found in the granite temple close by. The Third Pyramid was built by Men-kau-Ra, the fourth king of the fourth dynasty, B. C. 3633. Herodotus says that Men-kau-Ra was buried in this pyramid, and the sarcophagus and the remains of the inscribed coffin of this king were found in one of its chambers by Howard Vice in 1837. The fragments of this coffin are now in the British Museum.

2 And he shall bring it to Aaron's sons the priests: and he shall take thereout his handful of the flour thereof, and of the oil thereof, with all the frankincense thereof; and the priest shall burn the memorial<sup>2</sup> of it upon the altar, to be an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

3 And 'the remnant of the meat-offering shall be Aaron's and his sons': it is a thing 'most holy of the offerings of the LORD made by fire.

5 ¶ And if thy oblation be a meat-offering baken in a pan,<sup>3</sup> it shall be of fine flour unleavened, mingled with oil.

6 Thou shalt 'part it in pieces, and pour oil thereon: it is a meat-offering.

7 ¶ And if thy oblation be a meat-offering baken in the frying-pan, it shall be made of fine flour with oil.

8 And thou shalt bring the meat-offering that is made of these things unto the LORD: and when it is presented unto the priest, he shall bring it unto the altar.

9 And the priest shall take from the meat-offering a memorial thereof, and shall burn it upon the altar: it is an 'offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

10 And that which is left of the meat-offering shall be Aaron's and his sons': 'it is a thing most holy of the offerings of the LORD made by fire.

11 No meat-offering, which ye shall bring unto the LORD, shall be made with leaven: for ye shall burn no 'leaven, nor any honey,<sup>4</sup> in any offering of the LORD made by fire.

1 The meat-offering had a symbolical significance altogether different from the sacrifice. The latter embodied the idea of a Saviour. The meat-offering on the other hand was a grateful acknowledgment that the offerer owed everything to God, dedicated to him all his goods, and there by sought to secure his favour and blessing.—P.

14 ¶ And if thou offer a 'meat-offering of thy first-fruits unto the LORD, thou shalt offer, for the meat-offering of thy first-fruits, green ears of corn dried by the fire, even corn beaten out of full ears.

15 And thou shalt put oil upon it, and lay frankincense thereon: it is a meat-offering.

CHAPTER III.

1 The peace-offering of the herd, 6 of the flock; 7 either a lamb, 12 or a goat.

AND if his oblation be a sacrifice of 'peace-offering, if he offer it of the herd, whether it be a 'male or 'female, he shall offer it 'without blemish before the LORD.

2 And he shall 'lay his hand upon the head of his offering, and 'kill it at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and Aaron's sons the priests shall 'sprinkle the blood upon the altar round about.

3 And he shall offer of the sacrifice of the peace-offering an offering made by fire unto the LORD, 'the fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards,

4 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is of them, which is by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away.

from heaven: the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world,' Jn. 6. 51. Now, the burnt-offering was an acknowledgment of death deserved, the meat-offering an acknowledgment of life received, a visible enunciation of the prayer, 'Give us this day our daily bread.' This meat-offering must be fine flour, for the same reason that the burnt-sacrifice was without blemish. The oil commingled in the offering, or merely anointing it, represented both the external and internal work of the Spirit; and the odoriferous frankincense, the complete acceptableness of the sacrifice of Christ. Of this offering a memorial handful is burned on the altar, in witness of God's remembrance of the offerer, Ps. 20. 4, and his remembrance of God, Ps. 106. 4, 5; 20. 7. C.]

Ver. 2. This memorial put God, as it were, in mind of his covenant, to accept Christ, and his people's services through him. And it put them in mind that all their store came from God, and ought to be dedicated to his service.

Ver. 3. The most holy provision allotted for the priests was to be eaten by themselves in the sacred courts; but the less holy things, as tithes, first-fruits, &c., might be eaten by them and their families elsewhere in Canaan, Nu. 18. 9, 10; De. 12. 5-7, &c.

Ver. 11. Leaven was forbidden in voluntary meat-offerings: (1) To put them in remembrance of their hasty redemption from Egypt; (2) To teach them to avoid human inventions in the worship of God; (3) To mark the perfect purity of Christ, and the sincerity of his people's services. Honey was prohibited for much the same reason; for it hath a leavening virtue, and may signify carnal pleasures.

Ver. 13. Salt was an emblem of sincerity and soundness in grace; purity, perseverance, and friendship; and of the perpetuity of God's covenant.—[Salt was an essential addition to every offering. Salt, either natural or artificial, may be described as the enemy of corruption in flesh, hence it becomes an expressive emblem of incorruption, not by inherent quality, but by addition of a preserving ingredient. The apostles were, and believers still are, 'the salt of the earth,' Mat. 5. 13. Let them then beware lest they lose their savour, the savour of truth, sincerity, godliness, brotherly-kindness, and charity. Let these commingle with all their offerings as things 'most holy of the offerings of the Lord.' C.]

Ver. 14. [The offering of green ears of corn—is not this for you, 'both young men, and maidens, and children,' Ps. 148. 12, saying, green and flourishing though ye be, as these shall ye be soon cut down, therefore 'remember now your Creator in the days of your youth,' Ec. 12. 1. But these green ears are dried in the fire, by this process they have lost weight but not substance; they possess an artificial and premature ripeness, and are thus prepared to be converted into fine flour. Even so must 'the love of the world' be separated from the youthful heart, 1 Jn. 2. 15; 2 Ti. 2. 22, it may be by ostensible bereavements, by disappointment, or loss, or wasting disease, or pain, or sorrow, still, if the Spirit of God wake by these, they are separating a heart from the world, ripening its fruit for an earlier glory, and presenting its memorial before the Lord, a spiritual offering as made by fire. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—While in these meat-offerings I contemplate Jesus Christ as the fruit of the earth, prepared by the anointing influence of the Holy Ghost, and by dolorous sufferings to be, as Mediator, the eternal delight of JEHOVAH, and the delicate provision of his ransomed people, in a state of sacerdotal and holy fellowship with him, and the everlasting remembrancer of both, let me, receiving of the Spirit of Christ, with solemn prayer and heart-burning affection, surrender myself to God through him, as a memorial Christ, and their faith.—[The law against eat-nity enjoy God as my ALL and IN ALL! Let me avoid infectious corruptions, carnal pleasures, and human inventions, in the worship of God; and have always my thoughts, my speech, and my practice seasoned with the purifying salt of spiritual grace! And, while I take care to allow the ministers of the Lord their due, let me in an especial manner consecrate the days of my youth, and the first-fruits of all my increase, unto Jesus Christ their Master!]

2 The reason why the use of blood was prohibited as food is stated, Ge. 9. 4. It was 'the life of the animal.' No reason is assigned for prohibiting the eating of fat. Indeed all fat is not prohibited; but only those portions where it is accumulated in masses, and which are specified. The reason of the prohibition seems to be this:—The fat of an animal was the sign of its health, vigour, and vitality. As such it was dedicated to the Lord, as an acknowledgment of his being the sustainer of life and health. Fat became in time the symbol of wealth, joy, richness, and power.—P.

CHAPTER IV.

1 The sin-offering of ignorance for the priest, 13 for the congregation, 22 for a ruler, 27 for any of the people.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a soul shall sin through ignorance against any of the commandments of the LORD, concerning things which ought not to be done, and shall do against any of them:

3 If the priest that is anointed do sin according to the sin of the people; then let him bring, for his sin which he hath sinned, a young bullock without blemish unto the LORD for a sin-offering.

4 And he shall bring the bullock unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the LORD; and shall lay his hand upon the bullock's head, and kill the bullock before the LORD.

5 And the priest that is anointed shall take of the bullock's blood, and bring it to the tabernacle of the congregation.

God for some mercy received. And as they respected the offerer's own advantage, he was allowed to offer either male or female.—[Peace-offering—an offering in payment of vows, and thankful acknowledgment of mercies, Ps. 116. 17, 18, or of prayers for deliverance and peace, Ju. 20. 26; 21. 4; 1 Ch. 21. 26. These offerings were lively emblems of 'the Prince of Peace,' Is. 9. 6, of him 'who is our peace,' Ep. 2. 14. The chief peculiarities in this offering are, (1) That it may be either 'a male or female,' most probably shadowing out the doctrine of that complete spiritual equality of nation, rank, or sex. Paul declares, 'There is neither Greek nor Jew, bond nor free, male nor female, but all one in Christ Jesus,' Ga. 3. 28. (2) That it is divided to God, the priest, and the offerer, Le. 7. 11, an emblem of that blessed 'fellowship of his Son,' 1 Co. 1. 9, into which God has called believers, in which he 'comes into them and sups with them, and they with him,' Re. 3. 26. C.]

Ver. 3. Here only the fat or tallow was the Lord's portion; the officiating priest had the breast, the right shoulder, the cheeks, and the maw, ch. 7. 30-32; De. 18. 3; and the offerer had the rest to feast upon with his friends, ch. 7. 15, 16.

Ver. 4. [Some suppose the 'caul above the liver,' to mean the great lobe of the liver itself; others, a part of the omentum, a kind of fatty apron that covers the bowels in front; but there is no part of the animal to which the description can correctly apply, except the diaphragm, an internal compound muscle which divides the contents of the breast from the lower bowels, and which is one of the principal agents in the act of breathing. C.]

Ver. 5. It was to be burned upon the burnt-sacrifice, to mark that we are first to be reconciled to God by the death of Christ before any of our services can be accepted.

Ver. 17. They were prohibited to eat fat or blood, (1) To teach them to beware of inhuman cruelties; (2) To exercise them in obedience, self-denial, and mortification of their appetites, (3) To direct them to consider their redemption as obtained only by the blood, and their sanctification effected by the Spirit of that I have accepted Jesus Christ, and shall to eternal life. Le. 17. 11. (2) To preserve from the abominable idolatries of the heathen, of which David speaks, 'Their sorrows shall be multiplied that hasten after another god, their drink-offerings of blood will I not offer.' (3) As a religious check upon cruelty to the lower animals. The law against fat cannot be explained upon any dietetic principle peculiar to eastern countries; moderately used, it is not unwholesome either in warm or cold climates. But it can justly be accounted for on the principle of the idolatry of the appetite, which made Paul weep when he contemplated its extent and ravages, Phi. 3. 19, and as a principal minister to luxury, the use of the fat of the sacrificial parts is perpetually prohibited to the Israelites 'in all their dwellings.' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Still in these peace-offerings I behold Jesus, the Son of God and seed of the woman, making peace for men with God, by the blood of his cross, the travail of his soul, and obtaining eternal redemption for us. Let me learn then to thank God for every mercy received, and seek every blessing which I need, through Jesus' atonement, surrendering my soul wholly to his service and honour, so shall I at once be a sweet savour to my God, the rejoicing of ministers, and a comfort to myself and my friends. But never let me dare to make use of anything relating to the Lord, and exhibiting his Christ as if it were a common thing, or forget the smallest of his injunctions, but receive his truth in love, and diligently observe his precepts.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1. To mark the sins of priests and of congregations as greater than those of rulers or of private persons, (1) The offering must be more valuable, a bullock; (2) The blood must be sprinkled on the altar of incense; (3) The whole flesh of the bullock must be burned; whereas a lamb or kid is only required from rulers or private persons; the blood is but sprinkled on the altar of the burnt-offering, and the fat only is burned, and the flesh reserved for the officiating priests.

Ver. 3. [Flattery is an object of God's deepest abhorrence. The Lord 'shall cut off all flattering lips,' Ps. 12. 3. But flattery, whether of self or others, is yet one of the most extensive and destructive diseases in society, Ps. 26. 2; Pr. 26. 28, claimed as a right inherent in certain ranks and offices. Accordingly, all false religions and wicked tyrannies are founded upon it. Priesthoods have been flattered as incapable of error, and kings have been flattered as descendants, not of men, but of gods. This chapter furnishes a wonderful contrast to these blasphemous sacrifices of flattery, and thereby affords us another of these incidental evidences of divine origin with which the Mosaic law abounds. In this law it is taken for granted that the anointed priest may be ignorant, and sin as the people, or rather cause the people to sin by his error or example, and his sacrifice is the most public and exemplary acknowledgment. At the door of the tabernacle he offers. He sprinkles the blood seven times—the emblem of a perfect expiation; and the whole sacrifice—the acknowledgment and evidence of his ignorance and sin—he carries forth without the camp, and publicly burns it with fire. No false religion could ever be founded on such admission of possible imper-

6 And the priest shall dip his finger in the blood, and sprinkle of the blood seven times before the LORD, before the vail of the sanctuary.

7 And the priest shall put some of the blood upon the horns of the altar of sweet incense before the LORD, which is in the tabernacle of the congregation; and shall pour all the blood of the bullock at the bottom of the altar of the burnt-offering which is at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

8 And he shall take off from it all the fat of the bullock for the sin-offering; the fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards,

9 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, which is by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away,

10 As it was taken off from the bullock of the sacrifice of peace-offerings: and the priest shall burn them upon the altar of the burnt-offering.

11 And the skin of the bullock, and all his flesh, with his head, and with his legs, and his inwards, and his dung, 12 Even the whole bullock shall he carry forth without the camp unto a clean place, where the ashes are poured out, and burn him on the wood with fire: where the ashes are poured out shall he be burnt.

13 ¶ And if the whole congregation of Israel sin through ignorance, and the thing be hid from the eyes of the assembly, and they have done somewhat against any of the commandments of the LORD, concerning things which should not be done, and are guilty;

14 When the sin which they have sinned against it is known, then the congregation shall offer a young bullock for the sin, and bring him before the tabernacle of the congregation.

15 And the elders of the congregation shall lay their hands upon the head of the bullock before the LORD; and the bullock shall be killed before the LORD.

16 And the priest that is anointed shall bring of the bullock's blood to the tabernacle of the congregation.

1 Thus the guilt was conveyed away from the whole congregation, who were otherwise liable to suffer for it. Christ, who was made sin, or a sin-offering for us, suffered without the gate of Jerusalem, as bearing away the sin of his people; that when it is sought for, it may nowhere be found, He. 13, 9-14. This was also expressive of the nature of true repentance, which expects sin with abhorrence, drives it to distance out of the camp, and refuses to have anything more to do with it.—Scott.

3 Were it not a well-known form of human error, it would scarcely be believed that there is what may be called a private and public conscience, distinct from each other. This arises partly from that sympathetic influence that leads men to surrender their own better judgment, and follow a multitude to do evil; and partly from the facility with which an individual may remove the accusation of guilt from himself, and lay it to the charge of others whom he could not control. The law of Moses provides against this prolific source of public evil, by indicting, as it were, the whole nation at the bar of God, and demanding public acknowledgment of sin, and evidence of repentance.—C.

5 The promise of remission is founded on the atonement. It is spoken here of the forgiveness of the whole congregation, that is, the turning away of those national judgments which the sin deserved. 6 That power furnishes some license, because it can maintain impunity for sin, and that rank exempts from some religious duties, on the allegation of temporal business, or for the assertion of worldly honour, are errors both notorious and fatal. To guard against these evil principles, there is a striking peculiarity in the law for a ruler; if he sin against any of the commandments of his God, he is guilty. His elevation, instead of procuring him indulgence for transgression or neglect, is called to a watchfulness against all sin, proportioned to the influence of his example for the good or evil of the people, and for directing or counteracting the honour and glory of God.—C.

fection in its priesthood, nor subsist when it was discovered or acknowledged. C.]

Ver. 27. [The sin-offering for the priest or for the whole congregation must be a young bullock, without blemish; for a ruler, a kid, a male without blemish; that for one of the common people, a female, whether a lamb or a kid. Why this distinction? The priest was the ruler in matters ecclesiastical; the congregation, in their corporate capacity, were the rulers by virtue of the election they had made, De. 1, 9-15, and the persons so elected were political rulers in virtue of the office they had accepted. Each is therefore required to sacrifice a male, as the leader and ruler of his flock. By this he is reminded of the dignity and duty of the ruler, and of the aggravated guilt he incurs by sin, whilst he is led to remember 'he has a master in heaven,' and to look to the sacrifice of the great ruler, who 'laid down his life for the sheep,' Jn. 10, 15. When one of the common people offers a female, he offers a creature not inferior to the male in nature, but subordinate in office. This distinction holds good amongst Christians, 'the husband is head over the wife, even as Christ is head of the church,' Ep. 5, 23; and on this holy subordination of office, without any unholy assumption of superiority of nature, much of domestic happiness depends. Equally necessary to national happiness is a well-ordered arrangement of privileges, and subordination to authority; and of this the sacrifices of the common people significantly reminded them; while they led their faith to him who was to come, not as a ruler, but as 'made under the law to redeem them that were under the law, that they might receive the adoption of sons,' Ga. 4, 4. Now, as power sometimes sets itself above law, so humble rank sometimes attempts to get below it. The same rule therefore applies to both, and the poor is not tolerated in disobeying any law of his God; while he is permitted to choose his sacrifice, either from the sheep or the goats, according to the nature of his own flock, or his means of purchase. Note, The Saviour who records the widow's mite requires for his service but such things as Providence and grace provide. C.]

<sup>3</sup> Habitual swearing begets such a fatal familiarity with an oath that men actually take God's name in vain without thought or recollection. Anger also prompts to threats or promises and oaths that pass as totally out of the memory as a storm passes from the sky, leaving no trace. Drunkenness produces similar recklessness and oblivion, with frequent circumstances of deep aggravation. These circumstances will account for the oaths and the possibility of its being aid from him by whom it was recklessly pronounced and lightly forgot. The law may, perhaps, also be intended to apply to cases where the execution of the oath is found impossible, and may, in that sense, be said to be aid from him.—C.

REFLECTIONS.—In these offerings Jesus is yet represented as the strong and patient fatling; as the Lamb of God, and yet in the likeness of sinful flesh; laden with my awful transgressions, and suffering because thereof in his whole man, but chiefly in his soul, that I through him may obtain forgiveness. While I here discover how sin is aggravated, according to the station or number of the offenders, let me especially reflect how criminal and odious that must be which cannot be remitted without shedding of blood—the blood of God! how tremendous the justice of God that can by no means clear the guilty! Let me, with the priests, never attempt to gain pleasure or profit by my sins, but whenever I find myself guilty of evil, let there be an immediate application to Jesus, as made sin for me, that I might be made the righteousness of God in him.

CHAPTER V. REFLECTIONS.—How necessary is it to have a particular sight and sense of our sins! It therefore becomes us to keep a universal guard over all the powers of our soul and members of our body; and over none more than our tongue. Grievous is the crime of robbing God and his ministers! And however mortifying, an honest restitution is necessary. Nor have we any reason to believe our crime pardoned while we retain the wages of unrighteousness; for all sin is unsavoury to the truly penitent soul. But bless the Lord, O my soul, that the oblation of Jesus Christ, the Lamb of God—of Jesus, the corn of wheat—suits every trespass which I can be guilty of! Bless him that herein provision is made for the vilest sinner of mankind, and the poorest mortal upon earth; and that poverty is no bar in our way to heaven through him, nor our access to the God of heaven. Meanwhile, let me take heed to my ways that I sin not with my

THE OBELISK OF HELIOPOLIS—WHERE MOSES WAS EDUCATED. [LEVITICUS, vi: 1.]—We give here a picture of the obelisk at Heliopolis, because it stands amid the ruins of the ancient city of On, where Moses was educated. This obelisk stood in front of the Temple of the Sun. This was erected about 2400 years before Christ by Usertsen I. It is 62 feet 4 inches high above the level of the ground; 66 feet 6 inches above the pavement. It is built of red rose granite. The inscription on the obelisk of Heliopolis is translated in part as follows: "The horus of the sun. The life for those who are born. The king of the upper and lower land. Kheper-ka-Ra. The lord of the double crown. The life for those who are born. The sun of the Sun God. Ra-Usertsen. The friend of the spirits of On ever living. The garden of Horus. The life for those who are born. The gracious God."

19 And the flesh <sup>b</sup>that toucheth any unclean ~~thing~~ shall not be eaten, it shall be burnt with fire: and as for the flesh, all that be clean shall eat thereof.

20 But the soul that eateth of the flesh of the sacrifice of peace-offerings that pertain unto the LORD, having his uncleanness upon him, even that soul shall <sup>c</sup>be cut off from his people.

21 Moreover, <sup>d</sup>the soul that shall touch any unclean thing, as the uncleanness of man, or any unclean beast, or any abominable unclean thing, and eat of the flesh of the sacrifice of peace-offerings which pertain unto the LORD, even that soul shall be cut off from his people.

22 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

23 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, Ye <sup>e</sup>shall eat no manner of fat, of ox, or of sheep, or of goat.

24 And the fat of the beast that <sup>f</sup>dieth of itself, and the fat of that which is torn with beasts, may be used in any other use; but ye shall in no wise eat of it.

25 For whosoever eateth the fat of the beast, of which men offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD, even the soul that eateth it shall be <sup>g</sup>cut off from his people.

26 Moreover, <sup>h</sup>ye shall eat no manner of blood, <sup>i</sup>whether it be of fowl or of beast, in any of your dwellings.

27 Whatsoever soul it be that eateth any manner of blood, even that soul shall be cut off from his people.

28 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

29 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, He that offereth the sacrifice of his peace-offerings unto the LORD, shall <sup>j</sup>bring his oblation unto the LORD of the sacrifice of his peace-offerings.

30 His own hands shall bring the offerings of the LORD made by fire; the fat with the breast, it shall he bring, that <sup>k</sup>the breast may be waved <sup>l</sup>for a wave-offering <sup>m</sup>before the LORD.

31 And the priest shall burn the <sup>n</sup>fat upon the altar; but the breast shall be Aaron's and his sons'.

p The offerer was required with his own hands to bring these parts of the sacrifice to the priest, that the oblation of them might appear his own voluntary action. The breast (which seems to have included the whole of what is at present, in cutting up slaughtered animals, divided into the two breasts) having been similarly waved to and fro, as devoted to God, was eaten by the priests in general; but the right shoulder, having been heaved upwards, as in like manner given to the LORD, was the perquisite of the officiating priest.

q According to Jewish tradition the ceremony of 'waving' was as follows: The priest laid the portion on the hands of the offerer, and then placed his own hands beneath, and moved the hands of the offerer forward, toward the altar, to indicate the dedication of the piece to God; then backward, to indicate the giving of it back again for the use of the priests.

2 The word rendered oblation is a general name for all sorts of offerings or oblations to God. The root of the word is karab, to approach or bring near; and the term therefore denotes anything brought near to be offered or dedicated to God, to whom also the offerer himself was, as it were, brought near, having access in the way appointed by the law. The comprehensive term is thus very appropriately introduced here at the conclusion of the account of the different offerings and sacrifices.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 Moses consecrateth Aaron and his sons. 14 Their sin-offering. 18 Their burnt-offering. 22 The ram of consecration. 31 The place and time of their consecration.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Take Aaron, and his sons <sup>y</sup>with him, and <sup>z</sup>the garments, and <sup>a</sup>the anointing oil, and a bullock for the sin-offering, and <sup>b</sup>two rams, and a basket of unleavened bread;

3 And gather thou all the congregation <sup>c</sup>together unto the <sup>d</sup>door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

4 And Moses did <sup>e</sup>as the LORD commanded him; and the assembly was gathered together unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

5 And Moses said unto the congregation, <sup>f</sup>This is the thing which the LORD commanded to be done.

6 And Moses brought Aaron and his sons, <sup>g</sup>and washed them with water.

7 And <sup>h</sup>he put upon him the coat, and girded him with the girdle, and clothed him with the robe, and put the ephod upon him, and he girded him with the curious girdle of the ephod, and bound it unto him therewith.

his own hands. The priest cannot bring it as his superior; nor his friend as his equal; nor his servant as his inferior. This points to the fact that none but Christ can offer the sacrifice of reconciliation; and that religion, or faith, repentance, holiness, is a personal concern between God and every man's own soul; of repentance, a bitterness which the world knoweth not; and of hope, a joy with which a stranger intermeddeth not. See Pr. 14. 10. C.]

Ver. 38. [Thanksgivings in the wilderness? Why are they not reserved exclusively for Canaan? Is not liberty, the liberty of the Son, abundant compensation for want of a 'continuing city?' Is not manna a sufficient substitute for 'milk and honey?' Whatever be your lot, 'rejoice in the Lord, O ye righteous, for praise is comely for the upright,' Ps. 33. 1. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Ministers of the Gospel ought to be plentifully supplied with everything necessary and agreeable. And the more diligent any are in the services of religion, the more abundantly will they reap the advantages thereof. What glorious reward to himself, and redemption to his people, doth Jesus procure by his all-comprehending oblation! What robes! what delicious provision! May I and my friends share with him in his abundant nourishment and consolation! And let me not only timely perform my vows; but where I am left most at liberty, let me with cheerful-ness give to the Lord. As there is no medium between God's acceptance and abhorrence of my works, let me examine myself, and take heed to my steps. Let my receiving and feeding upon Jesus be as early, and earnest, and social, as possible; and let me, by an after-improvement of divine ordinances, obtain the real benefit thereof. Never let me attempt to live in sinful pollutions along with feasting on Christ. But always beware of a licentious appetite after things prohibited of God. And while I manifest the utmost regard to Jesus and his atonement, let me, as a ransomed priest, feed upon him as my portion; feed upon his dearest love and choicest supports; always eyeing the grant, appointment, and command of God, as the rule and reason of my conduct.

A COPTIC CHURCH—IN THE CRYPT OF WHICH CHRIST IS SAID TO HAVE SPENT PART OF THE SOJOURN IN EGYPT WITH HIS MOTHER MARY. [LEVITICUS, ix.] —This picture is placed in connection with the ninth chapter of Leviticus because of its remote connection with Moses. Old Cairo is between New Cairo and Memphis, and Moses was brought up at Memphis and educated at Heliopolis. In going from Heliopolis to Memphis he would pass through Old Cairo. This church stands in the middle of the Roman Fortress of Babylon in Egypt. There is a crypt in the church twenty feet by fifteen, in which it is said that the Virgin and her Son spent a part of their time during their sojourn in Egypt to avoid the wrath of Herod. The general shape of the church is nearly oblong. The wooden pulpit inside is of rosewood, inlaid with designs in ebony set with ivory edgings. There are many specimens of very beautiful workmanship inside. There are very handsome carvings representing St. Demetrius, Mar George, Abu-sephen, the nativity and the Last Supper.

OLD CAIRO—NEAR THE ISLAND OF RHODA, WHERE MOSES WAS DISCOVERED. [Leviticus, viii:10.]—Old Cairo is upon the suburbs of Modern Cairo, and lies between Memphis, where Moses was brought up, and Heliopolis, where he was educated. It is in the neighborhood of the country in which the children of Israel dwelt in Egypt for 430 years. Near Old Cairo, according to Josephus, stood the fortress of the Babylon of Egypt, which was founded by the Babylonian mercenary soldiers of Cambyses, B. C. 525. Diodorus says that the Babylon of Egypt, which was occupied by the site where what is called Old Cairo now stands, was founded by Assyrian captives in the time of Rameses II., who was the Pharaoh who oppressed the children of Israel. This shows us that the particular site we see is connected with the early history of Egypt. During the reign of Augustus, Old Cairo was the headquarters of one of the Roman legions garrisoned in Egypt.

34 As he hath done this day, so the LORD hath commanded to do, to make an atonement for you.

35 Therefore shall ye abide at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation day and night seven days, and keep the charge of the LORD, that ye die not: for so I am commanded.

36 So<sup>a</sup> Aaron and his sons did all things which the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses.

CHAPTER IX.

1 The first offerings of Aaron for himself and for the people. 8 The sin-offering, 12 and the burnt offering for himself. 15 The offerings for the people. 23 Moses and Aaron bless the people, and fire cometh out from the LORD upon the altar.

AND it came to pass, on the eighth day,<sup>1</sup> that Moses called Aaron and his sons, and the elders of Israel;

2 And he said unto Aaron, Take thee a young calf for a sin-offering, and a ram for a burnt-offering, without blemish, and offer them before the LORD.

3 And unto the children of Israel thou shalt speak, saying, Take ye a kid of the goats for a sin-offering; and a calf and a lamb, both of the first year, without blemish, for a burnt-offering;

4 Also a bullock and a ram for peace-offerings, to sacrifice before the LORD;<sup>2</sup> and a meat-offering mingled with oil: for to-day the LORD will appear unto you.

5 And they brought that which Moses commanded before the tabernacle of the congregation; and all the congregation drew near, and stood before the LORD.

6 And Moses said, This is the thing which the LORD commanded that ye should do; and the glory of the LORD shall appear unto you.<sup>3</sup>

7 And Moses said unto Aaron, Go unto the altar, and offer thy sin-offering, and thy burnt-offering, and make an atonement for thyself, and for the people: and offer the offering of the people, and make an atonement for them; as the LORD commanded.

8 ¶ Aaron therefore went unto the altar, and slew the calf of the sin-offering which was for himself.

9 And the sons of Aaron brought the blood unto him; and he dipped his finger in the blood, and put it upon the horns of the altar, and poured out the blood at the bottom of the altar:

10 But the fat, and the kidneys, and the caul above the liver, of the sin-offering, he burnt upon the altar; as the LORD commanded Moses.

The people offering peace-offerings or offerings of thanksgiving and communion, of which the priests partook, they did not require to offer any for themselves. The LORD was to appear unto them, to come down by fire to own their sacrifice, and to testify his acceptance of Aaron's typical priesthood; perhaps also to give some special manifestation of the divine presence.—J.

w And fire came forth from the presence (face) of Jehovah, &c., i.e. from his visible manifestation. This was the recognized token that the sacrifice was accepted, and that the divine favour was propitiated. It appears that there was already a fire upon the altar, the Lord had been one for seven days. It consumed the offerings by the slow and ordinary process; but the fire of the LORD acted in a different way. It consumed the whole in a moment—probably by one vivid, grand flash, which all the people could see, and which all must acknowledge to be divine. 11 And<sup>h</sup> the flesh and the hide he burnt with fire without the camp.

12 And he slew the burnt-offering; and Aaron's sons presented unto him the blood, which he sprinkled round about upon the altar.

13 And they presented the burnt-offering unto him, with the pieces thereof, and the head; and he burnt them upon the altar.

14 And he did wash the inwards and the legs, and burnt them upon the burnt-offering on the altar.

15 ¶ And he brought the people's offering, and took the goat, which was the sin-offering for the people, and slew it, and offered it for sin, as the first.

16 And he brought the burnt-offering, and offered it according to the manner.<sup>4</sup>

17 And he brought the meat-offering, and took an handful thereof,<sup>5</sup> and burnt it upon the altar, besides the burnt-sacrifice of the morning.

18 He slew also the bullock and the ram for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, which was for the people: and Aaron's sons presented unto him the blood, which he sprinkled upon the altar round about,

19 And the fat of the bullock and of the ram, the rump,<sup>6</sup> and that which covereth the inwards, and the kidneys, and the caul above the liver:

20 And they put the fat upon the breasts, and he burnt the fat upon the altar:

21 And the breasts and the right shoulder Aaron waved for a wave-offering before the LORD; as Moses commanded.

22 And Aaron lifted up his hand toward the people, and blessed them; and came down from offering of the sin-offering, and the burnt-offering, and peace-offerings.<sup>7</sup>

23 ¶ And Moses and Aaron went into the tabernacle of the congregation, and came out, and blessed the people: and the glory of the LORD appeared unto all the people.

24 And there came a fire out from before the LORD, and consumed upon the altar the burnt-offering and the fat:<sup>8</sup> which when all the people saw, they shouted, and fell on their faces.

CHAPTER X.

1 Nadab and Abihu, for offering strange fire, are burnt by fire. 6 Aaron and his sons are forbidden to mourn for them. 8 The priests are forbidden wine when they are to go into the tabernacle. 12 The law of eating the holy things. 16 Aaron's excuse for transgressing thereof.

AND Nadab and Abihu, the sons of Aaron, took either of them his censer, and put fire ling of his blood and Spirit, what feasting on his flesh as meat indeed, what self-dedication, what mortification of inward lusts during their whole week of life, are necessary to prepare them for their sacerdotal service in the house eternal in the heavens.

CHAPTER IX. REFLECTIONS.—Here also

I behold my Redeemer offering up himself a sacrifice without spot unto God, to expiate sin, glorify God, and procure provision and peace to his people. I behold him, again and again, blessing the people: I discern the Almighty Father kindling his indignation against him, and kindly accepting his oblation in our stead. While I adore his grace and kindness, let me learn likewise a lesson of diligence and obedience. If I desire the benefit and comfort of divine appearances, I must attend upon divine ordinances; there no religious service can be acceptable to God till the guilt of my sin be removed by an actual interest in the great propitiation; and all, therefore, but especially ministers, ought to begin their religion at themselves. God's therein, and put incense thereon, and offered strange fire before the LORD, which he commanded them not.<sup>1</sup>

2 And there went out fire from the LORD, and devoured them; and they died before the LORD.

3 Then Moses said unto Aaron, This is it that the LORD spake, saying, 'I will be sanctified<sup>2</sup> in them that come nigh me, and before all the people I will be glorified. And Aaron held his peace.

4 And Moses called Mishael and Elzaphan, the sons of Uzziel the uncle of Aaron, and said unto them, Come near, carry your brethren from before the sanctuary out of the camp.

5 So they went near, and carried them in their coats out of the camp; as Moses had said.

6 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron, and unto Eleazar and unto Ithamar, his sons, 'Uncover not your heads, neither rend your clothes, lest ye die, and lest wrath come upon all the people: but let your brethren, the whole house of Israel, bewail the burning which the LORD hath kindled.

7 And ye shall not go out from the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, lest ye die: for the anointing oil of the LORD is upon you. And they did according to the word of Moses.

8 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Aaron, saying,

9 Do not drink wine nor strong drink, thou, nor thy sons with thee, when ye go into the tabernacle of the congregation, lest ye die: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations.<sup>3</sup>

10 And that ye may put difference between holy and unholy, and between unclean and clean;

It is not said here that there was a positive command against offering; but it is said that there was no instruction for it.

2 The fire was offered by bold rash men, who preferred reason to revelation. The sin of the offering consisted in this:—

1. It was not commanded. 2. It was presented at a wrong time. 3. The fire was not taken from the altar; it was strange fire.

7 The goat here spoken of was a sin-offering for the people, ch.9.15. It ought to have been eaten by the priests, and the remaining flesh to have been consumed in the same manner as the remaining flesh of the other sacrifices. In the confusion, probably arising from the death of Nadab and Abihu, it seems to have been burned without the camp, or upon the altar. Moses is therefore angry at this deviation from the divine precept. He therefore expostulates, not with Aaron, already borne down by distress, but with his two sons, Eleazar and Ithamar, who by eating the sin-offering were typically to bear and take away the sin of the people.—J.

Israel all the statutes which the LORD hath spoken unto them by the hand of Moses.

12 ¶ And Moses spake unto Aaron, and unto Eleazar and unto Ithamar, his sons that were left, Take the meat-offering that remaineth of the offerings of the LORD made by fire, and eat it without leaven beside the altar: for it is most holy.

13 And ye shall eat it in the holy place, because it is thy due, and thy sons' due, of the sacrifices of the LORD made by fire: for so I am commanded.

14 And the wave-breast and heave-shoulder shall ye eat in a clean place; thou, and thy sons, and thy daughters with thee: for they be thy due, and thy sons' due, which are given out of the sacrifices of peace-offerings of the children of Israel.

15 The heave-shoulder and the wave-breast shall they bring, with the offerings made by fire of the fat, to wave it for a wave-offering before the LORD; and it shall be thine, and thy sons' with thee, by a statute for ever; as the LORD hath commanded.

16 ¶ And Moses diligently sought the goat of the sin-offering, and, behold, it was burnt: and he was angry with Eleazar and Ithamar, the sons of Aaron which were left alive, saying, 17 Wherefore have ye not eaten the sin-offering in the holy place, seeing it is most holy, and God hath given it you to bear the iniquity of the congregation, to make atonement for them before the LORD?

18 Behold, the blood of it was not brought in within the holy place: ye should indeed have eaten it in the holy place, as I commanded.

19 And Aaron said unto Moses, Behold, this day have they offered their sin-offering and their burnt-offering before the LORD; and such presence in ordinances effectually attests them to be his. Displays of his divine glory ought to be entertained with joyful gratitude and holy reverence; and the fire of God's Spirit being once granted, to inflame our affections and consume our corruptions, must be cherished and supported with the daily fuel of meditation and prayer.

CHAPTER X. [Ver. 2. Nadab and Abihu had been honoured with seeing God, Ex. 24. 9, 10, but how little privileges may be improved appears in their self-willed offering of strange fire, 'which God commanded them not.' What an unexpected event! The tabernacle service commences with rebellion and judgment; the perfume of the anointing oil is dissipated in devouring fire; the holy garments become winding-sheets; dear relatives become corpse-bearers; and no head is uncovered, no garment rent, lest wrath come upon all the people. Even the father's heart bows to the justice of the terrible sentence.—'and Aaron held his peace.' It was thus the earliest and brightest day of Christianity also opened with the secret covetousness of Ananias and Sapphira, Ac. 5. 1-11, whose judgment tarried not, 'and fear came upon all the churches, and as many as heard these things.'—Note, These are not annals of curiosity: but 'these things happened to them for ensamples; and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come,' 1 Co. 10. 11. C.]

Ver. 9. [From the vicinity of this prohibition to the judgment on Nadab and Abihu, some have imagined they had sinned through wine. But there is, first, no intimation of such a sin in the narrative; and secondly, it is not the manner of Moses to conceal any fault, even in his brother or sister; therefore we conclude that, not drunkenness, but self-will in the worship of God, both without and against divine authority, was the real transgression for which they died. Let Christians in the enjoyment of privileges beware of their abuse. Nadab and Abihu sin—the fire devours them, leaving not an instant for intercession. So John warns the church, 'If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto death: I do not say that he shall pray for it,' 1 Jo. 5. 16. C.]

Ver. 20. [Here there had been such a departure from the divine ritual that Moses was angry. Why then does no judgment come on Eleazar and Ithamar? And why is Moses content with an explanation which admits that the error was committed against knowledge? The very confession of the sin is one reason why it is pardoned, Pr. 28. 13; 1 Jo. 1. 9; not for any virtue in the confession itself, but because of that mercy of God in Christ which faith has apprehended, before the tongue can make confession of the sin of the heart. Moreover, the sin of Nadab arose from a proud self-sufficiency which would dictate to God; that of Aaron, Eleazar, and Ithamar from an erroneous fear of offending.—Note, This is a frequent sin with professing Christians, who abstain from the Lord's supper from an erroneous sense of unworthiness, and yet draw comfort from this supposed tenderness of conscience: but if men really judged themselves unworthy, they would flee to 'the Lamb that was slain;' and if conscience were really tender, it would seek to be 'sprinkled from dead works,' He. 9. 14. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Stand in awe, my soul, and sin not! Let no honours, no gifts, no graces, render thee proud or inattentive to God's institutions. Who can stand before this holy Lord God, the fire of whose zeal for his own institutions burns hottest the nearest to his altar! His noted favours and his tremendous judgments are often most closely connected: and, for the warning of others, he sometimes punishes the first transgressors with the most fearful severity, and deeply marks their sin in their punishment. How insufficient were the giving of the law, the typical tabernacle, or the ceremonial priesthood, to prevent either sins or judgments! When God severely afflicts me or mine, let me draw my heart-composing considerations from the word, the providence, the glory of God, as concerned in it; and never may my indulgence of private affection interfere with the honour or sovereign will of God, nor lead me to disgrace my spiritual union with carnal cares, or the sorrow of the world, which worketh death. While my soul trembles at God's righteous judgments, never let my confusion occasion mistakes in any part of my duty; and, if I desire more of intimate fellowship with God, let me hearken to the voice of his messengers, and after all interruptions reapply myself to my work.—Let ministers seriously ponder how dangerous it is to change God's ordinances, even things have befallen me: and if I had eaten the sin-offering to-day, should it have been accepted in the sight of the LORD?

20 And when Moses heard that, he was content.

CHAPTER XI.

1 What beasts may, 4 and what may not be eaten: 9 What fishes: 13 What fowls. 29 The creeping things which are unclean.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and to Aaron, saying unto them,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, These are the beasts which ye shall eat among all the beasts that are on the earth.

3 Whatsoever parteth the hoof, and is cloven-footed, and cheweth the cud, among the beasts, that shall ye eat.

4 Nevertheless, these shall ye not eat, of them that chew the cud, or of them that divide the hoof: as the camel, because he cheweth the cud, but divideth not the hoof; he is unclean unto you.

5 And the coney, because he cheweth the cud, but divideth not the hoof; he is unclean unto you.

6 And the hare, because he cheweth the cud, but divideth not the hoof; he is unclean unto you.

7 And the swine, though he divide the hoof, and be cloven-footed, yet he cheweth not the cud; he is unclean to you.

8 Of their flesh shall ye not eat, and their carcass shall ye not touch; they are unclean to you.

9 ¶ These shall ye eat of all that are in the waters: Whatsoever hath fins and scales in the waters, in the seas, and in the rivers, them shall ye eat.

10 And all that have not fins and scales in the seas and in the rivers, of all that move in the waters, and of any living thing which is in the waters, they shall be an abomination unto you:

11 They shall be even an abomination unto you; ye shall not eat of their flesh, but ye shall have their carcasses in abomination.

draw up food after deglutition from the stomach, and

submit it to a more

28 And he that beareth the carcass of them in the smallest circumstance; or to be animated to their work from earthly and carnal motives! Base and dangerous is it especially for them to be overcharged with surfeiting or drunkenness and the cares of this life, in a work of such importance and concern, which requires the most faithful attention to reprove the sinner, to comfort the believer, and tenderly to regard the reasonable excuses of such whose minds are distressed!

CHAPTER XI. [Ver. 2. In this chapter God proceeds to provide against the idolatry of the appetite, Phi. 3. 19, first, by merciful and sufficient provision, so that there may be no just cause of complaint; secondly, by wholesome restraint, so that there may be a constant check upon indulgence. Two zoological marks distinguish the clean from the unclean animals—parting the hoof, and chewing the cud. (1) The parted hoof of the ox and sheep belongs to an animal inoffensive and peaceful; the claws of the lion and tiger are weapons of war and destruction. (2) Animals with parted hoof are more social in their habits, and regular in their march than others; the ox and the sheep congregate in the herd and the fold, and follow their leader through pastures and woods in one track. The lion and the tiger are unsocial in their habits, and follow merely the prey which they seek to destroy. These characteristics of the clean animals are daily monitors, that believers, restraining and mortifying all angry passions, 'be careful to give none offence,' 1 Co. 10. 32, to be 'followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises,' He. 6. 12, whilst they give testimony against those 'who separate themselves, having not the Spirit,' Jude 19, and 'whose feet are swift to shed blood,' and 'the ways of peace have they not known,' Ro. 3. 15, 17. The second characteristic of the clean and edible animals is chewing the cud, that is, the power and habit of bringing up their food, and subjecting it anew to mastication during the hours of recumbency, so that, except when they sleep, they are never altogether at rest. This is the emblem of the spiritual man, 'talking with himself on his bed while he is still,' Ps. 4. 4, 'remembering God upon his bed, and meditating upon him in the night watches,' Ps. 63. 6; and so evident is the similarity, that to ruminate signifies in the clean beast the act of 'chewing the cud,' while in man it also signifies the act of solemn meditation. The influence of these dietetic arrangements in preserving the Jews a separate people, continues till this day: they were peculiarly calculated and intended to preserve them from the dangerous infection of idolatrous feasts, or even from those dangerous intimacies which are often cemented at the social intercourse of the table, and so often 'become a snare and a trap' to the self-indulgent, Ps. 69. 22. While to Christians these arrangements are not binding, they nevertheless convey to them an obligatory lesson on purity of church fellowship, reminding us of the apostolic rule, 'not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner; with such an one no not to eat,' 1 Co. 5. 11. C.] Ver. 5. [The coney is described, Ps. 104. 18, as shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even; they are unclean unto you.

29 ¶ These also shall be unclean unto you among the 'creeping things that creep upon the earth: The weasel, and the mouse, and the tortoise after his kind.<sup>2</sup>

30 And the ferret, and the chameleon, and the lizard, and the snail, and the mole.<sup>3</sup>

31 These are unclean to you among all that creep: "whosoever doth touch them, when they be dead, shall be unclean until the even.

32 And upon whatsoever any of them, when they are dead, doth fall, it shall be unclean; whether it be any vessel of wood, or raiment, or skin, or sack, whatsoever vessel it be where-in any work is done, it must be "put into water, and it shall be unclean until the even; so it shall be cleansed.

33 And every earthen vessel whereinto any of them falleth, whatsoever is in it shall be unclean; and "ye shall break it.<sup>4</sup>

34 Of 'all meat which may be eaten, that on which such water cometh shall be unclean: and all drink that may be drunk in every such vessel shall be unclean.

35 And every thing whereupon any part of their carcass falleth shall be unclean; whether it be oven, or ranges for pots, "they shall be broken down: for they are unclean, and shall be unclean unto you.

36 Nevertheless a 'fountain or pit, wherein there is plenty of water,<sup>5</sup> shall be clean:<sup>6</sup> but that which toucheth their carcass shall be unclean.

37 And if any part of their carcass fall upon any 'sowing seed which is to be sown, it shall be clean.

38 But if any water be put upon the seed, and any part of their carcass fall thereon, it shall be unclean unto you.

39 And if any beast, of which ye may eat, die; he that "toucheth the carcass thereof shall be unclean until the even.

40 And he that 'eateth of the carcass of it shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even: he also that beareth the carcass of it shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even.

17 From natural objects, a spiritual lesson is drawn against all idleness, grovelling, earthly sensual pursuits, and a memorial to "watch the works of the devil, which we are called, Ep. 4. 1.—C.

18 The serpent, by which the devil tempted Eve, was condemned to move on his belly and to eat dust; and deceivers, liars, slanderers, and murderers of every description, with all who hate God, and diffuse the poison of impiety among men, are in Scripture called the seed of the serpent, and the children of the devil, Ge. 3. 14, 15. Other reptiles aptly represent the earthly-minded and sensual; and probably this was the implied instruction of the prohibition. The word abomination denotes a union of hatred and terror.—L.

7 Thus the female sex was marked with dishonour till Christ came. (Though the venerable Brown and others look upon this doubling of the time for purification after the birth of a female as a mark of dishonour upon her sex, we dare not adopt the opinion; nothing seems more contrary to the spirit of the Scripture than any such dishonouring distinction. The original promise to the seed of the woman; the dignity of woman; the respect of the covenant of grace, Ga. 4. 24; Solomon's inspired and glowing description of female excellence, Pr. xxxi. combine, with many similar references, and records, to induce us to search for an explanation, not implying dishonour, but embodying some important lesson.

8 May not the explanation be found in the double transgression of the woman in Eden? 1. Her error of judgment, which lay in two things: viz. disregarding God's threatening, and believing Satan's promise. 2. Her actual sin, which also lay in two points: viz. herself first entering; then giving to her husband, this view seems clearly supported by Paul, 1 Ti. 2. 14: "And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression." We discover, therefore, in this law, not stigma affixed, but an abiding memorial set up, and an instructive lesson delivered to all the daughters of Eve.

9 It is a repeated memorial of the original sin and its heavy deserved sentence: it is a solemn warning to guard against deception, to distrust specious promises, as those of the serpent were; to seek the wisdom that cometh from above, and to continue in the faith of the promised seed.

CHAPTER XII.

1 The purification of a woman after child-birth. 6 Her offerings for her purifying.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a 'woman have conceived seed, and born a man-child, then she shall be unclean seven days; according to the days of the separation for her infirmity shall she be unclean.

3 And in the 'eighth day the flesh of his foreskin shall be circumcised.

4 And she shall then 'continue in the blood of her purifying<sup>4</sup> three and thirty days: she shall touch no hallowed thing, nor come into the sanctuary, until the days of her purifying be fulfilled.

5 But if she bear 'a maid-child, then she shall be unclean two weeks, as in her separation: and she shall continue in the blood of her purifying threescore and six days.<sup>1</sup>

6 ¶ And when the days of her purifying are fulfilled for a son, or for a daughter, she 'shall bring a lamb of the first year<sup>2</sup> for a burnt-offering, and a young pigeon or a turtle-dove for a sin-offering, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, unto the priest;

finding its refuge in the rocks; and in Pr. 30. 26 they are described 'as a feeble people, yet making their dwelling in the rocks.' The rabbit cannot therefore be the animal meant, as it chooses its dwelling in dry sandy earth. Bruce seems clearly to prove that the modern name of this animal is ashkoko; that it differs much in form from the rabbit, is an inhabitant of rocks, and is abundant in Horeb and Sinai. C.]

Ver. 9. [Two marks distinguish unclean fishes. As an example of fish without scales, we may take the murderous shark; of these without fins, the misshapen walrus. It is remarkable that four times these creatures are denounced as an abomination. Being less acquainted with the dispositions and habits of fishes than of land animals, we are the less able to assign the reasons of the distinction; for beyond mere will, there is no doubt a reason; and in mere unwholesomeness, as some think, we do not believe it to exist; we seek it rather in the predacious and destructive dispositions of some, the foul and muddy resorts of others, and even in the monstrous appearance by which many of the legally unclean fishes are distinguished from those that are clothed with scales and furnished with fins. C.]

Ver. 44. [Sanctify, that is, by separating yourselves from all outward uncleanness of the flesh; and because God seeth the heart, much more separating yourselves from all inward filthiness of the spirit, 2 Co. 7. 1. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Highly it becomes me, as the servant of God, to live as one separated from the world to his service, always to follow his directions, whether with respect to soul or body, and to eat for health, not from lust. Let even my body, therefore, be carefully preserved as a temple of the Holy Ghost, while in a becoming manner I imitate these clean animals, and become not almost but altogether a Christian. Let me be addicted to meditation on the truths of God, which I have received for my spiritual food, and be steady in my steps, and inclined to render unto God and men their respective dues.—Clothed and protected with Jesus' righteousness and grace, let me, by faith and love, swim against the tides of corruptions and troubles, avoiding intimacy with cruel, self-seeking,

7 Who shall offer it before the LORD, and make an atonement for her; and she shall be cleansed from the issue of her blood. This is the law for her that hath born a male or a female.

8 And if she be not able to bring a lamb, she shall bring two turtles, or two young pigeons; the one for the burnt-offering, and the other for a sin-offering: and the priest shall make an atonement for her, and she shall be clean.

<sup>1</sup> The laws and tokens whereby the priest is to be guided in discerning the leprosy.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron, saying,

2 When a man shall have in the skin of his flesh a rising, a scab, or bright spot, and it be in the skin of his flesh like the plague of leprosy; then he shall be brought unto Aaron the priest, or unto one of his sons the priests:

3 And the priest shall look on the plague in the skin of the flesh; and when the hair in the plague is turned white, and the plague in sight be deeper than the skin of his flesh, it is a plague of leprosy: and the priest shall look on him, and pronounce him unclean.

4 If the bright spot be white in the skin of his flesh, and in sight be not deeper than the skin, and the hair thereof be not turned white; then the priest shall shut up him that hath the plague seven days.

5 And the priest shall look on him the seventh day: and, behold, if the plague in his sight be at a stay, and the plague spread not in the skin; then the priest shall shut him up seven days more.

6 And the priest shall look on him again the seventh day: and, behold, if the plague be somewhat dark, and the plague spread not in the skin, the priest shall pronounce him clean;

<sup>4</sup> When the leprosy has covered all the flesh, why is the patient pronounced clean? It was the symptom that the diseased action was over, and that nothing but the marks of its ravage remained. Even so is it with sin. When the sinner has discovered the full extent of his misery, and cries out, 'Wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?' <sup>12</sup> The principal symptoms to be noted in these verses (9-17), are the quick raw flesh in the tumour, indicating a sharp, corrosive humour, breaking through the skin in a particular part. It was thus distinguished from a disorder, called indeed the leprosy, but of another nature, which freely broke out in a white scurf all over the body, but without the raw flesh. The former indicated an inveterate leprosy, and whenever it appeared rendered the person unclean; but the latter did not. As these are thus contrasted, the latter aptly represents that consciousness of sin which produces unreserved ingenuous confessions, and patience of reproof; and the former perhaps denote the disposition of unhumiliated sinners to resist conviction, and amidst the clearest evidence of criminality, to be angry with the mildest reproof.—J.

7 But if the scab spread much abroad in the skin, after that he hath been seen of the priest for his cleansing, he shall be seen of the priest again.

8 And if the priest see that, behold, the scab spreadeth in the skin; then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a leprosy.

9 ¶ When the plague of leprosy is in a man, then he shall be brought unto the priest;

10 And the priest shall see him: and, behold, if the rising be white in the skin, and it have turned the hair white, and there be quick raw flesh in the rising,

11 It is an old leprosy in the skin of his flesh; and the priest shall pronounce him unclean, and shall not shut him up; for he is unclean.

12 And if a leprosy break out abroad in the skin, and the leprosy cover all the skin of him that hath the plague, from his head even to his foot, wheresoever the priest looketh;

13 Then the priest shall consider: and, behold, if the leprosy have covered all his flesh, he shall pronounce him clean that hath the plague; it is all turned white: he is clean.

14 But when raw flesh appeareth in him, he shall be unclean.

15 And the priest shall see the raw flesh, and pronounce him to be unclean; for the raw flesh is unclean: it is a leprosy.

16 Or if the raw flesh turn again, and be changed unto white, he shall come unto the priest; sensual, superstitious, and earthly-minded men, and even the most distant approaches and temptations to it. But if at any time I be defiled therewith, without delay should I apply the cleansing blood and Spirit of Jesus Christ to my soul; bitterly lament that the tendency will not be wholly extirpated till the evening-tide of my death; and, if I am the Lord's, diligently aim to be holy as he is holy, and perfect as my Father who is in heaven is perfect.

CHAPTER XII. REFLECTIONS. — What alarming stigmas the Lord put upon that sex by which sin entered into our race, till Jesus, the woman's seed, had finished transgression! but alas! sinful uncleanness cleaves to all, yea, even to our most natural and necessary actions, and would for ever exclude us from fellowship with God in his ordinances, and in heaven, had not he sent forth his Son to be the propitiation for our sins, and the fountain opened to purge away our sin and our uncleanness. So infectious is original corruption, and so infinitely necessary is it to improve Jesus' atonement and purifying influence, while we thank him for his mercies, and devote ourselves to his service.—Let parents consider what gratitude, what thanksgiving, what solemn dedication of themselves and seed to God ought to attend safe deliveries in childbirth, and how desirable, comfortable, and edi-fying to have children early circumcised with the circumcision which is of Christ!

CHAPTER XIII. [Ver. 2. Leprosy, derived from a Greek word signifying a scale, is one of the most terrible of the many diseases our 'flesh is heir to.' Willan describes three varieties that have been observed in Western Europe, and Mason Good, who examined the subject, not merely as a physician, but as an expositor of Scripture, considers them as identical with the three forms described by Moses about 3000 years ago. Bateman is disposed to consider the Jewish leprosy as confined to an incurable form; but, under the general name bahereth, Moses includes three specific varieties, one of which (ver. 39) does not even render the patient unclean. These three forms of the disease are all characterized as commencing with bright spots, depressed in the centre, or as Moses describes it, lower than the skin, and surrounded by reddish prominent circles. Sometimes these spots are as small as situated on the front of the legs, immediately below the knees, or about the elbows, and sometimes on the face; they soon enlarge, generally preserving a circular form, and are propagated to different parts until they finally coalesce and cover the whole body; in one species with white scaly inerrustation, in another with patches dark and livid, and in either case extremely loathsome to the beholders and distressing to the sufferer. But though the leprosy appears at first as a mere local disease in the skin, it afterwards discovers its constitutional character, and the bones and joints, and in some cases the teeth, are affected; the toes and fingers fall off in succession, and the body remains a miserable fragment of its former self, where life still lingers in the midst of indescribable torments. The disease, in certain of its stages and circumstances, is confessedly contagious, though this characteristic, on an imperfect induction of observations and facts, Rayer has ventured to deny; and in every sense in which a disease can be so called it is also hereditary. Amongst the most striking peculiarities of this disease, as observed by medical travellers in some of the Asiatic islands, is the fearful and disgusting demoralization which reigns in the separated dwellings of the miserable outcasts; and in this combination of sin and misery, mutually producing one another, the victim frequently lingers during fifty years, in body and spirit waxing worse and worse—the emblem of sin, the warning of judgment to sinners. C.]

INTERIOR OF THE MOSQUE OF AMR—NEAR WHERE MOSES WAS EDUCATED.
[LEVITICUS, xiii:1.]—We give here a view of the Mosque of Amr, because it helps us to see a place of worship as it looks to-day, in the land of Egypt, where Moses grew up. This is in the neighborhood of old Cairo, and as Moses grew up at Memphis and was educated at Heliopolis, in going from Memphis to Heliopolis he would pass through this same neighborhood where this mosque stands to-day. This is the most interesting mosque in Cairo. There is almost a wilderness of columns of different styles of architecture, perhaps taken from older buildings and brought together here to adorn this one. There are a couple of columns on the west side of the mosque once used as a test of character. They were said to be so close together that only an honest man could squeeze through them. The Khedive has now walled up this space.

19 And in the place of the bile there be a white rising, or a bright spot, white, and somewhat reddish,* and it be showed to the priest;

20 And if, when the priest seeth it, behold, it be in sight lower than the skin, and the hair thereof be turned white, the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a plague of leprosy broken out of the bile.

21 But if the priest look on it, and, behold, there be no white hairs therein, and if it be not lower than the skin, but be somewhat dark; then the priest shall shut him up seven days:

22 And if it spread much abroad in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a plague.

23 But if the bright spot stay in his place, and spread not, it is a burning bile; and the priest shall pronounce him clean.

24 ¶ Or if there be any flesh, in the skin whereof there is a hot burning,* and the quick flesh that burneth have a white bright spot,* somewhat reddish, or white;

25 Then the priest shall look upon it: and, behold, if the hair in the bright spot be turned white, and it be in sight deeper than the skin, it is a leprosy broken out in the burning; wherefore the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is the plague of leprosy.

26 But if the priest look on it, and, behold, there be no white hair in the bright spot, and it be no lower than the other skin, but be somewhat dark; then the priest shall shut him up seven days.

27 And the priest shall look upon him the seventh day: and if it be spread much abroad in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is the plague of leprosy.

28 And if the bright spot stay in his place, and spread not in the skin, but it be somewhat dark; it is a rising of the burning, and the priest shall pronounce him clean: for it is an inflammation of the burning.

29 ¶ If a man or woman have a plague upon the head or the beard;

30 Then the priest shall see the plague: and, behold, if it be in sight deeper than the skin, and there be in it a yellow thin hair; then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a dry scall, even a leprosy upon the head or beard.

31 And if the priest look on the plague of the scall, and, behold, it be not in sight deeper than the skin, and that there is no black hair in it; then the priest shall shut up him that hath the plague of the scall seven days.

32 And in the seventh day the priest shall 8 It would seem that a number of cutaneous diseases, different in origin, in symptom, and in kind, are here grouped under the one name leprosy. Some of them do not render the person affected unclean; some are curable; while some are said to be utterly unclean, and appear to have been considered incurable. There is little, if any, resemblance between any of these forms of what may be termed Mosaic leprosy and the leathsome disease which now gets that name in the East. The so-called leprosy of modern Syria is Elephantiasis Gracorum. It is common in some few villages in the country. In Damascus there are two hospitals for persons afflicted with elephantiasis, but I have never heard of a native Damascene being afflicted with it.—J.

CHAPTER XIV.

2 The rites and sacrifices in cleansing of the leper. 33 The signs of leprosy in a house. 48 The cleansing of that house.

AND the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, 2 ¶ This shall be the law of the leper in the day of his cleansing: He <sup>h</sup>shall be brought unto the priest.

3 And the priest shall go forth out of the camp: and the priest shall look, and, behold, if the plague of leprosy be <sup>h</sup>healed in the leper;

4 Then shall the priest command to take for him that is to be cleansed <sup>h</sup>two birds<sup>1</sup> alive and clean, and <sup>h</sup>cedar-wood, and scarlet, and hyssop.

5 And the priest shall command that one of the birds be killed in an <sup>h</sup>earthen vessel over running water.

6 As for the <sup>h</sup>living bird, he shall take it, and the cedar-wood,<sup>2</sup> and the scarlet, and the hyssop,<sup>3</sup> and shall dip them and the living bird in the blood of the bird that was killed over the running water;<sup>4</sup>

7 And he shall sprinkle upon him that is to be cleansed from the leprosy <sup>h</sup>seven times, and shall pronounce him clean, and shall <sup>h</sup>let the living bird loose into the open field.<sup>5</sup>

8 And he that is to be cleansed shall <sup>h</sup>wash his clothes, and shave off all his hair, and wash himself in water, that he may be clean: and after that he shall come into the camp, and shall tarry abroad out of his tent seven days.<sup>6</sup>

9 But it shall be on the seventh day, that he shall shave all his hair off his head, and his beard, and his eyebrows, even all his hair he shall shave off: and he shall wash his clothes, also he shall wash his flesh in water, and he shall be clean.

10 And on the eighth day he shall take <sup>h</sup>two he-lambs without blemish, and one ewe-lamb

REFLECTIONS.—In this filthy distemper, for which no cure but the power of God is prescribed, with shame and confusion of face I behold the penal, the dreadful, the defiling, the spreading, and obstinate nature of reigning corruptions, and how they exclude from fellowship with God and his people! Jealous of myself, it becomes me to present my heart and my ways before my all-seeing High-priest that he may search and try me. If he find me pining away in mine iniquity, wilfully increasing unto more ungodliness, depending on self-righteousness as the ground of my acceptance with God, habitually disposed to rage at reproof, fixed in gross heresy, or given to boast of that which is plainly sinful, I am certainly a leper, a servant of sin; and let me with the deepest agony and grief bewail my condition, while by faith I apply to him, for his word only can effect the cure, and his grace relieve the misery. If he find in me the opposite marks of real grace, particularly a deep sense of universal filthiness in heart and life, still let me wash myself in Jesus' blood, on account of my remaining corruptions and daily infirmities.—Let me submit to his trial the garments of my conversation, that he may purge out what is amiss, and save my soul though my works should be burned up.—Let ministers learn with what tenderness and exact attention to God's prescriptions they should judge of the states of others in order either to admit them to, or exclude them from, the seals of God's covenant.

CHAPTER XIV. [Ver. 4. The cedar wood mentioned here, and in Nu. 19. 6, is said not to be the cedar of Lebanon, so distinguished in Scripture for the uses of architecture, but the fragrant wood of the Juniperus Oxycedrus, which grows abundantly in Syria and Palestine. We are led, however, to believe it to be the cedar of Lebanon, and that it is used with the hyssop; (1) as representing the two scriptural limits of vegetation. Thus it is written, 1 Ki. 4. 30—33, 'And Solomon's wisdom excelled all the wisdom of the children of the east country, and all the wisdom of Egypt, and he spake of trees, from the cedar of Lebanon even to the hyssop that springeth out of the wall.' Now, as under the blessing of Heaven a wholesome vegetable diet is one of the chief remedies in cutaneous diseases, these two extremes might well represent the whole vegetable family. (2) The cedar, as an uncorruptible wood, might naturally represent the constitution restored from corruption, and spiritually that better and incorruptible life of which bodily health is the best similitude, 1 Pe. 1. 23; while the hyssop might naturally set forth gratitude for those sanative qualities which God has so largely infused into the vegetable tribes, and spiritually those 'leaves for the healing of the nations,' Re. 22. 2, which flourish unfading on the tree of eternal life. By comparing He. 9. 19 with Is.

MOSQUE OF AMR—STANDING NEAR THE ISLAND OF RHODA WHERE MOSES WAS FOUND IN THE RIVER NILE. [Leviticus, xiv.]—We give here a picture of the oldest mosque in Egypt to illustrate further the land of Moses. It is in Old Cairo, and its foundations were laid A. D. 643. It is called the Mosque of Amr because the land upon which it is built was given by Amr-ibu-el-Asi. Of the original mosque it is said very little remains. Nearly all of that building was burned down at the end of the ninth century. During the tenth century the mosque was enlarged and rebuilt. The court measures 350 by 400 feet, and the building contains 366 pillars. There is one row on the west side, three rows on the north and south sides, and six rows on the east side. In the northeast corner is the tomb of Abdallah, the son of Amr. Upon one of the pillars is the name Mu-ham-med. These pillars are of all styles of architecture, which is supposed to grow out of the fact that they were brought from other buildings in Cairo.

11 And the priest that maketh him clean shall present the man that is to be made clean, and those things, before the LORD, at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation:

12 And the priest shall take one he-lamb, and offer him for a trespass-offering, and the log of oil, and wave them for a wave-offering before the LORD.

13 And he shall slay the lamb in the place where he shall kill the sin-offering and the burnt-offering, in the holy place: for as the sin-offering is the priest's, so is the trespass-offering: it is most holy.

14 And the priest shall take some of the blood of the trespass-offering, and the priest shall put it upon the tip of the right ear of him that is to be cleansed, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot.

15 And the priest shall take some of the log<sup>p</sup> of oil, and pour it into the palm of his own left hand:

18 And the remnant of the oil that is in the priest's hand he shall pour upon the head of him that is to be cleansed; and the priest shall make<sup>r</sup> an atonement for him before the LORD.

19 And the priest shall offer the sin-offering, and make an atonement for him that is to be cleansed from his uncleanness, and afterward he shall kill the burnt-offering.

20 And the priest shall offer the burnt-offering and the meat-offering upon the altar: and<sup>v</sup> the priest shall make an atonement for him, and he shall be clean.

t The touching with oil signified that as the individual by leprosy had been unclean, and separated from God's service—as he had in fact been dead in the eye of the law—so now he was sanctified again and fitted for God's service; new was bestowed upon him.

h This accommodation of the sacrifice to the temporal circumstances of the offerer is not a descent of the moral law to the desires of the sinner, but a merciful visit of the priestly physician to the habitation of spiritual disease. But, even in this accommodation the lamb, and the blood, and the oil, the meat and burnt and sin offering, cannot be dispensed with. It recognized providential differences in means; and opportunity. Ver. 35. [Would we judge aright of these ancient laws delivered to Moses, we must examine them in their bearing upon modern circumstances. Now, viewed in this light, there are few things in modern times more requiring legislative interference and remedy than the houses ordinarily provided for the poor. Damp and ill-ventilated in one apartment, or admitting every blast in another, producing in proportion to their cost a larger return to the owner than the splendid dwellings of the rich—they furnish the perennial seeds of disease, waste and destroy their numerous and miserable inmates, become in the result an intolerable tax upon the community, who totally overlook the public nuisance concealed under the mask of private property. Now under these circumstances modern European jurisprudence offers to the miserable inhabitant of the unhealthy hovel no redress, beyond removal—a removal to as bad if not to worse; with still no remedy, 36 Then the priest shall command that they empty<sup>6</sup> the house before the priest go into it to see the plague, that 'all that is in the house be not made unclean; and afterward the priest shall go in to see the house.

38 Then the priest shall go out of the house to the door of the house, and shut up the house seven days.

39 And the priest shall come again the seventh day, and shall look: and, behold, if the plague be spread in the walls of the house:

40 Then the priest shall command that they take<sup>8</sup> away the stones in which the plague is, and they shall cast them into an unclean place without the city.

41 And he shall cause the house to be scraped within round about, and they shall pour out the dust that they scrape off without the city into an unclean place.

42 And they shall take other stones, and put them in the place of those stones; and he shall take other mortar, and shall plaster the house.

43 And if the plague come again, and break out in the house, after that he hath taken away the stones, and after he hath scraped the house, and after it is plastered;

The house leprosy here described has occasioned much perplexity to inquirers, and the difficulty has probably arisen from being led by the name to look upon this 'leprosy' as well as that in clothes, as something akin to the human disease so called. Men, clothes, and stones have not the same diseases, but from some analogous circumstances, real or fanciful, the diseases of men may be, and have been, by a figure of speech, applied to diseases in other things. Indeed, to this day there are certain disorders of trees in Egypt and Palestine to which the name of leprosy is given. In Switzerland also they speak of a cancer in buildings, on the same principle, and why should we not understand the leprosy in buildings of the present text as something of a similar description? If we believe that the house leprosy was anything related to the disorder of the same name in man, it is extremely difficult to account for the symptoms and mode of treatment; and we cannot do better than agree with the rabbins and some of the early Christian fathers, who believed that this leprosy was not natural, but was sent by God as an extraordinary punishment upon evil-doers, to compel them to the public acknowledgment and atonement of some unpardonable crime whereby others had been injured.

1 It is not needful for us particularly to consider the laws contained in this chapter, they are not binding on us. In some cases the disease mentioned might be the result of wickedness, in others of disease or infirmity; and even where neither position of disease nor actual sin was implied, might be thus marked, to show how a fallen nature pollutes everything we do.—Scott.

2 The running issue evidently included all forms of inflammation terminating in a constant purulent discharge: ver. 8 seeming evidently to include disease of the lungs; and these, whether contagious or otherwise, are all ranked, and most justly, under one common character of uncleanness. But why, if the issue be stopped, is the patient still unclean? he remains so only till he make public acknowledgment of the mercy of God.—Note. The regenerate soul, in which the power of sin is stopped, feels most sensibly the shame of its former disease. Paul ranked visibly and justly amongst the chief of saints, but Paul's awakened memory and sensitive conscience pronounced him the chief of sinners, 1 Th. 1. 5.—C.

look upon it, and, behold, the plague hath not spread in the house after the house was plastered; then the priest shall pronounce the house clean, because the plague is healed.

49 And he shall take to cleanse the house two birds, and cedar-wood, and scarlet, and hyssop.

50 And he shall kill the one of the birds in an earthen vessel over running water.

51 And he shall take the cedar-wood, and the hyssop, and the scarlet, and the living bird, and dip them in the blood of the slain bird, and in the running water, and sprinkle the house seven times.

52 And he shall cleanse the house with the blood of the bird, and with the running water, and with the living bird, and with the cedar-wood, and with the hyssop, and with the scarlet.

53 But he shall let go the living bird out of the city into the open fields, and make an atonement for the house: and it shall be clean.

56 And for a rising, and for a scab, and for a bright spot;

57 To teach when it is unclean, and when it is clean: this is the law of leprosy.

CHAPTER XV.

1 The uncleanness of men in their issues. 13 The cleansing of them. 19 The uncleanness of women in their issues. 28 Their cleansing.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and to Aaron, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When any man hath a 'running issue out of his flesh, because of his issue he is unclean.<sup>1</sup>

3 And this shall be his uncleanness in his issue: whether his 'flesh run with his issue, or his flesh be stopped from his issue, it is his uncleanness.<sup>2</sup>

4 Every<sup>6</sup> bed whereon he lieth that hath the issue is unclean; and every thing<sup>3</sup> whereon he sitteth shall be unclean.

but the reiterated renewal of the still hopeless experiment. Upon this scene of darkness let us pour the light of God's law by Moses. The owner, the occupying tenant, ver. 35, states to the priest his suspicion that the house is infected. It must be no bare attempt at annoyance to his superior, for all the furniture of the occupant must be removed, and he must seek another residence while due examination is made. Should the examination lead to suspicions, cleansing and due repairs are employed, and should these suspicions be confirmed, the wretched dwelling is razed to the very foundation, and its very dust is carried forth out of the city lest its floating particles should endanger the public health! Were a commission of learned, philanthropic, and godly physicians, carrying this law in their hands, to pass through the narrow and miserable lanes of our towns and cities, and visit the unhappy refugees of our condensed and diseased pauperism, what an architectural revolution would be produced! and how deeply would public health and private comfort be bound to offer the sacrifice of thankfulness to God! But while the fact of house contagion cannot be doubted, its causes are so obscure that little is yet accurately known. Decaying materials, confined air, microscopic animalculæ and plants; various miasmata, and animal exudation may all, with other causes, be the instruments of the judgments of God. But the cause of heart contagion the word of God has clearly developed, and we know that because of sin 'the earthly house of this tabernacle' has been condemned by the priest that examined it, and must be 'dissolved,' and that believers change their unhealthy residence for a 'building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens,' 2 Co. 5. 1. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—No human endeavours, but God alone, can cure my spiritual plagues. By his grace, through the application of the blood and Spirit of Jesus, the God-man—of Jesus, the once slain, but now living and ascended Saviour—I must be cleansed from my reigning corruptions. Thus shall I have access into God's camp, his church below, and as a bird escaped, fly away towards heaven, rejoicing in my deliverance. But not till, through the Spirit, I repeatedly wash myself and my performances in the fountain of his blood, till I search out and mortify my corruptions, the deeds of my body, and receive the full efficacy of Jesus' righteousness, and the influences of his blessed Spirit, for the sanctification of my whole powers and members, shall I be admitted to my real habitation, or enter into unreserved and immediate fellowship with divine persons, holy angels, and glorified saints. But blessed be the Lord that my all-comprehending offering, Christ Jesus, suits me, whether I be poor or rich, and renders my person, and all my services, constantly acceptable before God.—In this plague of the house, let me observe how sin worketh the dissolution not only of human bodies, but of families, nations, and churches, and that no human projects, but Jesus and his Spirit preached and applied, can prevent their destruction, and that where there is a continued obstinacy in sinning, notwithstanding mercies and judgments, inevitable ruin must necessarily ensue.

k Eight points require watchfulness, in order to avoid uncleanness by intercourse with the unclean. The seat, the flesh, the spittle, the saddle—rather literally—the thing that has been under him—the person *touch*ed by him, must all be scrupulously avoided, and the vessels he has used must, according to their material, be washed or broken. What a memento of spiritual watchfulness against the evil communications that corrupt good manners! 1 Co. 15:33.—C.

4 The vessel of earth that the clean has touched must be broken—that is, not every time he has touched it, but when he has ceased to use it: and whether such vessels may have been of the porous and absorbing character of mud, or of modern pottery of the East, used for cooling water by filtration and evaporation, or of a glazed and more perfect manufacture, still the breaking was a valuable sanitary regulation; while it ministered to the recovered invalid a salutary memorial, that, at best, he dwelt in a house of clay. Job 4:9, soon to be broken in pieces. The vessel of wood was merely rinsed in order to its cleansing; most probably the beautifully varnished wooden ware of eastern countries rendered impervious to fluids, and thereby enabled to resist or cast off any contagious matter. The distinction between the vessels forms a just emblem of the state of man; the body must be broken, the spirit quashed. In. 3:5; the body is for sacrifice, the spirit for renewal. 16 In the cases of uncleanness here specified, even where they are properly called infirmities, yet springing from natural corruption, moral pollution is implicated, and sacrifices for atonement and purification must therefore be offered; and in this case the woman must present both a sin-offering and a burnt-offering.—I.

18 It is here intimated that these laws were principally intended to teach the Israelites reverence for God in his sanctuary; and that being sinners, and stained with pollution in all their services, they constantly required forgiveness through the blood of atonement and the sanctification of the Holy Spirit.—I.

19 See ver. 2-30; ch. xiv.; 11:46. Nu. 5:29; 6:13; 19:14.

20 All the before-mentioned laws concerning uncleanness and the rites of purification were designed to impress on the Hebrew people the necessity of inward cleanness and purity of mind. fectious are the scandalous outbreaks of original and inward corruption, and particularly those which are anyway connected with fleshly lusts. Neither the corrupters nor the corrupted can have fellowship with God or his people, but in a believing improvement of Jesus' blood and Spirit, and in bitter and unfeigned repentance of their sin. Let my body, therefore, as well as my soul, be kept pure for the Lord. Let me, with the most earnest care, avoid the company of apostate, erroneous, unchaste, frothy, and wicked persons; and have no fellowship in thought, word, or deed, with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather prove them.

Without this circumspection and care, I shall certainly contract guilt, stains, infamy, and hurt, which will not be purged away, but follow me till I die.

m Jewish tradition states that the 'lots' were originally of box-wood, but afterwards of gold. On one was inscribed,

'for Jehovah,' on the other, 'for Azazel.'—

P.

n The Hebrew

word translated

'scape-goat' is azazel, and has been variously interpreted

—1. Some say it means the goat itself, which was so called from the fact of its being sent away free;

hence the English phrase 'scape-goat.'

2. Some say Azazel is a place to which the goat was sent.

And they thus regard it as a proper name.

3. Others say it means an evil spirit.

4. Others, the devil.

5. Others regard it as an abstract noun, and interpret, 'for complete sending away or removal.'

The last seems to be the true meaning.

The sins of the people being confessed

by the priest over the head of the goat, and thus transferred or imputed to it, the goat was then sent away to the uninhab-ited desert. The rite thus symbolized

the complete removal of sin and guilt.—P.

WATER CARRIERS—CHARACTERISTIC OF EGYPT FROM THE TIME OF MOSES TO THE PRESENT. [LEVITICUS, xvi.]—Change is a characteristic of modern civilization. But in the civilization of Egypt, customs and habits have continued to the present time very much as they were in the days of Moses. The scene we give above of the water carriers of Egypt is one common to the country in all ages of its history. The water carrier is called the sakka. He plies his trade in the streets of Cairo. He carries a goat-skin upon his shoulder, and goes from house to house, and makes the bare means of subsistence by supplying the people with water. During eight months of the year he brings the water all the way from the Nile, but during the remaining four months, while the river is rising, he obtains his supply from the canals which intersect Cairo. These sakkas sell water also to people on the streets. The thirsty passer-by receives his draught in a brazen chalice, and for this he often bestows a small copper coin on the dispenser.

25 And the <sup>a</sup>fat of the sin-offering shall he burn upon the altar.

26 And he that let go the goat for the scape-goat shall <sup>b</sup>wash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in water, and afterward come into the camp.

27 And <sup>c</sup>the bullock for the sin-offering, and the goat for the sin-offering, whose blood was brought in to make atonement in the holy <sup>d</sup>place, shall <sup>e</sup>one carry forth without the camp; and they shall burn in the fire their skins, and their flesh, and their dung.

28 And he that burneth them shall wash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in water, and afterward he shall come into the camp.

30 For on <sup>n</sup>that day shall <sup>o</sup>the priest make an atonement for you, to cleanse you, <sup>p</sup>that ye may be clean from all your sins before the LORD.

31 It shall be a sabbath of rest unto you, and ye shall afflict your souls, by a statute for ever.

32 And <sup>q</sup>the priest whom he shall anoint, and whom he shall consecrate <sup>r</sup>to minister in the priest's office in his father's stead, shall make the atonement, and shall put on the linen clothes, <sup>s</sup>even the holy garments.

33 And he shall make an atonement for the holy <sup>t</sup>sanctuary, and he shall make an atonement for the tabernacle of the congregation, and for the altar; and he shall make an atonement for the priests, and for all the people of the congregation.<sup>8</sup>

34 And this shall be an <sup>u</sup>everlasting statute unto you, to make an atonement for the chil-

CHAPTER XVII.

1 The blood of all slain beasts must be offered to the Lord at the door of the tabernacle, and no sacrifices made to devils. 10 All eatings of blood is forbidden, 15 and all that dieth alone, or is torn.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Speak <sup>b</sup>unto Aaron, and unto his sons, and unto all the children of Israel, and say unto them, This <sup>c</sup>is the thing which the LORD hath commanded, saying,

3 What man soever <sup>d</sup>there be of the house of Israel that <sup>e</sup>killeth an ox, or lamb, or goat, in the camp, or that killeth <sup>f</sup>it out of the camp,

4 And bringeth it not <sup>g</sup>unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, to offer an offering unto the LORD before the tabernacle of the LORD, <sup>h</sup>blood shall be imputed unto that man; he hath shed blood; and that man shall <sup>i</sup>be cut off from among his people:

5 To the end that the children of Israel may <sup>j</sup>bring their sacrifices which they offer in the open field, even that they may bring them unto the LORD, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, unto the priest, and offer them <sup>k</sup>for peace-offerings unto the LORD.

6 And the priest shall <sup>l</sup>sprinkle the blood upon the altar of the LORD <sup>m</sup>at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and <sup>n</sup>burn the fat for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

7 And they shall no more <sup>o</sup>offer their sacrifices unto devils, <sup>p</sup>after whom they have gone a <sup>q</sup>whoring. This shall be a statute for ever unto them throughout their generations.

8 ¶ And thou shalt say unto them, <sup>r</sup>Whatsoever man <sup>s</sup>there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers which sojourn among you, that offereth a <sup>t</sup>burnt-offering or sacrifice,

Ver. 29. [Why is the day of atonement a day of affliction? Because it was the stated anniversary for confessing 'all iniquities and transgressions,' ver. 21, in the presence of God—and confession implies repentance, else it is lip-service and mockery; and repentance implies grief for and hatred of our sins, even when 'turning from them to God, with full purpose of and endeavour after new obedience;' the Saviour 'bearing our griefs, and carrying our sorrows,' Is. 53. 4, is no doubt a sight of 'great joy,' Lu. 2. 10, to believers; but the remembrance that he 'was wounded for our transgressions, and bruised for our iniquities,' Is. 53. 5, that 'in all our afflictions he was afflicted,' Is. 63. 9; nay, that by the sins of professed believers he is even now 'crucified afresh,' He. 6. 6, 'and put to an open shame'—these are the things that convert the day of atonement into a day of affliction, and commingle tears of sorrow with songs of joy. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—In these ceremonial observances I am still directed to Jesus, as appointed by God, and fully qualified to make atonement for all the sins of a lost world. I behold him, in his debasement, stripped of his glorious robes of light and majesty, clothed with a mean but pure manhood; and at once standing as the laborious High-priest, and as the God-honouring and sin-pardoning sacrifice. He needed not to offer for himself; but the Lord lays upon him the iniquities of us all. As our sacrifice he atones for them, and as our scape-goat he carries them all into the land of forgetfulness; dying for our offences, but raised again, and ascending to glory, for our justification. Behold him entering into the celestial oracle in the virtue of his sacrifice! There he appears in the presence of God for us, pleading his own merits, and offering up the incense of continual intercession for us, putting off his robes of debasement, laying aside every vestige of the likeness of sinful flesh, and clothed and crowned with glory and honour. The sprinkling of his blood sanctifies the church, and all the ordinances of it; and renders our sacrifices and incense of grateful obedience, of fervent prayer and praise, acceptable to his Father. He returns also in the Spirit from within the veil to bless all nations in the gospel; and at last will return personally in the clouds, without sin, unto our eternal salvation. But while, in the purification of these agents after their sacred work, I perceive the imperfections of the most noted ceremonies for purging the conscience, let me diligently observe what pollution I contract in my most religious, my most solemn services, and let me live by faith, looking to Jesus whom I have pierced, and mourning bitterly over my transgressions as the cause of his sufferings! Nor let me ever forget what infinite glories must dwell in Christ, who answers, nay, infinitely more than answers, to all these sacrifices, these oblations, these priests, these means of purification, of which I have hitherto read!

CHAPTER XVII. [Ver. 4. This law has been the source of much perplexity to two of the most learned commentators, Michaelis and Boothroyd. Michaelis considers it as requiring that every animal killed for common food must first be brought to the door of the tabernacle, and have the blood sprinkled, and the fat consumed as a peace-offering; and this he considers as a temporary law, intended for the wilderness, and afterwards repealed, De. 12. 13, on the entrance to Canaan. Boothroyd proposes to reconcile the passages by supplying a clause found in the Samaritan and Septuagint versions, and which provides, not that animals for common food should be first offered as peace-offerings, but that no peace-offering should be killed anywhere but at the door of the tabernacle. Now an addition to or explanation of a divine law, it is easy to comprehend; but a direct repeal is a reflection on the legislator not to be admitted. The opinion of Michaelis is therefore to be rejected. Neither is it desirable to derive our expositions with Boothroyd from foreign sources. Let us therefore examine whether such resort be necessary. From ver. 5 we learn that the end of the law was, 'that the children of Israel might bring their sacrifices which they offered in the open field to the door of the tabernacle.' Now, as the preamble of an act of parliament explains, and confines the enactment to its proper object; so this exposition of the design of the law, though following after in place, is yet the virtual preamble not to a temporary provision, but to a statute for ever, throughout their generations.' The ordinance in Deuteronomy is therefore no repeal, but a mere declaratory enactment to remove any doubts that might arise as to the intention and limits of the former law. C.]

HALLWAY IN THE MUSEUM—CONTAINING ANTIQUITIES OLDER THAN THE TIME OF MOSES. [LEVITICUS, xvii.]—Most of the antiquities now contained in the Gizeh Museum are such as antedate the time of Moses, or else are of such things as were contemporary with him. They nearly all belong to the Ancient or the Middle Empire, and there is no better way to get a proper conception of the magnificence and grandeur of the civilization in the midst of which Moses grew up than to take a walk through the many hallways and rooms of this the most interesting museum in some respects on earth. Sometimes we look into the very faces of the statues representing the men with whom Moses lived. A study of Moses through this civilization heightens our admiration for the man who "refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." No man of whom we have any record in history ever sacrificed more of worldly prospects and opportunity than this the greatest leader of Israel.

the LORD, even that man may be cut off from among his people.

10 ¶ And whatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among you, that eateth any manner of blood; I will even set my face against that soul that eateth blood, and will cut him off from among his people.

11 For the life of the flesh is in the blood; and I have given it to you upon the altar, to make an atonement for your souls: for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul.

12 Therefore I said unto the children of Israel, No soul of you shall eat blood, neither shall any stranger that sojourneth among you eat blood.<sup>2</sup>

13 And whatsoever man there be of the children of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among you, which hunteth and catcheth any beast or fowl that may be eaten; he shall even pour out the blood thereof, and cover it with dust.

14 For it is the life of all flesh; the blood of it is for the life thereof: therefore I said unto the children of Israel, Ye shall eat the blood of no manner of flesh: for the life of all flesh is the blood thereof;<sup>3</sup> whosoever eateth it shall be cut off.

15 ¶ And every soul that eateth that which died<sup>4</sup> of itself, or that which was torn with beasts, whether it be one of your own country, or a stranger, he shall both wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even: then shall he be clean.

16 But if he wash them not, nor bathe his flesh, then he shall bear his iniquity.

2 It was customary in some ancient heathen nations to eat the blood of the animals offered in sacrifice to their idols. The practice is alluded to in Eze. 33. 28. The prohibition of such idolatrous rites may have been in part aimed at here; but the grand reason why blood was not to be eaten is plainly stated; and Delitzsch has shown that the reason is sound and philosophic: "For the life of the flesh is in the blood." "This phenomenon," he says, "rests on the ground, that all the activity of the body, especially that of the nervous and muscular systems, is dependent upon the circulation of the blood; for if the flow of blood is stopped from any part of the body, all its activity ceases immediately; a sensitive part loses all sensation in a very few minutes, and muscular action is entirely suspended. The blood is really the basis of the physical life; and so far the soul, as the vital principle of the body, is pre-eminently in the blood."—P.

12 The text prohibits the marrying of two sisters together. This conduct in Jacob proved a source of vexation both to Leah and Rachel; who were more jealous of each other than of the handmaids whom they willingly gave to their husbands; and perhaps it would be found on trial, that those who before had lived together in the intimate equality of this near relationship, would be more apt to rival each other, if married to the same man, than strangers would be; at least their jealousies and bickerings would be more unseemly and distressing.—Scott.

5 Ye shall therefore keep my statutes and my judgments; which if a man do, he shall live in them:<sup>1</sup> I am the LORD.

6 ¶ None of you shall approach to any that is near of kin<sup>2</sup> to him, to uncover their nakedness: I am the LORD.

7 The nakedness of thy father, or the nakedness of thy mother, shalt thou not uncover: she is thy mother; thou shalt not uncover her nakedness.

8 The nakedness of thy father's wife shalt thou not uncover: it is thy father's nakedness.

9 The nakedness of thy sister, the daughter of thy father, or daughter of thy mother, whether she be born at home, or born abroad,<sup>3</sup> even their nakedness thou shalt not uncover.

10 The nakedness of thy son's daughter, or of thy daughter's daughter, even their nakedness thou shalt not uncover: for their is thine own nakedness.

11 The nakedness of thy father's wife's daughter, begotten of thy father, (she is thy sister,) thou shalt not uncover her nakedness.

12 Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy father's sister: she is thy father's near kinswoman.

13 Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy mother's sister: for she is thy mother's near kinswoman.

14 Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy father's brother, thou shalt not approach to his wife: she is thine aunt.

15 Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy daughter-in-law: she is thy son's wife; thou shalt not uncover her nakedness.

16 Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy brother's wife: it is thy brother's nakedness.

17 Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of a woman and her daughter, neither shalt thou take her son's daughter, or her daughter's daughter, to uncover her nakedness; for they are her near kinswomen: it is wickedness.

18 Neither shalt thou take a wife to her sister,<sup>4</sup> to vex her, to uncover her nakedness, besides the other in her life-time.

Ver. 7. [Devils, literally hairy ones. The Egyptians worshipped an imaginary deity called Pan—which means everything; because, in their mythology, he was considered the principle of all things: he was represented under the figure of a goat, his lower extremities covered with hair; hence the description in the text. Pan and his lascivious crew of satyrs and fauns (pictured as covered with hair) were the woodland deities of a degrading idolatry—and, to preserve Israel from its contagion, sacrifices in the open field were forbidden; and where circumstances permitted, were strictly confined to the door of the tabernacle. The phrase of abhorrence with which this worship is described, is not merely figurative but literal. In every system of idolatry down to this day, prostitution constitutes a part of the impure and satanic worship. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—How high is the wisdom of God, by which he can enact what laws of worship, and means of access to him as are best! But to worship him according to our own inventions, to neglect the way of his appointing, so far from being acceptable before God, is both dangerous to ourselves, and considered by him as nearly connected with the idolatrous worship of devils. It is necessary, therefore, on every worshipping occasion, to cleave close to Jesus, as our altar and high-priest, and to the communion of his saints; and for the preventing of false worship, for the honour of divinely-instituted ordinances, and for the uniting of the church, to adhere strictly to God's appointment, even in things circumstantial; and to prefer public ordinances to private. In this blood of animals, so noted because made an atonement for men, I behold the blood of the new covenant enjoined to me—the blood of Jesus Christ shed for me. Let me, therefore, impressed with the repeated commandments of Heaven, maintain the deepest reverence for it, and everything connected with it, and detest everything murderous or cruel! And let nothing deathful, dead, or dying, nothing that can be torn in pieces, or torn from me, but the ever-living Jesus, and JEHOVAH in him, be the provision of my soul and portion of my heart! If I am defiled by such things, either I must wash in Jesus' fountain opened, or perish in my sin.

CHAPTER XVIII. [Ver. 28. The expulsion of the nations of Canaan, by the alleged command of God, has often afforded a topic of cavil and objection to infidels. The simplest reply to such frivolous charges, is simply this—that for child-murder (see Ps. 106. 37, 38), forbidden in verse 21, the law of every civilized country, till this hour, inflicts a heavier penalty than voluntary expatriation (a penalty that was always within the choice of the Canaanites), even the penalty of death. And if an infidel were invested with the 19 ¶ Also<sup>p</sup> thou shalt not approach unto a woman to uncover her nakedness, as long as she is put apart for her uncleanness.

20 Moreover, <sup>a</sup>thou shalt not lie carnally with thy neighbour's wife, to defile thyself with her.

22 Thou<sup>a</sup> shalt not lie with mankind as with womankind: it is abomination.

23 Neither<sup>a</sup> shalt thou lie with any beast to defile thyself therewith; neither shall any woman stand before a beast to lie down thereto: it is confusion.<sup>5</sup>

24 Defile<sup>a</sup> not ye yourselves in any of these things; for in all these the nations are defiled which I cast out before you.

25 And the <sup>a</sup>land is defiled: therefore I do visit<sup>a</sup> the iniquity thereof upon it, and the land itself <sup>a</sup>vomiteth out her inhabitants.<sup>6</sup>

26 Ye shall <sup>a</sup>therefore keep my statutes and my judgments, and shall not commit any of these abominations; neither any of your own nation, nor any stranger that sojourneth among you;

30 Therefore shall ye keep mine <sup>a</sup>ordinance, that ye commit not any one of these abominable customs, which were committed before you, and that ye defile not yourselves therein: I am the LORD your God.

HALL OF SARCOPHAGI, GIZEH MUSEUM—IN WHICH WERE PLACED THE BODIES OF THE REIGNING CLASSES OF EGYPT. [Leviticus, xix.]—Sarcophagi are the stone coffins in which the rich and distinguished people of Egypt were buried. It was only the rich people who were able to defray the expense of embalming, tomb-building, and the like in vogue among the highest class of the Egyptians. To mummify a body alone cost about $1,250. Some of the sarcophagi must have cost thousands of dollars. But it was because the Egyptians devoted such pains to the preservation of their dead and to the building of tombs that we have to-day such an accurate knowledge of their history, and that we are able to reconstruct the very times in which Moses lived and to get a correct conception of the civilization in all its details in the midst of which he grew up. And as we study Moses in connection with Egyptian history, more and more will our admiration for him be increased, and the more will we be inclined to the conviction that he was led by the spirit of God.

15 ¶ Ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment: thou shalt not respect the person of the poor, nor honour the person of the mighty: but in righteousness shalt thou judge thy neighbour.

16 ¶ Thou shalt not go up and down as a tale-bearer among thy people; neither shalt thou stand against the blood of thy neighbour: I am the LORD.<sup>3</sup>

17 ¶ Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine heart: thou shalt in any wise rebuke<sup>4</sup> thy neighbour, and not suffer sin upon him.<sup>5</sup>

18 ¶ Thou shalt not avenge nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people; but thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself: I am the LORD.

19 ¶ Ye shall keep my statutes. ¶ Thou shalt not let thy cattle gender with a diverse kind. Thou shalt not sow thy field with mingled seed; neither shall a garment mingled of linen and woollen come upon thee.<sup>6</sup>

20 ¶ And whosoever lieth carnally with a woman that is a bond-maid, betrothed<sup>7</sup> to an husband, and not at all redeemed, nor freedom given her, she<sup>8</sup> shall be scourged: they shall not be put to death, because she was not free.

21 And he shall bring his trespass-offering unto the LORD, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, even a ram for a trespass-offering.

22 And<sup>b</sup> the priest shall make an atonement for him with the ram of the trespass-offering before the LORD for his sin which he hath done: and the sin which he hath done shall be forgiven him.

Ver. 19. [This law did not forbid to the Jew the use of mules purchased from another people, but the intentional production of them in his own flock. The whole law was calculated to prevent unnatural mixtures, and to remind Israel that they were a peculiar and separate people. C.]

Ver. 26. [Enchantments being derived from a word signifying a serpent, there is reason to think the law forbids augury or fortune-telling by observation of serpents. Times, that is, what are called fortunate or lucky days, or the reverse: a wretched superstition still lingering wherever second causes are more regarded than the overruling and ever-watchful providence of the Almighty. C.]

Ver. 28. [Cutting the flesh was a common mode of mourning in Egypt, as the murderous suttee is still in India. Printing marks—in modern language, tattooing—has been found almost in all nations. The Britons were so ornamented, rather so disfigured, in the times of Julius Cæsar. The Bedouin Arabs, the New Zealanders, and other tribes, still retain the same barbarous custom. The custom seems to have originated in superstition and idolatry, and, as peculiarly calculated to preserve their powers, receives an emphatic prohibition from the Lord. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—In these peace-offerings let me behold Jesus, my peace-maker with God, and speedily receive and live on him by faith. In these gleanings let me observe what care God takes of the poor: nor can I have any true religion without a similar temper. Yea, let me think what gleanings of promises, and deeds of grace, for us poor strangers of the Gentiles, are left in every corner of the Jewish Scriptures. In these forborne trees, let me learn to avoid all rash desires of created enjoyments, or even honouring the Lord with first-fruits not arrived at their perfection. Let me never attempt to alter God's frame of creatures; never attempt to mix works and grace; Jesus' righteousness and my own; his Spirit and my natural abilities; his truth and my own fancies; his ordinances and my own inventions. If I enjoy the directions of God's word and Spirit, let me be ashamed to copy after heathen superstition; but let me carefully observe the positive institutions of my God, and never neglect the weightier matters of the law. If God has delivered his moral precepts so briefly, let me extend my meditations on them: and, in all my obedience, let me be influenced by the firm faith that the lawgiver is JEHOVAH, my God in Christ. Whatsoever is not of this faith is sin. Nor can my obedience be sincere without being universal to all his commandments.

1 Molech was an idol of the Ammonites to whom children were burned in sacrifice, or caused to pass through the fire, in order that the rest of the family might prosper.—(Molech, or Moloch, or Malcham, appears to have been one of the most ancient deities of Western Asia. It was especially honoured by the Ammonites and Phœnicians; the latter seem to have identified it with Baal. Human sacrifices were offered up to it; and the mode in which these were offered, at least in later times was as follows:—A brazen statue of the deity with stretched-out arms was heated by means of an internal furnace. The child was then placed in the outstretched arms, and was thus roasted alive. In the days of Solomon a statue of Molech was erected in the valley of the Kidron, at the eastern base of Mount Moriah. The cruelties there enacted, and the curse entailed by them, are mentioned in Je. 7. 31-34.—P.]

4 The enormities forbidden in ch. xviii. are here declared punishable with death. This punishment, it is supposed, was in many cases inflicted by strangling; in other cases, stoning is appointed; and where the death is declared to be by burning, it is supposed, not burning alive, but consuming the body by fire, after death by stoning. In the case of Achan, he was first stoned to death, though the punishment ordered was that of burning, Jos. 7. 25, 26. The punishment of adultery by death was not peculiar in eastern countries to the law of Moses. On the contrary, it seems to have been universal among them. Besides the greatness of the crime itself, it led, in the jealous and revengeful passions which it excited, to assassinations and bloody quarrels.—P.]

Ver. 4. [But should not charity cover, rather than publish or punish, 'the multitude of sins?' 1 Pe. 4. 8. Yes; charity (fervent charity among yourselves) shall cover the multitude of sins against one another, but may not interfere with the offences of idolatrous murder, which is an offence against God. Such was the judicial law of the Jewish state; the church of Christ has the same law in principle, but with spiritual penalties, because she is spiritual, 1 Co. 5. 5; 10. 20; 2 Co. 6. 14; Ep. 5. 11. Ver. 20. [Childless has, by some, been supposed to signify, that the guilty parties should suffer death, and so have no children, but this is inconsistent with possible circumstances, as, for example, the crime might be committed in a strange land, where the Jewish law, were it even death, could not be enforced; or the crime might be concealed, so that the infliction of the penalty would not be attempted. By comparing the passage with Je. 22. 30, where Coniah is written childless, with 1 Ch. 3. 16, 17, where we find he had a large family (there called Jeconiah); and then returning to Jeremiah, where he defines childless to mean expulsion for ever from the throne he had disgraced by his wickedness, we will be enabled to conclude that childless necessarily means no more than disinherited descendants are not reckoned to their guilty parents in the public genealogies. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—At what a terrible expense do

Satan's votaries readily serve him!—and shall I count anything too dear for the Lord! Miserable is the state of a nation when the vilest idolatries, inhumanities, and abominations break out; and especially when they pass unpunished: but corrupt nature is prone to evil; the commands of God are therefore enforced with the most awful penalties and threatenings of death; and filthy pleasures infallibly issue in fearful punishments: nor are any more exposed to the severe indignation of God than those professors who wilfully imitate the profane world. But honourable, pleasant, and profitable is a course of universal holiness; especially amidst a multitude of temptations and examples to the contrary: and delightful is the study of it, when God, any manner of living thing that creepeth<sup>7</sup> on the ground, which I have separated from you as unclean.

26 And ye shall be holy unto me: for I the LORD am holy, and have severed you from other people, <sup>m</sup>that ye should be mine.

27 ¶ A<sup>m</sup> man also or woman, that hath a familiar spirit, or that is a wizard, shall surely be put to death: they shall stone <sup>o</sup>them with stones; their blood shall be upon them.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Of the priests' mourning. 6 Of their holiness. 7, 13 Of their marriages. 9 Of a priest's daughter convicted of playing the harlot. 16 The priests that have blemishes must not minister in the sanctuary.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, "Speak unto the priests the sons of Aaron, and say unto them, <sup>o</sup>There shall none be defiled for the dead among his people:

2 But for his kin that is near unto him, that is, for his mother, and for his father, and for his son, and for his daughter, and for his brother,

3 And for his sister a virgin, that is nigh unto him, which hath had no husband; for her may he be defiled.

4 But he shall not defile himself, <sup>o</sup>being a chief man among his people, to profane himself.

6 ¶ They shall <sup>o</sup>be holy unto their God, and not profane the name of their God: for the offerings of the LORD made by fire, and the bread of their God, they do offer; therefore they shall be holy.

7 ¶ They<sup>d</sup> shall not take a wife that is a whore, or profane; neither shall they take a woman put away from her husband: for he is holy unto his God.

8 Thou shalt <sup>o</sup>sanctify him therefore; for he offereth<sup>h</sup> the bread of thy God: he shall be holy unto thee: for I the LORD, which sanctify you, am holy.

3 Such barbarous exhibitions of frantic grief are not uncommon among eastern nations. Even Mohammedans in the present day who profess the sanctity, and some other sects, including a few Christians, cut and disfigure themselves, as proofs of devotion to their God. 4 This terrible punishment to be inflicted in this case, was intended to prevent and punish the disgrace that would accrue to religion from such a crime in a priest's daughter: as it would operate as a severe restraint not only upon the priests' children, but would make them daily careful to bring them up in the fear of God.—F.

5 Whenever the high-priest was attending or officiating in the sanctuary, he must not go out on any occasion whatever to leave the service of the living God; nor profane himself by engaging in common employment, or such as would render him ceremonially unclean. The reason assigned, viz. that the crown of the anointing oil of his God is upon him, intimates that more is expected from the Lord's high-priest than from others, because his 'anointing' was typical of the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit, and was a crown of glory and diadem of beauty; and might denote, being an anointed priest, also his prophetic and regal character as a type of Christ.—F.

23 Only<sup>a</sup> he shall not go in unto the vail,

CHAPTER XXI. [Ver. 1. Defiled—by touching the dead body, entering the house where it lay, following to the grave, or mourning.—Patrick. This prohibition extended to every common priest, except in cases of near kindred, in which, however, though he might be defiled, by the unavoidable demands of affection, still he must not voluntarily defile himself farther. The entire priesthood was a type of Christ, who was 'undefiled and separate from sinners,' He. 7. 26; yet was not ashamed to call his church for which he gave himself, Ep. 5. 25, brethren, He. 2. 11, and who, 'himself having suffered, being tempted, was able (by sympathy and power) to succour them that are tempted.' C.]

Ver. 7. [This verse would seem to imply the possibility of such moral degradation in the priesthood as, to modern ideas, may appear impossible. But it was necessary to guard against the infectious example of the heathen priests, who, in their impure rites, prostituted their wives and daughters. The Mosaic law is even more morally stringent than our translation represents, for zarah does not signify a prostitute, but one who had been humbled.—He is holy—not the husband, but the priest, who, whatever might be his personal character, was ceremonially holy, or dedicated to God, and should be personally holy in accordance with his profession. C.]

Ver. 12. [High-priest, literally, the priest, the great one, who, in respect of his greatness, was the emblem of Christ exalted, with 'a name above every name.' Now, as Christ 'endured the cross for the joy set before him,' He. 12. 2, and was 'anointed with the oil of gladness,' He. 1. 9, a mourning high-priest would not have fitly represented him to the eye of faith. Neither might the high-priest go out of the sanctuary; so Christ, once exalted, 'the heavens must receive till the times of the restitution of all things,' Ac. 3. 21, when he will appear the second time without sin to salvation, He. 9. 28. C.]

Ver. 14. [This peculiarity in the marriage of the high-priest is the emblem of the spiritual marriage of Christ with his church, so beautifully set forth in Scripture. See particularly Is. 54. 5; Ho. 2. 7, 16 (This signifies my husband); 2 Co. 11. 2. C.]

Ver. 17. [Blemish, deficiency, redundancy, or injury of any bodily member, blindness, imperfection of growth, or any unclean disease, excluded from the priesthood, and constituted, as it were, a providential excommunication, not from certain sacred privileges, but from sacred offices. This ordinance forms, 1. A beautiful image of Christ, the 'lamb without blemish,' 1 Pe. 1. 19. 2. Of the holy priesthood (of the church, appointed) 'to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ,' 1 Pe. 2. 5; while, 3. It reads, in the name of God, a solemn rebuke to those parents who, from worldly motives, dedicate the most incompetent members of their families to the service of God in the holy ministry, and to those who, from similar worldly motives, enter into a work for which they know themselves incompetent, and to which they feel no call from the Spirit of God. C.]

Ver. 23. [The priest with a blemish may eat of the holy things, the priest unclean must not taste, lest he die, ch. 7. 20; 21. 2. The reason of the distinction is plain—a blemish is the infliction or correction of God, nor come nigh unto the altar, because he hath a blemish; that he profane not my sanctuaries: for I the LORD do sanctify them.

24 And Moses told it unto Aaron, and to his sons, and unto all the children of Israel.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Speak unto Aaron, and to his sons, that they separate themselves<sup>1</sup> from the holy things of the children of Israel, and that they profane not my holy name in those things which they hallow<sup>b</sup> unto me: I am the LORD.

3 Say unto them, Whosoever he be of all your seed, among your generations, that goeth unto the holy things, which the children of Israel hallow unto the LORD, having his uncleanness upon him, that soul shall be cut off from my presence: I am the LORD.

4 What<sup>c</sup> man soever of the seed of Aaron is a leper, or hath a running issue,<sup>2</sup> he shall not eat of the holy things, until he be clean. And whoso toucheth any thing that is unclean by the dead, or a man whose seed goeth from him;

5 Or whosoever toucheth any creeping thing, whereby he may be made unclean, or a man of whom he may take uncleanness, whatsoever uncleanness he hath;

6 The soul which hath touched any such shall be unclean until even, and shall not eat of the holy things, unless he wash his flesh with water.

7 And when the sun is down,<sup>3</sup> he shall be clean, and shall afterward eat of the holy things; because it is his food.

8 That<sup>d</sup> which dieth of itself, or is torn with beasts, he shall not eat, to defile himself therewith: I am the LORD.

9 They shall therefore keep mine ordinance, lest they bear sin for it, and die therefore, if they profane it:<sup>4</sup> I the LORD do sanctify them.

10 ¶ There shall no stranger eat of the holy thing: a sojourner of the priest, or an hired servant, shall not eat of the holy thing.

for which church privileges are the appropriate remedy; uncleanness is the wicked choice of the sinner's own will, and would be sanctioned and encouraged by latitudinarian church-fellowship. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—In these ceremonial figures I behold Jesus, my priest for ever, untainted with selfish affections or immoderate passions—I behold him holy, harmless, and undefiled—perfect as his Father who is in heaven is perfect; personally united with an unspotted manhood; graciously united to virgin churches; and spiritually married to washed and sanctified souls; nor ever decoyed from attending his work, no, not by the most powerful temptations. Let me learn likewise what noted examples gospel-ministers ought to be of holiness and purity; what close and earnest attention they ought to give to their work; with what patience and resignation they ought to bear the loss of worldly comforts; how circumspect they ought to be with respect to their marriage and family; and how, as servants, they ought to labour to be perfect and unblemished, even as their Master. Yea, if I name the name of Christ, whatever be my place in his church, let me depart from iniquity, and follow after holiness in all manner of conversation. While God is my portion, as well as my Master, on no account should I desert or neglect his worship; and while my God liveth, never should I sorrow for deceased relations, or withdrawn comforts, as those who have no hope. Since I am a child of Jesus, let me never by whorish pollutions or apostasy discredit him or endanger myself. Since I am betrothed to him, let me never wittingly lay his enemy, an heir of hell, in my bosom. And since God hath promised to supply all my wants, let me cast my cares on him, and firmly trust that he will perfect his work which concerneth me, rendering me perfect, even as my Father which is in heaven is perfect. And let me bless the Lord, that though my infirmities should disqualify me for office in the church, they do not debar me from partaking of Jesus, my sacred provision, in the courts and ordinances of his grace.

THE DRAWER OF WATER FROM THE NILE—THE METHOD OBSERVED IN THE DAYS OF MOSES. [LEVITICUS, xxii: 1.]—We give this picture simply because it illustrates a scene in the land of Moses, and the view we have is a characteristic scene. It is not modern; it is just the very method of drawing water observed in the days of Moses. Labor is so cheap in Egypt and modern machinery so expensive, that labor-saving machines have not yet been introduced into Egypt. Even merchandise can be transported on the backs of camels more cheaply than by railway. The cheapest thing in Egypt is human muscle, and until the Egyptians are educated to a higher plane of life, they will draw water as they have always done. This water is used for irrigating the soil. It is taken from the Nile and poured into little trenches cut through the land, and from these it is emptied into other trenches, until whole squares of the soil are irrigated.

CAIRO FROM THE CITADEL—NEAR WHERE THE ISRAELITES SOJOURNED IN EGYPT. [Leviticus, xxiv:1.]—We are viewing this city from the Citadel, which is a small town in itself, and was built by Mohammed Ali. From the Citadel we have a fine view of Cairo. The pyramids are in the distance to the west, and the Nile is seen winding its way toward the sea between. Cairo has a population of about 500,000. It has absorbed into itself and may be called the modern representative of Memphis and Heliopolis, and the surrounding cities of ancient times. The Khedive spends part of the year here. Cairo was the home of the distinguished pasha who aided DeLesseps in opening the Suez canal. It is a strange commentary upon history that this region, once swept by the Pharaohs, should now be under the dominion of a Christian nation. The English soldier is seen on all sides in Cairo.

<sup>3</sup> It was a typical feast. It is supposed by many that our blessed Saviour was born about the time of this feast; then he left his mansion of light above to 'tabernacle among us,' Jn. 1. 14; and he dwelt in booths. And the worship of God under the New Testament is prophesied of under the notion of keeping the feast of tabernacles, Zec. 14. 16.

For (1) The gospel of Christ is to dwell in tabernacles, to sit loose to this world as those who have here no continuing city. (2) It teaches us to 'rejoice before the Lord our God.' Those are the circumcised, Israelites indeed, that always 'rejoice in Christ Jesus,' Phi. 3. 3.

3 Without<sup>b</sup> the veil of the testimony, in the tabernacle of the congregation, shall Aaron order it from the evening unto the morning before the LORD continually: 'it shall be a statute for ever in your generations.

4 He shall order the lamps upon 'the pure candlestick before the LORD continually.

5 ¶ And thou shalt take fine flour, and bake 'twelve cakes thereof: two tenth-deals shall be in one cake.

6 And thou shalt 'set them in two rows, six on a row, upon the 'pure table before the LORD.

7 And thou shalt put 'pure frankincense upon each row, that it may be on the bread 'for a memorial, even an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

8 Every sabbath he shall 'set it in order before the LORD continually, being taken from the children of Israel by an everlasting covenant.<sup>4</sup>

9 And 'it shall be Aaron's and his sons'; and they shall eat it in the holy place: for it is most holy unto him of the offerings of the LORD made by fire, by a perpetual statute.

10 ¶ And the son of an Israelitish woman, <sup>m</sup>whose father was an Egyptian, went out among the children of Israel; and this son of the Israelitish woman and a man of Israel strove together in the camp:

11 And the Israelitish woman's son 'blasphemed the name of the LORD, and cursed. And they 'brought him unto Moses; (and his mother's name was Shelomith, the daughter of Dibri, of the tribe of Dan;)

12 And they 'put him in ward, that the mind of the LORD might be showed them.<sup>5</sup>

soul. Yea, they represent to me how his people, and their services offered through him, are the delight of his Father, and the joy of his own heart. In the first-fruits of barley and flour let me behold Jesus in his debasement and glory, as having in all things the pre-eminence, sanctifying the whole harvest of lost men, and all their fruits of righteousness; and as offered to be the present and endless nourishment of my soul. Let them also figure out the lovers of God, who are first-fruits to God and the Lamb; and their ready and acceptable service. In the passover I discern him as our passover sacrificed for us. In the feast of unleavened bread, I see him, as through his whole life, a man of sorrows; but holy, harmless, and undefiled. In pentecost, I behold him exhibited as the law-fulfiller in the apostolic period for the salvation of multitudes. In the feast of trumpets, I hear the gospel sound, from morning to evening of the Christian period, proclaiming a full salvation, through a crucified Redeemer, to all the ends of the earth. In the fast of expiation, I again behold him finishing transgression, and making an end of sin, the sin of a whole lost world, in one day; and having by himself purged away our sins, sitting down at the right hand of the majesty in the heavens, there to appear in the presence of God for us. And in the feast of tabernacles he is prefigured as tabernacling in our nature and world, that we might have familiar fellowship with him, particularly in the apostolic and millennial, but chiefly in the eternal period. Let me bless the Lord for such manifold memorials of Jesus; and especially that our privileges under the gospel are still more excellent, our enemies themselves being judges. Let me observe holy seasons in a holy manner. Let the Sabbaths of the Lord be kept in all our hearts, in all our dwellings, and by all under our care. Let us honour the Lord with the first-fruits of all our substance. While kind to strangers, to the poor and destitute, let us hearken to the joyful sound of salvation to miserable sinners; and, looking on Jesus Christ as crucified for us, let us afflict our souls till God himself wipe away all tears from our eyes; and when our harvest and vintage of labours are ended, then shall we commemorate with pleasure our hardships by the way, and rejoice to change them for an eternal weight of glory.

CHAPTER XXIV. [Ver. 11. Blasphemed the NAME, as it stands in the Hebrew, the words 'of the Lord' being supplied by the translators. The Hebrew for blaspheme signifies to gore, as a beast with a horn; to pierce as with a sharp instrument: so it is translated, Is. 36. 6, and well representing the mixture of contempt and hatred of God from which blasphemy springs. The name is evidently that of the Angel of the covenant, of whom God had said, Ex. 23. 21, 'Provoke him not, for MY NAME is in him': this was he of whom the apostle spoke, Ac. 3. 16, 'There is none other name given under heaven, amongst men, whereby we must be saved.' This is he who 'by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than the angels,' He. 1. 4, even 'a name that is above every name,' Phi. 2. 9. All that heard the blasphemer were commanded to lay their hands upon his head, (1) to identify his person; (2) to testify to his guilt; (3) to witness the great truth that sin is worthy of death; (4) to admit the guilt of the whole congregation, were they authoritatively to sanction sin by silence, acquiescence, or approval; and (5) to represent its transference from the congregation to the guilty individual condemned and put to death by command of God, and the concurrence of the congregation.—Note, (1) How careful should Christians be, lest by any timid silence in the sight of the wicked, Ps. 39. 1, 2, by any failure of just and loving reproof, or by any act of joining with them or approval of them, Ep. 5. 11, they should become 'partakers of other men's sins,' 1 Ti. 2. 22. (2) Let blasphemers recollect that awful intimation, Mat. 12. 36; and if 'for every idle word,' then how for every blasphemous word, will they be able to 'give account in the day of judgment?' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—While in Jesus' light I see light, and feed upon him, especially from Sabbath to Sabbath, let me essay to give light in his church, and be a good savour of Christ, in the feeding of his people with the true bread which cometh down from heaven. Let such as desire to enjoy gospel light never grudge the necessary expenses of it. And never let the pure oil of divine truth be adulterated with the fancies of men. What a mercy is it that they who come to God find a table spread for them in the wilderness; and that on every Sabbath ministers are to provide fresh provision for the souls of their people!—That the saints, in one generation after another, are set upon the table of the church, and especially on Christ, to the honour and delight of JEHOVAH! Let me further observe, that a graceless offspring is often the fruit of an unhallowed marriage; that quarrels usually end ill; and that judges ought to act with deliberation, and yet with impartiality and zeal. 1 tremble, therefore, at the load of uncontrolled blasphemy which lies unpardoned on Britain; since men have spared the heaven-daring miscreants, till they are so common, that stones would almost be 14 Bring forth him that hath cursed <sup>without</sup> the camp, and let all that heard him lay their hands upon his head, and let all the congregation <sup>stone</sup> him.

15 And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, 'Whosoever curseth his God shall bear his sin.

16 And he that blasphemeth the name of the LORD, he shall surely be put to death, and all the congregation shall certainly stone him: as well the stranger, as he that is born in the land, when he blasphemeth the name of the LORD, shall be put to death.

17 ¶ And<sup>a</sup> he that killeth<sup>b</sup> any man<sup>c</sup> shall surely be put to death.

19 And if a man cause a blemish in his neighbour; as he hath done, so shall it be done to him;

20 Breach for breach, eye for eye, tooth for tooth: as he hath caused a blemish in a man, so shall it be done to him again.

21 And he that killeth a beast, he shall restore it: and he that killeth a man, he shall be put to death.

22 Ye shall have <sup>one</sup> manner of law, as well for the stranger,<sup>e</sup> as for one of your own country: for I am the LORD your God.

23 ¶ And Moses spake unto the children of Israel, that they should bring forth him that had cursed out of the camp, and <sup>stone</sup> him with stones. And the children of Israel did as the LORD commanded Moses.<sup>f</sup>

9 Strangers, as well as native Israelites, were to receive the benefit of the law declared in ver. 21, if they suffered wrong, and should suffer the penalty if they did the wrong. It seems also intended here, that strangers as well as native Israelites should suffer the punishment due to blasphemy. Henry here says, 'God would hereby show that provision he had made for man's safety, in punishing those which are enemies to him (God), which should be an argument with magistrates to be jealous for his honour, and to punish those that blasphemed his name.' -I.

5 The year of jubilee was to be called from the Hebrew word jobel, which signifies primarily 'a ram's horn,' and then the sound produced by it. 'The year of jubilee' then is just the year of the blowing of the horn; and is thus analogous in name to the 'feast of trumpets.' The origin of the name is stated in ver. 9. Every fiftieth year, calculated apparently from the time when they obtained complete possession of Canaan, was a jubilee. The jubilee year followed immediately on the sabbatical year, so that there were two fallow years occurring together. The three principal enactments for the year of jubilee were as follows:—1. Rest for the soil of the whole country. 2. The reversion of all property to its original owners. 3. Freedom of all slaves among the Israelites. It was, therefore, a year in which God emphatically and mercifully asserted his supreme and sovereign right to and lordship over every creature and every thing. -P.

(6) It set forth the rest (the sabbatism, keeping of sabbath) that 'remaineth for the people of God,' He. 4. 9;—'Even so, come, Lord Jesus,' Re. 22. 20. C.]

Ver. 9. Jubilee: the derivation of this word is uncertain; the facts included are plain. Some derive it from jubil, the inventor of musical instruments, Ge. 4. 21, and suppose it to intimate the music of the trumpet with which it was to be introduced; others, as Rabbi Kimchi, derive it from jobel, signifying a ram's horn, because it was proclaimed with trumpets of rams' horns; others derive it from jabal, to restore, because, in the year of jubilee, possessions were restored to their original owners. The Septuagint accordingly renders it remission, and Josephus liberty. Another etymology derives it from jubil, a stream, because, like the stream of time, it carried all things along with it. The English word jubilee is derived immediately from the Latin jubilo, to rejoice with shouting. It is an institute eminently typical of Christ, as the particulars will demonstrate. C.]

Ver. 10. [The Jew might be compelled to surrender his own freedom; he might sell his children, or they might be arrested in payment of their father's debt, see ver. 39; Ex. 21. 2, 7, 8; 2 Ki. 4. 1. But while this compulsory sale of freedom was intended, and admirably calculated, to prevent fraudulent debts, or punish fraudulent debtors; the law of the year of release, Ex. 15. 12, and of the jubilee, was equally calculated to prevent the granting of fraudulent credits, with a view to enslave either the debtor or his family. Viewed as a political institute, the power of parents over their children's freedom amounts not to more than the power of apprenticeship: common, and even necessary, in all civilized nations. The proclamation of liberty was a lovely emblem of our deliverance from 'the bondage of corruption' into 'the glorious liberty of the sons of God,' Ro. 8. 21; and a glorious type of our great 8 ver. 15. 16. The prices, whether of lands or Hebrew servants, were always to be stated according to the distance of the year of jubilee; and the less the distance the less was to be the price.

9 This was a very equitable law, both for the sojourner to whom the man was sold, and to the Israelite who had been thus sold. The Israelite might redeem himself, or one of his kindred might redeem him; but this must not be done to the prejudice of the master the sojourner. They were therefore to reckon the years he must have served from that time till the jubilee; and then taking the current wages of a servant per year at that time, multiply the remaining years by that sum, and the aggregate was the sum to be given to his master for his redemption. The Jews held that the kindred of such a person were bound to redeem him, lest he should be swallowed up among the heathen; and we find from Ne. 5. 8 that this was done by the Jews on their return from the Babylonish captivity. 'We, after our ability, have redeemed our brethren the Jews, who were sold unto the heathen.'—L.

16 There is a kind of sentimentalism in these days existing in the minds of some good people which leads them to exclude the ignorant ideas of temporal benefit and blessing as resulting from a faithful observance of God's law. They think it savours of the world, and they imagine that it can only spring from the selfishness of the human heart. Such a view has no sanction in the Word of God. It is in direct opposition to this and many kindred passages. Pr. 3. 9; Mal. 3. 10-12; Mat. 6. 33; Mar. 10. 30. It is even a reflection upon the wisdom, love, and power of God.—P.

CHAPTER XXVI.

1 Against idolatry. 2 Religiousness. 3 A blessing is promised to them that keep the commandments. 14 A curse is denounced against those that break them. 40 God promiseth to remember those that repent.

YE shall make you <sup>no</sup> idols nor graven image, neither rear you up a standing <sup>image</sup>, neither shall ye set up any image of stone<sup>2</sup> in your land, to bow down unto it: for I am the LORD your God.<sup>3</sup>

expedients, but by eternal principles: but it is to be explained and defended on its own merits, which are these. (1) These services were bought at their just price; not from men-stealers, traffickers condemned of God, Ex. 21. 16, but from the parties themselves. (2) They might be redeemed or manumitted without any legal hindrance, as is evident from the case provided for, Ex. 19. 20. (3) They are under the protection of the law, Jos. 9. 20, 21. (4) By comparing Ju. 1. 27, 28, 30, 33, 35, with 1 Ki. 9. 20, 21, the bond-service, in a most remarkable instance, will be found a mere rent-charge or tribute, either in labour or money, in return for the possession of houses or lands. And farther, from Ezr. 2. 21; Ne. 7. 5, 6, 57, 61; 10. 28, compared with Ex. 12. 44, and with the everlasting covenant with Abraham, Ge. 17. 12, 13, 27, it will appear that bond-servants were (as in the case of Solomon's servants) legally incorporated with the church and kingdom, and entitled to all the covenant privileges of Abraham's lineal descendants. (5) By the Mosaic law every servant, and therefore, in a special manner, the privileged bond-servant, was protected by law from every form of oppression, De. 24. 14, 18. Now a system of servitude, under these restrictions and with these privileges, cannot in any sense be called slavery, nor be employed to countenance slavery; nor does it require any apologetic explanation; for, as God authorized it, it was a system both of mercy and justice; for man's perversion of it, neither explanation, apology, nor defence can be offered. C.

REFLECTIONS.—While in these sabbatical years I call to mind the happiness of Adam in paradise, and by faith discern the rest, the liberty, the happiness, the common salvation of a spiritual state, of the gospel period, and of the celestial state, all accepting Jesus' atoning blood, and published and offered to us in the gospel, may I be disengaged from all undue affection to created comforts, and never hasten to be rich, but depend on God for daily bread, in following the ways of religion and charity. In view of my eternal jubilee, let me consider wisely the cases of the poor; study equity in all my dealings; and stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ has made me free. Blessed be his glorious name—though I have forfeited all my happiness—though I have sold myself a bond-servant to Satan and my lusts—my kinsman-redeemer Christ has paid all my debt, all my ransom! And whom the Son hath made free, they are free indeed! Let me adore his goodness, that, while almost all the world are wilfully in bondage, the true and faithful, according to the Spirit, are made the Lord's freemen.

CHAPTER XXVI. Ver. 1-46. This chapter, which mostly corresponds with De. xxviii., is a summary of the oracles and providences of God relative to the Jewish nation. In the first part of it we have a summary of much of the contents of those promises already met with, and of the whole of those hereafter contained in the Bible, with respect to the Jewish nation. All the prosperity they met with in the days of Joshua, the judges, the kings, the deputies of the Persian, Grecian, or Roman powers, were but the fulfilment of these predictions. In the second part of it we have a summary of all the threatenings which relate to their nation, whether denounced by Moses, the prophets, Christ, or his apostles. All the miseries which that nation endured under the judges, kings, Chaldeans, Persians, Greeks, and Romans, for about fifteen hundred years—and all the miseries they have endured in their present dispersion among the Gentiles, which have already continued above eighteen hundred years, without any interruption—is but a literal accomplishment of them. The third part has been, in some measure, verified in some of their former deliverances; especially in the mercies which they received in their return from Babylon, and afterwards until the time of Christ. But we expect a more full accomplishment of it in the latter days, when the Jews shall be converted to the Christian faith, and replaced in their own land. —[Ver. 5. Because God's temporal promises and threatenings were so many, some have thoughtlessly asserted that he urged not the doctrine of a future state; but they who assert this omission 'do err, not knowing the Scriptures,' for when we examine the wondrous catalogue of promises commencing ver. 4, we find at least twelve distinct temporal blessings; but, in addition to these, God promises, ver. 9, his covenant to be established. Now, that covenant was everlasting, not merely with successive generations, but with Abraham individually, personally, Ge. 17. 7, 9, 10. Now, if the covenant between God and Abraham was everlasting, Abraham therein inherited everlasting life; and Israel, in the establishment of that covenant, received the doctrine and the promise of immortality, as well as of the temporal blessings with which it was accompanied, see 1 Ti. 4. 8. Then, turning to the awful threatenings that follow, ver. 16, we find God declaring, ver. 30, 'I will cast your carcasses (dead bodies) upon the carcasses of your idols, and my soul shall abhor you;' that is, you, still living—not them, the carcasses which are dead; a distinct announcement that, 'as it is appointed unto men once to die, so after that the judgment,' He. 9. 27.—Ver. 11. This was typically commenced when the tabernacle service was set up in the wilderness; really commenced when 'the Word became flesh, and dwelt (tabernacled) among us,' Jn. 1. 14; and it will be completed in the 'new heavens and the new earth,' when the great voice shall proclaim, 'Behold the tabernacle of God is with men,' Re. 21. 1, 3.—Ver. 31. Sanctuary signifies a holy place;

5 And your <sup>1</sup>thrashing shall reach unto the vintage, and the vintage shall reach unto the sowing time:<sup>5</sup> and ye <sup>2</sup>shall eat your bread to the full, and dwell in your land safely.

6 And <sup>3</sup>I will give peace in the land, and ye shall lie down, and none shall make you afraid: and I will <sup>4</sup>rid<sup>6</sup> evil beasts out of the land, neither shall the sword go through your land.

7 And ye shall <sup>1</sup>chase your enemies, and they shall fall before you by the sword.

8 And five of you shall chase an hundred, and an hundred of you shall put ten thousand to flight; and your enemies shall fall before you by the sword.<sup>7</sup>

9 For I will <sup>1</sup>have respect unto you, and make you fruitful, and multiply you, and <sup>2</sup>establish my covenant with you.

10 And ye shall eat <sup>3</sup>old store, and bring forth the old because of the new.<sup>8</sup>

11 And <sup>1</sup>I will set my tabernacle among you: and my soul shall not abhor you.

12 And <sup>2</sup>I will walk among you, and will be your God, and ye shall be my people.

13 <sup>1</sup>I am the LORD your God, which brought you forth out of the land of Egypt, that ye should not be their bond-men; and I have broken the bands of your yoke, and made you go upright.

14 <sup>1</sup>But<sup>a</sup> if ye will not hearken unto me, and will not do all these commandments;

15 And if ye <sup>2</sup>shall despise my statutes, or if your soul abhor my judgments, so that ye will not do all my commandments, but that ye break<sup>a</sup> my covenant:

16 I also will do this unto you; I will even appoint<sup>a</sup> over you<sup>9</sup> terror, consumption, and the burning ague, that shall consume the eyes, and cause sorrow of heart: and ye shall sow your seed in vain; for your enemies shall eat it.<sup>1</sup> and though, after the time of David, Israel had but one divinely authorised temple, in Jerusalem, yet from the days of Moses till that time there had been several, which God sanctioned according to their unsettled circumstances, Jos. 18. 1; 1 Sa. 1. 3; 7. 2; 21. 1; 1 Ch. 6. 31; 15. 1; 16. 1. These were, all in their turn, brought into that desolation in which they still remain, a warning to Christian churches to 'repent and do the first works, lest the Lord come unto them quickly, and fight against them with the sword of his mouth,' Re. 2. 5, 16.—Ver. 35. The law of the Sabbath amongst the Jews was propounded upon the strongest of all reasons—the example and hallowing of God; was delivered with the utmost particularity of detail; was accompanied with the largest promises, Is. 56. 2; 58. 13, 14; was enforced by the heaviest penalties, Ne. 13. 18; Eze. 20. 13, 21, 33; and yet, as with their other laws, it was soon made void, Ne. 13. 15, 21; Eze. 20. 12, 13; 22. 8; Am. 8. 5. Now for this criminal violation of the divine ordinance, God sent the 'king of the Chaldees' to fulfil the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah, until the land had enjoyed her sabbaths,<sup>2</sup> 2 Ch. 36. 21. Now Christian nations, upon sound warrant of Scripture, have adopted the weekly memorial of the resurrection of Christ to be their Sabbath; and since the new covenant is ordered, not only upon better promises, He. 8. 6, but is fenced with heavier penalties, He. 2. 2, 3; 10. 24-31, it deeply interests both rulers and people to contemplate the sabbatical judgments of Israel; and 'if' (on the very account of sabbath violation) 'God spared not the natural branches, let them take heed lest he also spare not them,' Ro. 11. 21. C.—The present state of Palestine is a remarkable and melancholy commentary on this whole prophetic curse:—The 'high places' of Shiloh, Bethel, and Dan are utterly destroyed; the great cities of Samaria, Capernaum, Jericho, Caesarea, and a host of others, are waste, without inhabitant; the richest and best portions of the land—Philistia, Sharon, Esdraelon, the valley of the Jordan, Bashan, &c.—are entirely desolate; the remnant of the Israelites themselves are homeless wanderers in the lands of their enemies, while their enemies, who now occupy that country which God gave to Abraham, are astonished at its desolation. P.—Ver. 38. A threatening wonderfully verified in the loss of the ten tribes, 2 Ki. 17. 6, who have been sought for in vain both by Jews and Christians: the proofs in favour of the Affghans and American Indians being very questionable, and, at best, accompanied with no approach to certainty: see Simon's Hope of Israel; Wolff's Journal, 1831-34; Rose's Scripture Researches; Cotton's Tour to the American Lakes, &c.—Ver. 41. As circumcision was the sign and seal of God's covenant with Abraham, Ge. 17. 11; Ro. 4. 11, an uncircumcised heart was on them that had not received the grace signified, 'the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh,' 1 Col. 2. 11.—Ver. 45. That the threatenings against the Jews have been fulfilled to the uttermost, is a visible and undeniable fact; that the promises will likewise be fulfilled, God has pledged his covenant word; that Christians should feel more deeply, pray more fervently, and sacrifice more liberally than hitherto for the conversion of Israel to Jesus the Messiah, is acknowledged. From the sign of awakened and increasing interest in their behalf, there is reason to 'thank God and take courage.' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—How strict is the connection between holiness and happiness! Manifest are the blessings of those who, in a gospel manner, obey God's laws, and great is the favour of God towards them, and intimate his presence with them. His celestial influences produce spiritual gifts and holy dispositions, and the peace of God keeps their hearts and minds through Christ Jesus. Their enemies, sin, Satan, the world, and death, are vanquished in him, and the covenant of God stands fast with them for ever and ever. But how dreadful the punishment of such as are obstinate in wickedness! While they wickedly proceed from evil to worse, the judgments of God justly increase in their number and degree; and such as remain unhumiliated under afflictions from God, and convictions from their own conscience, have nothing to expect but wrath to the uttermost. Such as dare to contend with their Maker will find the struggle most in fury; and I, even I, will chastise you seven times for your sins.

29 And ye shall eat the flesh of your sons, and the flesh of your daughters shall ye eat.<sup>5</sup>

30 And I will <sup>m</sup>destroy your high places, and <sup>a</sup>cut down your images, and <sup>c</sup>cast your carcasses upon the carcasses of your idols, and my soul shall abhor you.

31 And I will <sup>m</sup>make your cities waste, and bring your sanctuaries unto desolation, and I will <sup>a</sup>not smell the savour of your sweet odours.

32 And I will <sup>m</sup>bring the land into desolation; and your enemies which dwell therein shall be astonished at it.

33 And I will <sup>a</sup>scatter you among the heathen, and will draw out a sword after you; and your land shall be desolate, and your cities waste.

34 Then <sup>a</sup>shall the land enjoy her sabbaths, as long as it lieth desolate, and ye <sup>be</sup> in your enemies' land; <sup>even</sup> then shall the land rest, and enjoy her sabbaths.

35 As long as it lieth desolate it shall rest; because it did <sup>a</sup>not rest in your sabbaths when ye dwelt upon it.

36 And upon them that are left alive of you I will send a <sup>a</sup>faintness into their hearts in the lands of their enemies; and the sound of a shaken leaf shall chase them; and they shall flee, as fleeing from a sword; and they shall fall when none pursueth.

37 And they shall fall one upon another, as it were before a sword, when none pursueth: and ye shall have no power to stand before your enemies.

38 And ye shall <sup>a</sup>perish among the heathen, and the land of your enemies shall eat you up.

39 And they that are left of you shall <sup>a</sup>pine away in their iniquity in your enemies' lands; and also in the iniquities of their fathers shall they pine away with them.<sup>6</sup>

40 ¶ If they shall <sup>a</sup>confess their iniquity, and the iniquity of their fathers, with their trespass which they trespassed against me, and that also they have walked contrary unto me;

41 And that I also have walked contrary unto them, and have brought them into the land of their enemies; if then <sup>b</sup>their uncircumcised hearts be humbled, and they then accept of the punishment of their iniquity:

42 Then will I <sup>a</sup>remember my covenant with 6 A modern historian, if summing up the history and sufferings of the Jews during the past eighteen centuries, could scarcely use language more accurate and graphic than that contained in these verses. The persecutions they endured in Spain, Italy, France, Russia, and Britain, have wonderfully realized the prophetic statement: 'Ye shall perish among the heathen, and the land of your enemies shall eat you up.' Their utter helplessness, their shrinking timidity, their abandonment of every attempt or even thought of defence, have proved the literal truth of the words: 'The sound of a shaken leaf shall chase them; they shall fall when none pursueth; ye shall have no power to stand before your enemies.'—P.

9 It ought to be observed that the prophetic curses are temporal and physical, and that they have been literally fulfilled. The land has been wasted; the cities have been desolated; the people have been dispersed; and their enemies have persecuted them in all lands. By all sound canons of interpretation, therefore, the misses contained in the same prophecy, and uttered in language of the same character and structure, must be understood of literal and physical sense.—P.

unequal. Disappointments, diseases, evil beasts, sword, famine, pestilences, captivity, and, in fine, death and hell, wait to overwhelm them. How dreadful then is the nature of sin! How certain the ruin of impenitent sinners! Aggravated is their guilt whom mercies cannot engage or corrections deter: and God will be just to give up those to despair, and death, in sin, who give up themselves to work wickedness with greediness. But behold how all who return to God, even though late, are graciously received by him! It is his grace, accompanied with his afflictive providences, that softens the stupid and hardened heart, and humbles the sinner; that renders him patient under his troubles, but earnestly anxious to escape from his sins; renders him more solicitous to have the end of afflictions answered than to have the burden of them removed; and then marvellously God remembers mercy in the midst of judgments; and opens to the believing mind a firm foundation of hopes, and gracious source of blessings, in Jesus and his promise of grace! Amidst such fulness of merit, and freedom of promise, none need despair, relying thereon. Blessing God for my pious ancestors, and the benefits I enjoy through them, following in their steps, let me deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, and live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world.

SCENE IN GIZEH MUSEUM—SHOWING A STATUE OF RAMESES II., ONE OF THE OPPRESSORS OF THE ISRAELITES. [Leviticus, xxvii.]—In room 25 of the Gizah Museum there is among many magnificent statues of different Egyptian celebrities a black granite head of a colossal statue of Rameses II. taken from Luxor. Rameses II. is known as one of the oppressors of the Israelites. The man standing to the right of the statue is the guide, E. Brugsch Bey, appointed to conduct our party through the Museum. He was very intelligent and very attentive. This head of Rameses II. was chiseled out of granite 1333 years before Christ was in Egypt with Joseph and His mother. We place this picture here as we have used other pictures to illustrate other chapters in this book because it furnishes a scene from the land of Moses, and by so much as we know the country and the civilization in which he grew up will we be the better able to form a conception of the character of the leader of God's people.

then he shall present himself before the priest, and the priest shall value him; according to his ability that vowed shall the priest value him.

9 ¶ And if it be a beast, whereof men bring an offering unto the LORD, all that any man giveth of such unto the LORD shall be holy.<sup>6</sup>

10 He<sup>9</sup> shall not alter it, nor change it, a good for a bad, or a bad for a good: and if he shall at all change beast for beast, then it and the exchange thereof shall be holy.

11 And if it be any <sup>h</sup>unclean beast,<sup>7</sup> of which they do not offer a sacrifice unto the LORD, then he shall present the beast before the priest:

12 And the priest shall value it, whether it be good or bad: as thou valuest it, who art the priest,<sup>8</sup> so shall it be.

13 But if he will at all redeem it, then he shall add<sup>4</sup> a fifth part thereof unto thy estimation.

14 ¶ And when a man shall <sup>h</sup>sanctify his house to be holy unto the LORD, then the priest shall estimate it, whether it be good or bad: as the priest shall estimate it, so shall it stand.

15 And if he that sanctified it will redeem his house, then he shall add the fifth part of the money of thy estimation unto it, and it shall be his.

16 ¶ And if a man shall sanctify unto the LORD some part<sup>9</sup> of a field of his possession, then thy estimation shall be according to the seed thereof: an homer<sup>1</sup> of barley-seed shall be valued at fifty shekels of silver.<sup>2</sup>

17 If he sanctify his field from the year of jubilee, according to thy estimation it shall stand.

18 But if he <sup>h</sup>sanctify his field after the jubilee, then the priest shall reckon unto him the money according to the years that remain, even unto the year of the jubilee, and it shall be abated from thy estimation.

19 And if he that sanctified the field will in any wise redeem it, then he shall add the fifth part of the money of thy estimation unto it, and it shall be assured to him.

20 And if he will not redeem the field, or if he have sold the field to another man, it shall not be redeemed any more.<sup>3</sup>

13 Though the words some part are supplemental, they are generally admitted to be necessary, as it was not lawful for a man to alienate in this manner his whole patrimony. Good-will to the house of God he was allowed to express, but he was not to impoverish his family.—f.

17 This conditional penalty was for the purpose of preventing fraud in the performance of religious duties, and of fulfilling of vows. Properly speaking it was the produce and not the soil which was dedicated by vow to God. The land remained with the proprietor, who cultivated it, and paid to the sanctuary the valuation price. The owner might neglect to cultivate, and the land would thus be worthless, or he might sell to another till the year of jubilee—the buyer paying a stipulated sum to the sanctuary, and appropriating the surplus. In either case the land itself would be forfeited, and would pass over into the possession of the priests at the jubilee. The object of the measure was to compel the owner to redeem the property at once, so that the sanctuary might receive the full amount of the vow.—f.

Such things could not be thus sanctified, being already dedicated to God, Ex. 13. 2. C. That is to say, 'consecrate by a singular vow,' because the firstling was the Lord's already; it would have been a solemn vow, if he had pretended so to sanctify it, it being already appointed to be sacrificed, if clean, if unclean, the owner might redeem it with its value in money, adding to it a fifth part.—f.

14 The Jews interpret this phrase of a rod, which they say was tinged with ochre, which the door-keeper of the fold held up, and with which he marked every tenth beast indiscriminately as it passed out. It may well be understood of the ordinary shepherd's crook, still in use in pastoral countries; this sense is countenanced by Mi. 7. 14.—C.

21 But the field, when it goeth out in the jubilee, shall be holy unto the LORD, as a field devoted; the possession thereof shall be the priest's.

22 And if a man sanctify unto the LORD a field which he hath bought, which is not of the fields of his possession, 23 Then the priest shall reckon unto him the worth of thy estimation, even unto the year of the jubilee: and he shall give thine estimation in that day, as a holy thing unto the LORD.

24 In the year of the jubilee the field shall return unto him of whom it was bought, even to him to whom the possession of the land did belong.

25 And all thy estimations shall be according to the shekel of the sanctuary:<sup>4</sup> twenty <sup>m</sup>gerahs shall be the shekel.

26 ¶ Only the <sup>h</sup>firstling<sup>5</sup> of the beasts which should be the LORD's firstling, no man shall sanctify it;<sup>6</sup> whether it be ox or sheep: it is the LORD's.

27 And if it be of <sup>h</sup>an unclean beast, then he shall redeem it according to thine estimation, and shall add a fifth part of it thereto; or if it be not redeemed, then it shall be sold according to thy estimation.

28 ¶ Notwithstanding <sup>h</sup>no devoted thing that a man shall devote unto the LORD, of all that he hath, both of man and beast, and of the field of his possession, shall be sold or redeemed: every devoted thing is most holy unto the LORD.

29 None<sup>a</sup> devoted, which shall be devoted of men, shall be redeemed; but shall surely be put to death.

30 ¶ And <sup>h</sup>all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the LORD's: it is holy unto the LORD.

31 And if a man will at all redeem ought of his tithes, he shall add thereto the fifth part thereof.

32 And concerning the tithe of the herd, or of the flock, even of whatsoever <sup>h</sup>passeth under the rod,<sup>7</sup> the tenth shall be holy unto the LORD.

practical Christian rule, there could be no want of witnesses to the heathen, nor of support to them and their families.—Note. We are all devoted in baptism to Father, Son, and Holy Spirit; many at the Lord's table; while many are doubly saved—first, by the 'Lamb without spot,' 1 Pe. 1. 19; secondly, by the 'goodness and mercy that, through his grace, have followed them all the days of their lives,' Ps. 23. 6. Now, as the Jew devoted was brought to the priest to be estimated, let us as 'partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the High-priest of our profession, Christ Jesus,' He. 3. 1; let us come to be estimated, though in utmost poverty, Re. 3. 17, 18; he will not demand beyond our ability, while he supplies the very gifts we are appointed to employ. C.]

Ver. 10. [To promise, to resolve, and to act, not by fixed principles, but by sudden impulses, is dangerous, as it often brings strong temptation to instability and change—two things against which God's children are solemnly guarded, both by example, Ge. 49. 4, and precept, 1 Co. 15. 48; 2 Pe. 3. 17; and against which this ordinance fixes an impassable barrier. C.]

Ver. 29. [It is difficult to imagine how any one, from these words, could have ignorantly or wickedly inferred that the Scripture authorized human sacrifice, or invested any parent with the power of devoting his children to death: surely the merciful law that would not empower a master to injure a servant's tooth ('And if he smite out his man-servant's tooth, or his maid-servant's tooth; he shall let him go free for his tooth's sake,' Ex. 21. 27), would not enable a parent to take away his child's life. Let it be observed then, in explanation, that in ver. 28 the law speaks of man or beast devoted to the Lord, but in ver. 29 it speaks of those who are devoted of men, or from among men, whether devoted by God himself, as were the wicked nations for the crimes of child-murder, idolatry, and total dissolution of morals, Ex. 22. 20; De. 7. 1, 2; 20. 10, 17; 25. 19; 1 Sa. 15. 3; or devoted by the Israelites for similar crimes and implacable enmity, Nu. 21. 23. For these, as for other murderers, the law of God provides no pardon—a terrible emblem of that time and state when there remained no more sacrifice for sin, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation,' He. 10. 27. Thoughtless sinner, think! self-dependent sinner, trusting to to-morrow's repentance, read the awful records, Mat. 25. 10; Lu. 13. 25, and beware lest, at the time of thy purposed return, 'the master may have risen,' and 'the door be shut!'—Note. Some interpret 'be put to death,' not of the actual infliction of that sentence, but of the continuance of service till death; but the words do not seem capable of such translation. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—While in these devoted things I, with wonder, behold Jesus voluntarily devoted, irredeemably devoted to his Father's service in our stead, and saving us by his precious blood, let me be always cheerful and liberal in his work; but let me never be hasty in my vows, lest I involve myself in difficulties, and repent of my rashness. Never let me or bad, neither shall he change it: and if he change it at all, then both it and the change thereof shall be holy; it shall not be redeemed.<sup>8</sup>

THE FOURTH BOOK OF MOSES, CALLED NUMBERS.

This book is so called because it so largely represents the repeated numbering of the Hebrew warriors, Levites, spies, punished transgressors; their oblations, booty, and their journeys, &c., in the wilderness. It contains (1) The principal articles of their history for thirty-nine years; particularly of the numbers, stations, and marching-order of their tribes, i.—iv. ix. x.; the oblations of their princes at the dedication of the tabernacle, vii.; the consecration of the Levites, viii.; observation of the second passover, ix.; departure from Sinai, x.; destruction of the murmurers by a fiery pestilence, and the flesh for which they had lusted—appointment of seventy elders to assist Moses, xi.; Miriam's leprosy and cure, xii.; the search of Canaan by spies, and their punishment for a contempt of that promised land, xiii. xiv.; the punishment of Korah and his companions, and of the people who murmured at it, xvi.; the budding of Aaron's rod, xvii.; the misbehaviour of Moses and Aaron when the people murmured at Kadesh—refusal of a passage by the Edomites—and the death of Miriam and Aaron, xx.; the victory over Arad—plague of fiery serpents, and cure of their bites—conquest and division of the kingdoms of Sihon and Og, xxi. xxxii.; the repeated attempts of Balak and Balaam to curse the Israelites, and God's defeating of them, xxii.—xxiv.; the enticement of the Israelites to whoredom and idolatry by Midianitish women, and the revenge thereof in the death of twenty-four thousand Israelites, and the almost utter destruction of the Midianites, xxv. xxxi.; a third numeration of the Israelites, xxvi.; a rehearsal of their journeys, xxxiii.; a delineation of their territory in Canaan, and an appointment of twelve princes to divide it, xxxiv. (2) With these narratives is intermingled a variety of laws concerning the ejection of unclean persons from the camp—suspicion of wives for adultery, v.; Nazariteship—priests' blessing the people, vi.; lighting of sacred lamps, viii.; observance of the passover in the second month, ix.; making and blowing of silver trumpets, x.; and concerning meat-offerings, drink-offerings, heave-offerings, sin-offerings—stoning for breach of the Sabbath—fringes on the borders of their garments, xv.; sacred portion of the priests and Levites, xviii.; purification by the ashes of the red heifer, xix.; inheritance and marriage of heiresses, xxvii. xxxvi.; oblations at sacred festivals, xxviii. xxix.; vows, xxx.; manslaughter and cities of refuge, xxxv.

[The book of Numbers has been pronounced the most perplexing in sacred history, and what has perplexed the believing inquirer has afforded ample field for infidel objection: but as to the very being, providence, and attributes of God, there have been, and still are, many alleged objections; we are not to be surprised if similar assaults be made upon any part of his word, nor are we to be discouraged by the perplexities of believing inquirers: the real difficulties of Scripture, for such there are, exhibit the analogy between God's word and works, while they afford the happiest employment to the intellect, inculcate humility, exercise patience, and call to prayer, Ja. 1. 5; Lu. 11. 13; Jn. 14. 26. The chief difficulty of this book arises from the population returns. Jacob's family at their entrance into Egypt amounted but to seventy-five; at the exodus, in little more than two hundred years after, the men are estimated about 600,000, Ex. 12. 37; 30. 26; and at the military census afterwards made, they amount to 603,550, ch. 1. 46. Now, as these numbers would, on the most moderate computation, give a total for the Jewish caravan, independent of the 'mixed multitude,' Ex. 12. 38, that accompanied them, of about 2,400,000; the question arises, How can we credit this increase? To a humble inquiring believer it will be something to be reminded of God's peculiar promise to Abraham, Ge. 15. 5, and here he might rest; while the sceptic and the infidel, if they really sought for truth, not for cavilling, might find a ready answer in ordinary political statistics. Do they not know, that in the average of circumstances, population doubles at least in twenty-five years? That in favourable rural districts it doubles in fifteen years? that Euler calculates its doubling under thirteen, and that Sir W. Petty fixes it at ten years? Now allowing the Mosaic narrative the advantage of these calculations—and candour cannot deny it the most favourable—the imaginary impossibility of the increase from 75 to 2,400,000 totally vanishes; and while the promise to Abraham is seen fulfilled in the numbers of his posterity, the result requires not for its solution a continuous miracle, but merely that providential blessing of fruitfulness which God invariably bestows on peaceful, temperate, and industrious habits. But while the soundness of this solution cannot, upon any historical ground, be statistically gainsaid, all possibility of cavil is removed by considering that the national name and privileges of Israelites were not confined to the lineal descendants of Abraham. This house-born servants at that period amounted to 318 adult males, Ge. 14. 14. (3) When God renewed his promise, Ge. 17. 13, 27, all his then existing house-born servants, as well as his future purchases, were 'grafted in,' Ro. 11. 17, were naturalized, so to speak, by the sign of the everlasting covenant. (4) Isaac, Abraham's son, so far from declining in family prosperity, 'waxed great, and went forward, and grew until he became very great,' and especially had 'great store of servants,' Ge. 26. 13, 14. (5) Jacob, at his return, Ge. 35. 27, had, besides his own children, 'men-servants,' Ge. 32. 5, perfectly able to protect themselves and been very considerable. For soon after, Esau removed 'from the face of his brother, for their riches were more than that they might dwell together, and the land wherein they were strangers could not bear them because of their cattle,' Ge. 36. 6, 7. (6) Jacob came down to Egypt, not merely with his seventy-five of Abraham should be construed into the abrogation of the ancient privileges of house-born servants or strangers, the naturalization clause, for so in modern phrase it is named, was explicitly renewed; and 'every man's servant' bought for money, and every conforming 'stranger' was invested with the same rights as 'one born in the land,' Ex. 12. 44, 48. (8) The reality and extent of this privilege of naturalization is still farther illustrated by the special exclusion of the Ammonites and Moabites 'for ever,' De. 23. 3; and still farther by the probationary period prescribed to an Edomite and Egyptian, who might 'enter into the congregation of the Lord in their third generation,' De. 23. 8. And thus, it is evident, the law was understood in the time of Nehemiah, ch. 13. 1–3, for he separated the 'mixed multitude' of Ammonites and Moabites, while the record of the genealogy of 'Solomon's servants,' originally Canaanites, 1 Ki. 9. 20, 21, is faithfully preserved, Ne. 7. 57–61, and they are included in 'the congregation,' ver. 66, and join in the national covenant for reformation, according to the Scriptures, ch. 10. 28.

But if we may thus legally commence our calculations with more than the seventy-five descendants of Jacob, why are they particularized? The answer is easy—to lay a distinct groundwork for the development of providence and the fulfilment of prophecy, and specially to furnish the necessary preparation and evidence for the manifestation of Christ. And when any do farther sceptically ask, 'How could Egypt contain and support so many inhabitants?' the reply is, Measure its extent and observe its unparalleled fertility. 'How could the Egyptians govern so many discontented subjects?' the reply is, Calculate in ancient or modern slave states the small proportion of masters to slaves. 'How could Pharaoh expect to subdue such a numerous host?' the answer is, Calculate how many regular troops would fearlessly assail an unarmed multitude. 'What line of march did they occupy?' the reply is, Who would think of marshalling them in a single line? Not he that by divine instruction ordered the encampments in the wilderness, see ch. ii. But of answering such groundless cavils 'there is no end.' Better for the believer to see in Israel a family carried down with a famishing father in search of food, to a land where they are sustained by the filial love of a son, and the forgiving generosity of a brother; where they become as the sand in number, and yet are enslaved by a cruel tyrant, and from whom they are delivered by the destruction of all their enemies and the blood of a sacrifice—where, in a word, 'Christ is all in all,' exhibited wherever there is salvation, temporal, spiritual, or eternal. ## CHAPTER I.

1 God commandeth Moses to number the people. 5 The princes of the tribes. 17 The number of every tribe. 47 The Levites are exempted for the service of the Lord.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, in the tabernacle of the congregation, on the first<sup>1</sup> day of the second<sup>2</sup> month, in the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying,

2 Take<sup>3</sup> ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers,<sup>2</sup> with the number of their names, every male by their polls;

3 From twenty years old and upward, all that are 'able to go forth to war in Israel: thou and Aaron shall number them by their armies.

4 And with you there shall be 'a man of every tribe; every one head of the house of his fathers.

5 ¶ And these are the names of the men that shall stand with you: 'Of the tribe of Reuben; Elizur the son of Shedeur.

6 Of Simeon; Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai.

7 Of Judah; 'Nahshon the son of Amminadab.

8 Of Issachar; Nethaneel the son of Zuar.

9 Of Zebulun; Eliab the son of Helon.

10 Of the children of Joseph: of Ephraim; Elishama the son of Ammihud: of Manasseh; Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

11 Of Benjamin; Abidan the son of Gideon.

12 Of Dan; Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

13 Of Asher; Pagiel the son of Ocran.

14 Of Gad; Eliasaph the son of 'Deuel.

15 Of Naphtali; Ahira the son of Enan.

16 These were the 'renowned of the congregation, princes of the tribes of their fathers, heads of thousands in Israel.<sup>3</sup>

17 ¶ And Moses and Aaron took 'these men which are expressed by their names:

18 And they assembled all the congregation together on the first day of the second month; and they declared their pedigrees after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, by their polls.<sup>4</sup>

5 The Mosaic census has been called in question, because its several items terminate in Septuaginta, and well-meaning but inconsiderate expositors have had recourse to conjectures, founded on admitted or discovered additions of scriptures to historical dates and numbers in Grecian and Hindoo history. But such conjectures and parallels are utterly to be repudiated. The solution of the difficulty, if such it seems, lies in the record itself. Moses in the first census expressly declares, not that the men were 600,000, but that they were 'about 600,000.' Ex. 12. 37. Neither in the present census is the exact amount of men 'fit to go forth to war' ever given, but 'those that were numbered of them,' and as the Jewish armies were uniformly officered and mustered by 1000, 500, 50, and 10, the quota of each tribe must necessarily terminate in a cipher. Nu. 31. 15. De. 1. 15.—Note. As the census for march and for battle is in equable numbers and ranks, but enumerates, for property, each individual, Ezr. ii. Ne. vii. 50 in our sojourning and in our journeying, church moves in order and communion, and each is concerned for the welfare of his companion, Ro. 14. 7; but in entering to judgment, 'every man of us shall give account of himself to God.' CHAPTER I. REFLECTIONS.—In this numbered people I discern the true Israel of God, numerous as the sand by the sea-shore; all numbered of Jesus, and written in his book of life; all under his government and laws, declared by his prophets and apostles; all ranked in goodly order in their respective generations, for the wars of the Lord; and all honourably distinguished from the world that lieth in wickedness, and from the mixed multitude of hypocrites. Here likewise I may observe, that ministers and magistrates ought to take heed to every one of the flock over whom the Lord hath made them overseers; that the

TOMB OF SULTAN BARKUK—ONE OF THE MODERN PHARAOHS OF EGYPT. [Numbers, i.]—We continue through this book of Numbers to illustrate the life of Moses by pictures taken from the land in which he grew up. The Tomb of Sultan Barkuk is really a mosque or place of Mohammedan worship. There stands above it two superb domes and two minarets. Under the dome at the north are the tombs of the male, and under the dome at the south are the tombs of the female, members of the family. Barkuk belonged to the family of the Circassian

Mameluke Sultans who reigned in Egypt from A. D. 1382 to 1517. The limestone pulpit in this mosque and the two minarets are beautiful specimens of stone work. Barkuk was a Circassian slave who raised himself to the throne by setting aside Haggi, a boy of six years and great grandson of Mohammed-en-Nasir. The reign of Barkuk was not peaceful. His intrigues and treachery so exasperated the Emirs that they conspired against him and finally dethroned him in 1389, but he was soon restored and reigned until 1399.

of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war:

31 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Zebulun, were fifty and seven thousand and four hundred.

32 ¶ Of the children of Joseph, namely, of the 'children of Ephraim,' by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

33 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Ephraim, were forty thousand and five hundred.

34 ¶ Of the 'children of Manasseh, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

35 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Manasseh, were thirty and two thousand and two hundred.

7 ch. 2. 18, 19; 26. 35-37, with Ge. 48. 19, 20; 46. 20. This tribe was more numerous and honoured than that of Manasseh.

7 Jacob, on his death-bed, had foretold the superiority of Ephraim the younger to Manasseh the elder. He guided his hands wittingly, putting his right hand upon Ephraim's head; and when Joseph would have interferred, desiring to appropriate the greater blessing to the elder, his father refused, saying, 'He also shall become a great people, and also shall be great; but truly his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations.'

Ge. 48. 19. We see the fulfilment of the ancient prediction now very distinctly here, put before Manasseh, and the tribe of the former outnumbered that of the latter by several thousands. The superiority, as we shall afterwards see, is continued at a future period. Moses, in the blessing wherewith he blessed the children of Israel before his death, says, 'They are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh, De. 33. 17.'

'Known unto the Lord are all his works, even from the beginning of all that he has spoken: no jot or one tittle can fail to the ground.—I.

* At the time when the patriarchs went down to Egypt with their father, Benjamin, it would seem, had more children than any of his brethren: he had ten sons, Ge. 46. 21. Yet, when this census was taken, his tribe was less numerous than any of the rest, except that of Manasseh. On the other hand, Dan had but one son, when they went down, and now his tribe exceeds all others but that of Gad. It was thus that the Lord, who giveth no account of his doings, although all events, even the most minute, are according to infinite wisdom, fulfilled his promise to Abraham of a seed more in number than the stars of heaven.—I.

9 The tribe of Judah was much larger than any of the others. Dan stood second, but had 12,000 fewer than Judah. Ephraim and Manasseh together were within 2000 of being equal to Judah. Manasseh was the smallest of the twelve, and Benjamin came next to it. It will be seen by a comparison with the census recorded in ch. xxvi., which was taken at the close of the wilderness journey, that the relative strength of the tribes changed very much during the forty years' wandering.—P.

* ch. 1. 52. 1 Co. 14. 33. 40. Phil. 1. 27. Col. 2. 5, 19. Eze. 43. 7. Ps. 76. 11. Re. 4. 2.

1 Moses does not inform us what the standard or ensign of the tribe of Dan was, but, however, who may sometimes be safely followed, inform us that the ensign of Judah was a lion, of Ephraim an ox, of Reuben a man, and of Dan an eagle. This description is somewhat counteracted by the vision of the cherubim, Eze. 1. 10, and still further by the vision of the throne of God, Re. 4. 7. Still, as the Scriptures are silent, we may not positively affirm, nor draw any doctrine from these alleged figures; but with certainty we may consider the standard and ensign as a prophetic emblem of that day when there shall be a root of Jesse, who shall stand for an ensign of the people, Is. 11. 10, and of that gracious promise to his church still in the wilderness, that, when the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him, Is. 59. 19. C.

—The 'standard' was the banner of each of the four great divisions of the Israelites: mentioned below, while the 'ensign' was the smaller flag borne at the head of each division of a tribe.—P.

and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

43 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Naphtali, were fifty and three thousand and four hundred.<sup>9</sup>

44 ¶ These are those that were numbered, which Moses and Aaron numbered, and the princes of Israel, being twelve men: each one was for the house of his fathers.

45 So were all those that were numbered of the children of Israel, by the house of their fathers, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war in Israel;

46 Even all they that were numbered were six hundred thousand, and three thousand, and five hundred and fifty.

47 ¶ But the 'Levites, after the tribe of their fathers, were not numbered among them.

48 For the LORD had spoken unto Moses, saying,

49 Only thou shalt not number the tribe of Levi, neither take the sum of them among the children of Israel;

50 But thou shalt appoint the Levites over the tabernacle of testimony, and over all the vessels thereof, and over all things that belong to it: they shall bear the tabernacle, and all the vessels thereof; and they shall minister unto it, and shall encamp round about the tabernacle.

51 And when the tabernacle setteth forward, the Levites shall take it down; and when the tabernacle is to be pitched, the Levites shall set it up: and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

52 And the children of Israel shall pitch their tents, every man by his own camp, and every man by his own standard, throughout their hosts.

53 But the Levites shall pitch round about the tabernacle of testimony, that there be no wrath upon the congregation of the children of Israel: and the Levites shall keep the charge of the tabernacle of testimony.

54 And the children of Israel did according to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so did they.

CHAPTER II.

The order of the tribes in their tents.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, and unto Aaron, saying,

more honour any one hath conferred upon him, the more active he ought to be in well-doing, according to his station; and to do without delay whatever the Lord requires of him. When I see the numbers of the respective tribes so little proportioned to their families at their entrance into Egypt, about two hundred and fifteen years before, I cannot but think how little even outward things go by common probabilities, and how unstable all created comforts are. When I read the sum total, I see how truly and marvellously God, in a few years, fulfilled his promises in multiplying the patriarch's posterity, notwithstanding all that the Egyptians could do to diminish them. Who likewise but must admire the liberal kindness of God, in forty years' miraculous maintenance of such multitudes of sinners; while he discerns the destructive nature of sin, which, in forty years, buried them all but two in the earth, and all in the wilderness! When I see the Levites distinguished from the rest, let me think how honourably God rewarded their honest zeal against the worshippers of the golden calf: and that ministers ought to be more holy than ordinary saints, to exert themselves to the utmost to prevent the sins of others; and that, though they are not to entangle themselves in worldly business, or in intimacy with carnal men, yet they are not to be idle, but spiritual soldiers of Christ, set for the defence of his church and gospel.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 3. From Ge. 17. 5, in the instance of Abram changed to Abraham, we learn the doctrinal and prophetic intent of Scripture names. This is farther illustrated, Ge. 32. 28, in the case of Jacob changed to Israel. It is applied in the name of Jesus, given to our Lord, Mat. 1. 21, 23, and is applied in the case of Melchisedec, He. 7. 1, 2, which Paul interprets as descriptive of his office. It is therefore right their father's house: far off<sup>2</sup> about the tabernacle of the congregation shall they pitch.<sup>3</sup>

3 ¶ And on the east side, toward the rising of the sun, shall they of the standard of the camp of Judah pitch, throughout their armies: and Nahshon the son of Amminadab shall be captain of the children of Judah.

4 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were threescore and fourteen thousand and six hundred.

5 And those that do pitch next unto him shall be the tribe of Issachar: and Nethaneel the son of Zuar shall be captain of the children of Issachar.

6 And his host, and those that were numbered thereof, were fifty and four thousand and four hundred.

7 Then<sup>a</sup> the tribe of Zebulun: and Eliab the son of Helon shall be captain of the children of Zebulun.

8 And his host, and those that were numbered thereof, were fifty and seven thousand and four hundred.

9 All that were numbered in the camp of Judah were an hundred thousand, and fourscore thousand, and six thousand and four hundred, throughout their armies: these shall first set forth.<sup>4</sup>

10 ¶ On the south side shall be the standard of the camp<sup>5</sup> of Reuben, according to their armies: and the captain of the children of Reuben shall be Elizur the son of Shedeur.

11 And his host, and those that were numbered thereof, were forty and six thousand and five hundred.

12 And those which pitch by him shall be the tribe of Simeon: and the captain of the children of Simeon shall be Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai.

13 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were fifty and nine thousand and three hundred.

14 Then<sup>6</sup> the tribe of Gad: and the captain of the sons of Gad shall be Eliasaph the son of Reuel.<sup>6</sup>

15 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were forty and five thousand and six hundred and fifty.

16 All that were numbered in the camp of Reuben were an hundred thousand, and fifty and one thousand, and four hundred and fifty, throughout their armies: and they shall set forth in the second rank.

7 After the forenamed camps, the tabernacle was to follow, between those two that went before, and the camp of Ephraim and the camp of Dan that came after. They did not therefore march as they lay pitched; for then there was a camp on each side of the tabernacle; whereas when they marched there was none on the sides, but two camps went before it, and two followed it. It is said, "as they encamp so shall they set forward," which may refer either to the Levites, the sons of Kohath, or to the two camps

forenamed, enjoining that they should march in the same order in which they lay encamped, in the midst of Issachar and Zebulun, they being either before and behind, or on either side of him.—1.

26-44-47.

7 ch. 1. 42, 43; 10. 27;

26-48-50. These three tribes were the descendants of Jacob as concubines, and so less honourable.

8 The order of en-camping and marching as here prescribed is as follows:—Judah, Is-sachar, and Zebulun encamped on the east of the tabernacle; Reuben, Simeon, and Gad on the south; Ephraim, Manasseh, and Benjamin on the west; and

Dan, Asher, and Naphtali on the north. The tabernacle was placed in the centre of a hollow square; but between it and the general encampment

were four divisions of the tribe of Levi:

the sons of Aaron on the east, before the door; the Gershonites on the west; the Kohathites on the south; and the Me-rarites on the north.

When the camp was broken up the order of march was as follows:—The division of Judah led the van;

Reuben with his division followed. Then came the tabernacle surrounded by the Levites. The next followed the division of Ephraim, and the division of Dan formed the rearguard.—

number we add the Levites, and all the women and children

below twenty years of age, it will make about three millions of Israelites, besides the mixed multitude.

17 ¶ Then<sup>a</sup> the tabernacle of the congregation shall set forward, with the camp of the Levites<sup>7</sup> in the midst of the camp; as they encamp, so shall they set forward, every man in his place, by their standards.

18 ¶ On the west side shall be the standard of the camp of Ephraim, according to their armies: and the captain of the sons of Ephraim shall be Elishama the son of Ammihud.

19 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were forty thousand and five hundred.

20 And by him shall be the tribe of Manasseh: and the captain of the children of Manasseh shall be Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

21 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were thirty and two thousand and two hundred.

22 Then<sup>m</sup> the tribe of Benjamin: and the captain of the sons of Benjamin shall be Abidan the son of Gideoni.

23 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were thirty and five thousand and four hundred.

24 All that were numbered of the camp of Ephraim were an hundred thousand, and eight thousand and an hundred, throughout their armies: and they shall go forward in the third rank.

25 ¶ The standard of the camp of Dan shall be on the north side, by their armies: and the captain of the children of Dan shall be Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

26 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were threescore and two thousand and seven hundred.

27 And those that encamp by him shall be the tribe of Asher: and the captain of the children of Asher shall be Pagiel the son of Ocran.

28 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were forty and one thousand and five hundred.

29 Then<sup>2</sup> the tribe of Naphtali: and the captain of the children of Naphtali shall be Ahira the son of Enan.

30 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were fifty and three thousand and four hundred.

31 All they that were numbered in the camp of Dan were an hundred thousand, and fifty and seven thousand and six hundred: they shall go hindmost with their standards.<sup>8</sup>

32 ¶ These<sup>a</sup> are those which were numbered to examine what religious truth, or practical duty, or prophetic encouragement, was couched in the names of the tribes and princes.—Judah, praise of the Lord. Nahshon, experience. Amminadab, my noble people. Issachar, price, reward. Nethaneel, the gift of God. Zuar, small. Zebulun, habitation. Eliab, God my father. Helon, a traveller. Reuben, vision of the son. Elizur, the rock is my God. Shedeur, light from the Almighty. Simeon, he that hears, obeys. Shelumiel,

God is my reward. Zurishaddai, the Almighty is my rock. Gad, a band, armed, prepared. Eliasaph, my God that completes. Reuel, shepherd, friend of God. Ephraim, fruitful. Elishama, my God hath heard. Ammihud, people of praise. Manasseh, forgetfulness. Gamaliel, recompense of God. Pedahzur, saviour, strong, stone of redemption. Benjamin, son of the right hand. Abidan, father of judgment. Gideoni, cutting off iniquity. Dan, judgment. Ahiezer, the brother's help. Ammishaddai, people of the Almighty. Asher, blessedness. Pagiel, prayer of God. Ocran, disturber. Naphtali, that struggles. Ahira, my brother's friend. Enan, his eye. Levites, associated. C.] REFLECTIONS.—What a God of order is our God in all the churches! With unreserved submission ought we to refer to him the choice of our inheritance for us, and the fixing of the bounds of our habitation. Our life on earth is a movable as well of the children of Israel, by the house of their fathers: all those that were numbered of the camps, throughout their hosts, were six hundred thousand, and three thousand and five hundred and fifty.

33 But the Levites were not numbered among the children of Israel; as the LORD commanded Moses.

34 And the children of Israel did <sup>2</sup>according to all that the LORD commanded Moses: so they <sup>3</sup>pitched by their standards, and so they set forward, every one after their families, according to the house of their fathers.

CHAPTER III.

1 The sons of Aaron. 5 The Levites are given to the priests for the service of the tabernacle, 11 instead of the first-born. 14 The Levites are numbered by their families. 21 The families, number, and charge of the Gershonites, 27 of the Kohathites, 33 of the Merarites. 38 The place and charge of Moses and Aaron. 40 The first-born are freed by the Levites. 44 The overplus are redeemed.

THESE also are the "generations of Aaron" and Moses, in the day that the LORD spake with Moses in mount Sinai.

2 And these are <sup>4</sup>the names of the sons of Aaron; Nadab the first-born, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

3 These are the names of the sons of Aaron, the <sup>5</sup>priests which were anointed, whom he consecrated<sup>6</sup> to minister in the priest's office.

4 And<sup>7</sup> Nadab and Abihu died before the LORD, when they offered strange fire before the LORD, in the wilderness of Sinai, and they had no children: and Eleazar and Ithamar ministered in the priest's office, in the sight of Aaron their father.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

6 Bring<sup>8</sup> the tribe of Levi near, and present them before Aaron the priest, that they may minister unto him.

7 And they shall keep his charge, and the charge of the whole congregation,<sup>9</sup> before the tabernacle of the congregation, to do the service of the tabernacle.

8 And they shall keep <sup>10</sup>all the instruments of the tabernacle of the congregation, and the charge of the children of Israel, to do the service of the tabernacle.

9 And<sup>11</sup> thou shalt give the Levites unto Aaron, and to his sons: they are wholly given unto him out of the children of Israel.

10 And, thou shalt appoint Aaron and his sons, and they <sup>12</sup>shall wait on their priest's office: and <sup>13</sup>the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

as warlike condition. Here we have no continuing city; let us seek for one to come, which hath foundations, and whose builder and maker is God. But surely it is a high honour to have the presence and ordinances of God amongst us here below. Happy are all his ransomed tribes; they have equal access to him; they all are so marshalled in the church as best answers their abilities; and have God's tabernacle and ordinances placed among them. And it is pleasant and amiable when magistrates, and every one beside in their stations, become protectors and encouragers of the church; and when everything, both in church and state, is regulated exactly according to the command of God.

CHAPTER III. [Ver. 2. In a former note (see ch. 2. 3) we have seen the Scripture authority for interpretation of names. In the names of the tribes, there was a national lesson, addressed to rulers; in that of the Levites, an ecclesiastical lesson, addressed to pastors and teachers. Aaron, teacher, mountain of strength.

—Note, When Christ, in risen humanity, declared 'All

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 12 And I, behold, I have <sup>14</sup>taken the Levites from among the children of Israel instead of all the first-born that openeth the matrix among the children of Israel: therefore the Levites shall be mine;

13 Because <sup>15</sup>all the first-born are mine: for on the day that I <sup>16</sup>smote all the first-born in the land of Egypt I hallowed unto me all the first-born in Israel, both man and beast; <sup>17</sup>mine they shall be: I am the LORD.

14 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, saying,

15 Number the children of Levi, after the house of their fathers, by their families: every male <sup>18</sup>from a month old and upward shalt thou number them.<sup>5</sup>

16 And Moses numbered them, according to the word<sup>6</sup> of the LORD, as he was commanded.

17 And<sup>7</sup> these were the sons of Levi by their names; Gershon, and Kohath, and Merari.

18 And<sup>8</sup> these are the names of the sons of Gershon by their families; Libni and Shimei.

19 And<sup>9</sup> the sons of Kohath by their families; Amram and Izhar, Hebron and Uzziel.

20 And<sup>10</sup> the sons of Merari by their families; Mahli and Mushi: these are the families of the Levites, according to the house of their fathers.

21 ¶ Of<sup>11</sup> Gershon was the family of the Libnites, and the family of the Shimites: these are the families of the Gershonites.

22 Those that were numbered of them, according to the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, even those that were numbered of them, were seven thousand and five hundred.

23 The families of the Gershonites shall <sup>12</sup>pitch behind the tabernacle westward.

24 And the chief of the house of the father of the Gershonites shall be Eliasaph the son of Lael.

power is given to me,' he immediately added, 'go ye therefore, teach all nations,' Mat. xxviii. The mountain strength of the church lies in faithful teaching. —Nadab, prince, free gift. Abihu, he is my father. The first a title of dignity in the state, the second of productiveness and superiority in the family, yet, for want of attention to paternal teaching, both are cast down from their office and die childless. A warning to the teachers of others to 'ask for the old paths'—the old paths, not of men inventing novelties, but of the Spirit speaking in the Scriptures. The teachers, and fathers,

FLOCK OF GOATS, BEDRASHEN, NEAR MEMPHIS—WHERE MOSES WAS BROUGHT UP. [NUMBERS, iii: 1.]—"These also are the generations of Aaron and Moses, in the day that the Lord spake with Moses in Mount Sinai." This picture is fittingly placed in connection with the name of Moses, for it illustrates a place near Memphis where Moses was brought up. Bedrashen covers a part of the site of Memphis. On the ground lying around this village, a part of which we see the goats now browsing, and a part farther on where we see the palm trees standing, once stood the proud city of Memphis. Memphis was one of the oldest cities of history, and was founded by Menes, the first king of Egypt. The tract of country in the midst of which Memphis stood has been praised by ancient writers for its fertility. Diodorus speaks of its green meadows intersected with canals and their pavements of lotus flowers. Pliny says there were trees there of such girth that three men could not span them with extended arms.

27 ¶ And<sup>a</sup> of Kohath was the family of the Amramites, and the family of the Izharites, and the family of the Hebronites, and the family of the Uzzielites: these are the families of the Kohathites.

28 In the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, were eight thousand and six hundred, keeping the charge of the sanctuary.

29 The families of the sons of Kohath shall pitch<sup>b</sup> on the side of the tabernacle southward.

30 And the chief of the house of the father of the families of the Kohathites shall be Eleazar the son of Uzziel.

31 And their charge shall be the ark, and the table, and the candlestick, and the altars, and the vessels of the sanctuary wherewith they minister, and the hanging, and all the service thereof.

32 And Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest shall be chief over the chief of the Levites, and have the oversight of them that keep the charge of the sanctuary.

33 ¶ Of Merari was the family of the Mahlites, and the family of the Mushites: these are the families of Merari.

34 And those that were numbered of them, according to the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, were six thousand and two hundred.

35 And the chief of the house of the father of the families of Merari was Zuriel the son of Abihail: these shall pitch on the side of the tabernacle northward.

36 And under the custody and charge<sup>c</sup> of the sons of Merari shall be the boards of the tabernacle, and the bars thereof, and the pillars thereof, and the sockets thereof, and all the vessels thereof, and all that serveth thereto, 37 And the pillars of the court round about, and their sockets, and their pins, and their cords.

38 ¶ But those that encamp before the tabernacle toward the east, even before the tabernacle of the congregation eastward, shall be Moses, and Aaron and his sons, keeping the charge of the sanctuary for the charge of the children of Israel; and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

39 All<sup>d</sup> that were numbered of the Levites, which Moses and Aaron numbered at the commandment of the LORD, throughout their families, all the males, from a month old and upward, were twenty and two thousand.<sup>8</sup> g Besides Aaron and his sons, and the first-born of the Levites, which made three hundred more, ch. 26. 62.

8 This is one of the chief perplexities of the book of Numbers, inasmuch as the sum total does not agree with the items. The Gershonites were numbered 7500, the Kohathites 8000, the Merarites 6000, total 21,500. To account for this discrepancy, Houbigant supposes an error to have crept into the text of ver. 28, which Kennicot transfers to ver. 27. Either supposition would rectify the accounts, but such summary and unsupported suppositions of error are to be examined with great jealousy, and never to be received without high MS. authority: this is here totally wanting. Let us therefore seek the solution of the perplexity in the law. (1) In this narrative, ver. 6, the tribe of Levi was to be brought near, a phrase in the original, admitted to signify sacrificial offering. See ch. 8. 6-22. (2) In ver. 14, 16 Moses alone enumerates the tribe, and gives the absolute sum total. (3) In ver. 39 we have a new account of 'all that were numbered of the Levites, with Moses and Aaron numbered at the commandment of the LORD. Now Aaron is not omitted in the one case, nor conjoined in the other, without good cause. (4) We inquire in the law what this cause may be, and whence arose this arithmetical imperfection? Not, we apprehend, from any imaginary error either in the detail or summing up, but from legal purities disqualifying from being offered to God. These might arise, in children, from touching their mother during the forty days of their separation, Le. 12. 2, 4; comp. with 15. 19, 26, 27; in adults from any similar legal im-perity, ch. 22. 2. (5) It is now almost superfluous to add, that as every offering must be without blemish, a typical requirement applied to the Levites would produce the typical imperfection of their numbers when examined by Aaron before being brought near to the Lord for redemption of the first-born of the tribes, a view which is in strict accordance with the words of the apostle, The Lord made nothing perfect, He. 7. 19.—C.

j But Aaron and his sons, and all the first-born of the Levites, numbered he not, as they were already the Lord's peculiar property.

1 Why are the first-born numbered, and so many brethren so few? Are we here to search after another arithmetical error? No. The solution of the difficulty lies in the Jewish system of family government. (1) Families of daughters were not reckoned. (2) Many families, as in the case of Jacob's twelve separate families, reckon but one first-born. (3) In many families the first-born would be dead. (4) In some the Jewish law permitted absolute sale, disfranchisement, or substitution. Ex. 21. 3, 7; 22. 29. 37. 1 Ch. 2. 1. These, without any other causes, are quite sufficient to account for the fewness of the numbers recorded.—C.

2 It was a singular circumstance, and indicative of the overruling providence of God, that the number of the males of the Levites and the number of the first-born males of all the other tribes should have so nearly coincided. It was so ordained, however, that the coincidence should not be exact. Of the latter there were two hundred threescore and thirteen more than of the former, and for this odd number the redemption-money must be paid according to the law. This money, we may suppose, would be given out of a common fund.—I.

REFLECTIONS.—I bless the Lord, who so loved as to give his only begotten Son for a lost world of sinful men, and caused him to redeem them with his hard service, extending to the whole church, and all the concerns of it. But let the awful punishment of such as have profaned the service of God, as if it had been a common thing, excite me to the utmost reverence, care, and diligence, regulated by the divine command. If my work be hard, God will supply me with proper help. If God hath saved my life, he hath a right to dispose of me as he pleases, with respect to my station and work: and it is my duty cheerfully to comply, whether my work be more or less hard or honourable: but the greater the honour the greater is the danger if I mistake. And while I bless God that he hath a tribe of ministers and people, and lament th-

5 And when the camp setteth forward, Aaron shall come, and his sons, and they shall take down the 'covering vail, and cover the ark of testimony with it;

6 And shall put thereon the covering of badgers' skins, and shall spread over it a cloth wholly of blue, and shall 'put in the staves thereof.

7 And upon the 'table of show-bread they shall spread a cloth of blue, and put thereon the dishes, and the spoons, and the bowls, and covers to cover<sup>2</sup> withal: and the 'continual bread shall be thereon.

8 And they shall spread upon them a cloth of scarlet, and cover the same with a 'covering of badgers' skins, and shall put in the staves thereof.

9 And they shall take a cloth of blue, and cover the 'candlestick of the light, and his lamps, and his tongs, and his snuff-dishes, and all the oil-vessels thereof, wherewith they minister unto it.

10 And they shall put it, and all the vessels thereof, within a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put it upon a bar.<sup>3</sup>

11 And upon 'the golden altar they shall spread a cloth of blue, and cover it with a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put to the staves thereof.

15 And when Aaron and his sons have made an end of 'covering the sanctuary, and all the vessels of the sanctuary, as the camp is to set forward; after that, the sons of Kohath shall come to bear it: but they shall not 'touch any holy thing, lest they die.<sup>5</sup> These things k The word bar is, most probably, the name of a long pole, with the ends placed upon the shoulders of two or more bearers, and having the candlestick suspended from the middle—a plan of conveyance common through India and other eastern countries. This exposition is rendered still more probable by the distinction in the two following verses. The golden altar with its vessels was evidently carried not on the shoulders, but by the hands, with sliding staves, ver. 11-14. While the lesser 'instruments of ministry' were secured in a cloth of blue, and suspended, like the candlestick, on the bearing pole or bar. — C.

1 Moses, by the command of God, appointed the Levites to the office from thirty, but this seems not to accord with ch. 8. 24, where the Levites are required to go in to wait upon the service at twenty-five. There is, however, no contradiction. At twenty-five they went in to the service of the tabernacle when localized; but, at thirty, they were appointed to the additional service of the 'burden' when the people journeyed. David afterwards fixed the commencement of the Levites' term of service at twenty, 1 Ch. 23. 24-26.

This change was made because, under David, the church had attained a state of rest; and the Levites had no more to bear the burden of the tabernacle. This change may, however, appear rather a grievance than a privilege, and so to carnal men, who desire to use it for a cloak to their idleness; but to the true Levite, the man avid captivus by Christ, and associated with him, an early call to the service of God, and an early separation from the world, is but an earlier relief from prison and from pain, and an earlier advancement to office and to honour. Blessed are they who, like Jeremiah, Je. 1. 5, have been sanctified from the birth, and who, like Timothy, have known from childhood those Scriptures which are able to make wise unto salvation, 2 Ti. 3. 15.—C.

4 The charge of the burden of the sons of Merari was by far the heaviest of all, the particulars of which are enumerated in ver. 31, 32; but at the same time it was so ordered in the providence of God, that the proportion of those in this family who were able to do the work in the tabernacle was greater than in either of the other families.—L.

5 Though the sum total of effective Levites was very small compared with that of the other tribes, yet there would be far more than could be employed at one time in this service. But they might carry by turns, and thus ease one another, and do their whole business expeditiously and cheerfully. It is also to be noticed that besides the service of the sanctuary, they had their own tents to remove, and their families to take care of.—S.

True our bodies are pronounced 'vile bodies,' Phil. 3. 21, for into the blood of youth and health, and loveliness, the serpent poison is infused, and in ever-varying forms of loathsome disease it is carrying on the work of death. Disease and death are at once the works, and the emblems of sin; therefore, as 'evil cannot dwell with God,' Ps. 5. 4, neither may visible and infectious disease be permitted to abide in the camp where his visible and holy presence is fixed. In every point of view this exclusion of certain diseases from the camp is an admirable institution. (1) As a measure of precaution against the spreading of infection. (2) As a measure of cleanliness and decency, where the tents frequently consisted but of one apartment, seldom of more than two. As conducive to the greater comfort of the sufferers, who were removed from the noise and bustle of the camp. 1 The unclean to be removed out of the camp. 5 Restitution to be made in cases of trespass. 11 The trial of jealousy.

AND the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Command the children of Israel, that they put out of the camp every leper, and every one that hath an issue, and whosoever is defiled by the dead:

3 Both male and female shall ye put out, without the camp shall ye put them; that they defile not their camps, in the midst whereof I dwell.

eternal salvation: it is therefore necessary that we should give the strictest attention to the directions of Scripture. Distressful is the paucity of God's faithful servants; yet are they in his hand, and he proportions their number and ability to their work. But let me especially rejoice, that the whole care of the churches, and of all men, is upon our redeemer: not Levites, in the power of their might, but the almighty Jesus bears and carries us and all our concerns: not the prudent sons of Aaron, but the only wise Son of God rears and dissolves particular churches on earth; rears and dissolves the particular frames of our spirit; dissolves our bodies in death, and again rears them up in the resurrection. He hath destroyed the veil and face of the covering cast over all people; that it is not now death, but life, for us sinful men to behold, and even enter by faith into the holiest of all. Let us therefore, whether ministers or private Christians, draw near with boldness, and behold, as in a glass, the glory of the Lord, that we may be changed into the same image, from glory to glory, as by the Spirit of the Lord.

CHAPTER V. REFLECTIONS. — In these figures I discern that the church of God on earth ought carefully to be purged from scandalous persons and crimes; and that polluted and dishonest sinners shall be excluded from the celestial mansions. How necessary then to put away all filthiness of the flesh and spirit; and to avoid even the most distant approaches towards dishonesty, particularly with respect to Jesus Christ and his ministers! For those who preach the gospel must live by the gospel. Yea, let me avoid everything which may beget dishonourable suspicions; and, on the contrary, beware of indulging them without sufficient ground. But innocence is the surest comfort and support under the most malignant accusations. How dreadful it is when God's curse is the seasoner of sensual pleasures! Vain is every attempt to conceal our transgressions; for, though waters of jealousy are no more, the eye of God can see, and the voice of conscience will speak out. Yea, often God most strangely brings to light the hidden things of

ROAD TO HELIOPOLIS—NEAR THE SITE OF THE UNIVERSITY WHERE MOSES WAS EDUCATED. [Numbers, v.]—This is a scene on the road from Cairo to Heliopolis, and is fittingly placed in connection with the name of Moses. For it is generally agreed that Moses was educated at Heliopolis. In that ancient City of the Sun there once stood the most renowned university of the ancient world. And it was in this celebrated school that Moses was trained in all the wisdom of the Egyptians. There is a fanciful tradition told to tourists, who are supposed to believe everything, that Abraham was professor of astronomy in this university, and taught the Egyptians what he had learned of the stars in Chaldea. The road from Cairo to Heliopolis is about six miles in length, and the view we get of it in the above picture shows us some acacia trees on either side with a couple of camels and their attendants. The view is characteristic, and one is liable to meet such a company of peasants any hour of the day.

7 Then they shall confess their sin which they have done: and he shall recompense his trespass with the principal thereof, and add unto it the fifth part thereof, and give it unto him against whom he hath trespassed.

8 But if the man have no kinsman to recompense the trespass unto, let the trespass be recompensed unto the LORD, even to the priest; besides <sup>a</sup>the ram of the atonement, whereby an atonement shall be made for him.

9 ¶ And every <sup>a</sup>offering<sup>4</sup> of all the holy things of the children of Israel, which they bring unto the priest, shall be his.

10 And every man's hallowed thing shall be his: whatsoever any man giveth the priest, it shall be his.

17 And the priest shall take <sup>a</sup>holy water<sup>6</sup> in an earthen vessel; and of the <sup>m</sup>dust that is in the floor of the tabernacle the priest shall take, and put it into the water.

18 And the priest shall set the woman before the LORD, and <sup>a</sup>uncover the woman's head, and put the offering of memorial in her hands, which is the jealousy-offering: and the priest shall have in his hand <sup>a</sup>the bitter water that causeth the curse.<sup>7</sup>

20 But if thou hast gone aside to another instead of thy husband, and if thou be defiled, and some man have lain with thee besides thine husband;

21 Then the priest shall charge the woman with an oath of cursing; and the priest shall say unto the woman, The LORD make thee a <sup>a</sup>curse and an oath among thy people, when the LORD doth <sup>a</sup>make thy thigh to rot,<sup>9</sup> and thy belly to swell:

22 And this water that causeth the curse shall go into thy bowels, to make thy belly to swell, and thy thigh to rot. And the woman shall say, 'Amen, amen.'

23 And the priest shall write these curses in a book,<sup>2</sup> and he shall blot them out with the bitter water:

24 And he shall cause the woman to drink the bitter water that causeth the curse; and the water that causeth the curse shall enter into her, and become bitter.

25 Then the priest shall take the jealousy-offering out of the woman's hand, and shall <sup>a</sup>wave the offering before the LORD, and offer it upon the altar.

26 And the priest shall take an handful of the offering, even the <sup>a</sup>memorial thereof, and burn it upon the altar, and afterward shall cause the woman to drink the water.

27 And when he hath made her to drink the water, then it shall come to pass, that if she be defiled, and have done trespass against her husband, <sup>a</sup>that the water that causeth the curse shall enter into her, and become bitter, and her belly shall swell, and her thigh shall rot: and the woman shall be <sup>a</sup>a curse among her people.

28 And if the woman be not defiled, but be clean, <sup>a</sup>then she shall be free, and shall conceive seed.

29 This<sup>a</sup> is the law of jealousies, when a wife goeth aside to another instead of her husband, and is defiled;<sup>3</sup>

30 Or when the spirit of jealousy cometh upon him, and he be jealous over his wife, and shall set the woman before the LORD, and the priest shall execute upon her all this law.

31 Then shall the man be <sup>a</sup>guiltless from iniquity, and this woman shall <sup>a</sup>bear her iniquity.

CHAPTER VI.

1 The law of the Nazarite. 22 The form of blessing the people.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When <sup>a</sup>either man or woman shall separate<sup>1</sup> themselves to vow a vow of a Nazarite,<sup>2</sup> to separate themselves unto the LORD; 3 He shall <sup>a</sup>separate himself from wine and darkness; and however they may escape present censure or punishment, whoremongers and adulterers God will judge, and dreadfully punish! Let me therefore abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul: and if I am unjustly accused, let me commit my cause to God, who judgeth righteously, that he may bring me to the light, and cause me to behold his righteousness. Meanwhile let me, with the utmost accuracy, examine how far I am chargeable with spiritual whor-

PILGRIMS FROM THE TOMB OF MOSES—SEEN JUST OUTSIDE THE WALLS OF JERUSALEM. [NUMBERS, vi.]—In the fifth and sixth verses of the thirty-fourth chapter of Joshua, it is said that "Moses died in the land of Moab, and was buried in a valley in the land of Moab over against Bethpeor, but no man knoweth of his sepulcher unto this day." Notwithstanding the plain teachings of Scripture on the subject the Mohammedans pretend to know where the grave of Moses is. They claim that it is to the south of the road between Jerusalem and Jericho. So, as we were leaving Jerusalem for Jericho, on the 25th day of April, 1894, just outside the walls of the Holy City we met a large number of pilgrims coming in from the so-called tomb of Moses. Upon this occasion the pilgrims appeared to be in a bad humor. They were firing pistols, and talking in a loud tone of voice as though they might be ready for mischief. Our dragoman told us that they were always especially fanatical and irritable on their return from these pilgrimages to the graves of their saints.

strong drink, and shall drink no vinegar of wine, or vinegar of strong drink, neither shall he drink any liquor of grapes, nor eat moist grapes, or dried.

4 All the days of his separation<sup>3</sup> shall he eat nothing that is made of the vine-tree,<sup>4</sup> from the kernels even to the husk.

5 All the days of the vow of his separation there shall no razor come upon his head: until the days be fulfilled, in the which he separateth himself unto the LORD, he shall be holy, and shall let the locks of the hair of his head grow.

6 All the days that he separateth himself unto the LORD he shall come at no dead body.

7 He shall not make himself unclean for his father, or for his mother, for his brother, or for his sister, when they die; because the consecration<sup>5</sup> of his God is upon his head.

8 All the days of his separation he is holy unto the LORD.<sup>7</sup>

9 And if any man die very suddenly by him, and he hath defiled the head of his consecration; then he shall shave his head in the day of his cleansing, on the seventh day shall he shave it.

10 And on the eighth day he shall bring two turtles, or two young pigeons, to the priest, to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation:

11 And the priest shall offer the one for a sin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering, and make an atonement for him, for that he sinned by the dead, and shall hallow his head that same day.

12 And he shall consecrate unto the LORD the days of his separation, and shall bring a lamb of the first year for a trespass-offering: but the days that were before shall be lost, because his separation was defiled.

13 ¶ And this is the law of the Nazarite: When the days of his separation are fulfilled, he shall be brought unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation:

14 And he shall offer his offering unto the LORD, one he-lamb of the first year without blemish for a burnt-offering, and one ewe-lamb of the first year without blemish for a sin-offering, and one ram without blemish for peace-offerings,

7 The law of the Nazarite during his vow, included five things. (1) Abstinence from all excitement in drink or food, the two means of living, ver. 3, 4. (2) From all cutting of the hair, ver. 5, in which was life without feeling, weakness made strength, Ju. 16. 17. 2. Co. 12. 9. (3) In separation from the dead, ver. 6-9, even where kindred was nearest. (4) Sacrifice, even for the most unexpected and involuntary breach of vow, ver. 9. (5) The loss of past time, and its necessary commencement, in case of any infringement of the vow, ver. 12. (6) Sacrifice after his vow has been legally fulfilled. In every point of this law, the necessity of holiness, and the utter unprofitableness of our best services, is plainly and explicitly set forth, Lu. 17. 10. The whole law is a beautiful and expressive type of Christ, who was "separate from sinners" — who really paid his vow, He. 10. 5-7, and offered himself the sacrifice that perfects for ever them that are sanctified, He. 10. 10.—C.

2 This was apparently the formal "blessing" or "benediction" which the priests were to use on all solemn occasions when the people met in public assembly. It is comprehensive and most cheering. It consists of three distinct parts. The first part embodies simple preservation. The second progresses to favour, and favour specially developed in grace or pardon. The third part advances still farther to love—love evidenced in the beaming countenance, and love realized in the peace which the God of love implants in the soul. Preservation is the peculiar work of God the Father; pardon, of God the Son; and peace, of God the Holy Ghost.—P.

19 And the priest shall take the sodden shoulder of the ram, and one unleavened cake out of the basket, and one unleavened wafer, and shall put them upon the hands of the Nazarite, after the hair of his separation is shaven.

20 And the priest shall wave them for a wave-offering before the LORD: this is holy for the priest, with the wave-breast and heaven-shoulder: and after that the Nazarite may drink wine.

dom or apostasy; and particularly observe whether the cross of Christ, and the afflictions of the gospel, are to me a savour of death unto death, or of life unto life.

CHAPTER VI. REFLECTIONS.—In these Nazarites let me behold the blessed Jesus solemnly separated by himself and his Father to the service of God in our redemption:—Jesus, never defiled with carnal comforts or pleasures, nor intoxicated with sinful lusts or worldly cares, nor polluted by his connection with sinners naturally dead in trespasses and sins:—Jesus, who, for Nazarine hair, hath the most noted graces and good works; yea, hath his people growing up into him as their head:—Jesus, never failing, but persevering in his work, and finishing it in his all-comprehensive offering of himself for us; and, in his resurrection, laying aside every token of continued subjection to a just God or broken law. In these Nazarites let ministers also, let saints, separated to the service of God, learn to deny themselves, mortify the deeds of the body, renounce this world and the pleasures of sin or sense, and behave as solemnly consecrated to God alone. Let every breach of their vows, through fellowship with dead and unfruitful works of darkness, occasion repeated application to Jesus' purifying blood, and to more diligence in duty. And, after finishing their course, let them thank God for his gracious assistance, account themselves unprofitable servants, and trust only to Jesus' all-sufficient sacrifice of himself as the ground of their hope and joy.—In this priestly benediction of the Hebrews let me behold Jesus, appointed of God to bless sinful men; yea, becoming blessings to them;—and God discovering his grace, by rendering his ordinances, apparently simple in themselves, gracious for blessing us with all spiritual blessings in Christ. Let me therefore look only to God for what blessings I need; and by faith hold communion with Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, in order to the enjoyment of them.

CHAPTER VII. REFLECTIONS.—Necessary observances in religion must always be preferred to

3 And they brought their offering before the LORD, six covered waggons, and twelve oxen; a waggon for two of the princes, and for each one an ox: and they brought them before the tabernacle.

4 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

5 Take<sup>a</sup> it of them, that they may be to do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation; and thou shalt give them unto the Levites, to every man according to his service.

6 And Moses took the waggons and the oxen, and gave them unto the Levites.

computation of Fortunatus Scacchus seems very reasonable. He supposes that the tabernacle being erected on the first day of the first month of the second year after they came out of Egypt, seven days were spent in the consecration of it, and of the altar, &c. On the eighth day Moses began to consecrate Aaron and his sons, which lasted seven days longer. Then the fifteenth day of that month was the first day of unleavened bread, which God commanded (as we read in chap. ix.) to be observed in the first month, and lasted for the two and twentieth. The rest of the month, we may well suppose, was spent in giving, receiving, and delivering the laws mentioned in the book of Leviticus. After this, on the first day of the second month, he began to which God commanded according to the command in the beginning of this book, which may be supposed to have lasted three days. Then on the fourth the Levites were numbered. On the next day, we may suppose, they were offered to God, and given unto the priests; and on the sixth day they were expiated, as we read in the next chapter. On the seventh day their several charges were distributed among them (of which we read in ch. iv.) After which the prince of the altar, which lasted till the nineteenth day inclusively; and on the twentieth day of this month they moved, as we read in ch. 10:11, 12, from Sinai to the wilderness of Paran.—Patrik.

<sup>u</sup> From the numerous sacrifices, and from the value of the gifts of gold and of silver offered by each of the princes, it has been conjectured that these were not their own private gifts, but rather the contributions of their several tribes. It is not improbable that others may have aided the princes with their contributions.—I.

<sup>v</sup> These sacrifices were much more numerous than the burnt-offering or sin-offering, and for this reason perhaps, that both the princes and people had a share of them, on which they feasted before the Lord.—I.

2 As the offerings proceed from day to day, it is worthy of remark that they never change either by addition or diminution or quality.

The prince of the smallest and poorest tribe offers the prince of the largest and richest. Had it been otherwise, "emulations," Ge. 37. 20, would have been the immediate result.

And the pride of man would soon have mingled in the service, where nought but humility could approach with acceptance.

Mat. 18. 4. Ja. 4. 10. C.—It is observable that the offering of all the princes were alike, each presenting the same amount of silver and gold, and an equal number of sacrifices. This equality in their offerings may have been the result either of agreement among themselves, or of the appointment of God, that there might be no unholy emulation, nor any unseemly boasting in so sacred a transaction.

In contributing to the work of God, no motive can be more unbecoming than an ostentatious desire of being thought superior to our brethren.

We may also observe that Moses, acting under the inspiration of God's Spirit, thought fit to set down distinctly, and at length, the offerings of every tribe (as he does here and throughout the chapter), though they were the very same, without any difference; that an honourable mention being made of every one apart, none might think themselves neglected.

But how consolatory is it to reflect that, in God's estimation, the widow's mite is as valuable as the rich man's offering.—I.

3 Heb. on the day of the eleventh day, ver. 28. The Hebrew form of expression here, and in ver. 28, has something curious in it. It may be literally rendered, on the day the first and tenth day, and in the day two and tenth day. But this is the idiom of the language; and, to an original Hebrew, our almost anomalous words eleventh and twelfth, by which we translate the original, would appear as strange as his, literally translated, would appear to us.

4 There were three shekels: the royal shekel, valued at fifteen pence; the shekel of the sanctuary, twice as much; and the common shekel, which differed not from our shilling. Ge. 23. 15. Ex. 30. 13. 2 Sa. 14. 26. Je. 32. 9. Eze. 4. 10. Ne. 5. 15. Am. 6. 5.

5 Upon this day the rebellion and death of Nadab and Abihu occurred. Le. 9. 1; 10. 1. Now the day of this melancholy occurrence is one of the most remarkable in the Jewish dispensation. For example, the eighth was the day of circumcision, Le. 12. 3. The eighth was the day of dedicating the first of the young of animals, Ex. 22. 30. The eighth was the day for cleansing the leper, Le. 14. 10. The eighth was the day of most solemn assembly and peculiar observance, Le. 23. 36, 39; and is called the great day of the feast, Ju. 7. 27. Yet, on this very day, when so many associations combined to honour it, Satan prevailed upon pride to render it dismal and disastrous.—C.

6 From the narrative contained in this chapter, Scott remarks, that to them whom Providence distinguishes as princes, nobles, or wealthy persons, should take the lead and set the example in every good work.—with liberal hearts devising liberal things. But a liberal heart should be under the direction of prudence and discretion; and the circumstances of the times, the state of the church and its ministers, and the necessities of those around them, should be considered, that nothing be wasted in useless expense or vain projects.—I.

7 From the example of these chiefs of Israel, princes and great men, as Conrad Pellicanus remarks, should learn to be devoutly religious, and to possess the fear and reverence of the Lord God in their breasts; to be strong in faith; far from covetousness; unanxious in their endeavours to do honour to God; to give a faithful example of faith and good works to others; to seek the profit of their subjects; assist the servants of God; lend their helping hand to the proficiency of true piety; provide the ministers of the church with all things necessary, that religion be not neglected and contemned; and their poverty; for the sake of God whom they serve, to do them honour by word and deed, and follow their godly admonitions.—I.

9 It is instructive to observe the solemn fact so frequently recurring, that, with all his offerings, each brought an offering for sin.—I.

10 It appears by the metal that these chargers and bowls were of, that they were for the use of the altar of burnt-offerings, in the outward court; for all the vessels of the sanctuary were of gold. And I take the chargers to have been offered, as the Hebrews offered the flesh of the sacrifices when the priests feasted upon it.—Scott.

60 ¶ On the ninth day Abidan the son of Gideoni, prince of the children of Benjamin, offered:<sup>6</sup>

61 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil, for a meat-offering.

62 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

63 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt-offering:

64 One kid of the goats for a sin-offering:

65 And for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, five lambs of the first year. This was the offering of Abidan the son of Gideoni.

66 ¶ On the tenth day Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai, prince<sup>7</sup> of the children of Dan, offered:

67 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil, for a meat-offering:

68 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

69 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt-offering:

70 One kid of the goats for a sin-offering:

71 And for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, five lambs of the first year. This was the offering of Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

72 ¶ On the eleventh day<sup>8</sup> Pagiel the son of Ocran, prince of the children of Asher, offered:

73 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil, for a meat-offering:

74 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

75 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt-offering:

76 One kid of the goats for a sin-offering:<sup>9</sup>

77 And for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, five lambs of the first year. This was the offering of Pagiel the son of Ocran.

78 ¶ On the twelfth day Ahira the son of Enan, prince of the children of Naphtali, offered:

79 His offering was one silver charger,<sup>1</sup> the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after service without receiving hints of changes and removals death not excepted. Liberal hearts devise liberal things, and are never weary of giving to the Lord.

But in our dedications to God we ought carefully to consider what is like to be most useful in his service; and, amidst all, to implore pardon through Jesus our sin-offering. And while every one is careful to do that which is proper in his station, God honourably records the good deeds of his people in the most par-

APPROACH TO THE NILE BRIDGE. [NUMBERS, viii: 1.]—No view, perhaps, could be in greater contrast from the Egypt of Moses' time than the one given above of the approach to the Nile Bridge. Up to 1863, passage of the Nile was made by small ferry boats. Now we have a bridge of iron 1260 feet long, with stone buttresses. A pair of British lions sitting at the entrance of the bridge bespeak the fact that Egypt has passed under the influence of modern times and modern ideas. Across this bridge tourists now always pass to the pyramids. It perpetually presents a scene of life and color. There are donkeys and camels and carts and carriages going and coming throughout the day. Most tourists who visit the pyramids now go from Cairo in carriages, though occasionally a traveler prefers the old time method of traveling on a donkey.

84 This was the dedication of the altar (in the day when it was anointed)<sup>2</sup> by the princes of Israel: twelve chargers of silver, twelve silver bowls, twelve spoons of gold;

85 Each charger of silver weighing an hundred and thirty shekels, each bowl seventy: all the silver vessels weighed two thousand and four hundred shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary.<sup>3</sup>

86 The golden spoons were twelve, full of incense, weighing ten shekels apiece, after the shekel of the sanctuary: all the gold of the spoons was an hundred and twenty shekels.<sup>4</sup>

87 All the oxen for the burnt-offering were twelve bullocks, the rams twelve, the lambs of the first year twelve, with their meat-offering; and the kids of the goats for sin-offering twelve:

88 And all the oxen, for the sacrifice of the peace-offerings, were twenty and four bullocks, the rams sixty, the he-goats sixty, the lambs of the first year sixty.<sup>5</sup> This was the dedication of the altar, after that it was anointed.

89 ¶ And when Moses was gone into the tabernacle of the congregation to speak with Him,<sup>6</sup> then he heard the voice of one speaking unto him from off the mercy-seat that was upon the ark of testimony, from between the two cherubims: and he<sup>7</sup> spake unto Him.<sup>8</sup> churches; and if faithful and diligent while their strength continues, their people ought to support them decently when they become old and infirm, and Jesus Christ will for ever reward them in the heavenly state.

CHAPTER IX. REFLECTIONS. — We need repeated excitements to the most pleasant and solemn services of God; though it is an infinite favour, that, in these deserts of trouble, we may keep the Lord's solemn feasts. Those who know their value will delight in the observance, and rejoice to see others hungering and thirsting after God's ordinances, even when hindrances are laid in their way. Ministers ought ever to be careful in debarring scandalous sinners from the seals of the covenant; yet, on the contrary, ever cautious and attentive to God's word in determining particular cases. But here let me reflect on the mercy, that though we Gentiles were of old afar off, and in our uncleanness, God hath brought us nigh by the blood of his Son, and hath provided a second, a gospel passover for us! If then we be unavoidably disappointed of public ordinances, let us take the first opportunity of approaching his house or table. Providential hindrances may disappoint us of the means, but cannot, if our hearts be right, deprive us of the grace thereof; God will amply supply our wants some other way: while such as reject God's ordinances will

7 The perpetuity of the cloud in such a climate, during so many years, and in sight of such a 'great saying people.' Ro. 10. 21, not one of whom ever attempted to question the fact, presents now an unanswerable attestation to the truth of the Mosaic history, as it presented then an unquestionable symbol and evidence of the divine presence.—C.

9 When the cloud was taken up they decamped; followed so long as it went before them, ver. 12, and Ex. 13. 21, and pitched their tents when the cloud became stationary over a particular place. To this the stars at Bethlehem seems to have corresponded, when it 'went before' the wise men till it came and stood over the place 'where the young child was,' Mat. 2. 9.—C.

6 ¶ And there were certain men who were 'defiled by the dead body of a man, that they could not keep the passover on that day; and they came before Moses and before Aaron on that day.

7 And those men said unto him, We are defiled by the dead body of a man: wherefore are we kept back, that we may not 'offer an offering of the LORD in his appointed season among the children of Israel?

8 And Moses said unto them, Stand still, and I will 'hear what the LORD will command concerning you.

9 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

10 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If any man of you, or of your posterity, shall be 'unclean by reason of a dead body, or be in a journey afar off, yet he shall keep the passover unto the LORD.

11 The 'fourteenth day of the second month at even they shall keep it, and eat it with unleavened bread and bitter herbs.

12 They shall leave<sup>3</sup> none of it unto the morning, nor break any bone of it: according to all the ordinances of the passover they shall keep it.

13 But the man that is clean, and is not in a journey, and 'forbeareth to keep the passover, even the same soul shall be cut off from his people: because he brought not the offering<sup>4</sup> of the LORD in his appointed season, that man shall bear his sin.

14 And if 'a stranger shall sojourn among you, and will keep the passover unto the LORD; according to the ordinance of the passover, and according to the manner thereof, so shall he do: ye shall have one ordinance, both for the stranger,<sup>5</sup> and for him that was born in the land.

15 ¶ And 'on the day that the tabernacle was reared up the cloud covered the tabernacle, namely, the tent<sup>6</sup> of the testimony: and at even there was upon the tabernacle as it were the appearance of fire until the morning.

16 So<sup>7</sup> it was alway:<sup>7</sup> the cloud covered it by day, and the appearance of fire by night.

17 And 'when the cloud was taken up from the tabernacle, then after that the children of Israel journeyed: and in the place where the cloud abode, there the children of Israel pitched their tents.<sup>8</sup>

18 At the commandment of the LORD the children of Israel journeyed, and at the commandment of the LORD they pitched: as long as the cloud abode upon the tabernacle they rested in their tents.

19 And when the cloud tarried long<sup>9</sup> upon the tabernacle many days, then the children of Israel kept the charge of the LORD, and journeyed not.

20 And so it was, when the cloud was a few days upon the tabernacle; according to the commandment of the LORD they abode in their tents, and according to the commandment of the LORD they journeyed.

21 And so it was, when the cloud abode<sup>1</sup> from even unto the morning, and that the cloud was taken up in the morning, then they journeyed: whether it was by day or by night that the cloud was taken up, they journeyed.

22 Or whether it were two days, or a month, or a year, that the cloud tarried upon the tabernacle, remaining thereon, the children of Israel abode<sup>2</sup> in their tents, and journeyed not: but when it was taken up, they journeyed.<sup>2</sup>

23 At<sup>3</sup> the commandment of the LORD they rested in their tents, and at the commandment of the LORD they journeyed: they kept the charge of the LORD, at the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

1 The use of the silver trumpets. 11 The Israelites remove from Sinai to Paran. 14, 18, 22, 25 The order of their march. 29 Hobab is entreated by Moses not to leave them. 33 The blessing of Moses at the removing and resting of the ark.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

3 And when they shall blow with them, <sup>c</sup>all the assembly<sup>1</sup> shall assemble themselves to thee at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

4 And if they blow <sup>d</sup>but with one trumpet, then the princes, <sup>e</sup>which are <sup>f</sup>heads of the thousands of Israel, shall gather themselves unto thee.<sup>2</sup>

5 When ye blow an alarm,<sup>3</sup> then <sup>g</sup>the camps that lie on the east parts shall go forward.<sup>4</sup>

11 ¶ And it came to pass on the 'twentieth day of the second month, in the second year, that the cloud was taken up from off the tabernacle of the testimony.<sup>7</sup>

12 And the children of Israel 'took their journeys out of the wilderness of Sinai; and the cloud rested in the wilderness of Paran.<sup>8</sup>

13 And they first took their journey, 'ac-cording to the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

be rejected by him. Habitual neglect of the Lord's supper is a fearful sign of a naughty heart.—Let Jesus, and JEHOVAH in him, be our pillar of cloud, to direct our motions and rests; and let us be always obedient to his tokens: no safety can be had in going before him; and no comfort can be had in loitering behind him. Let me be ready, with comfort, to see this cloud remove into the eternal state, where I expect a more abiding habitation; that when death comes, I may have nothing to do but to remove: and, even by the way, let God fix my residence and lot as he pleases; and there let me contentedly pitch my tent.

CHAPTER X. REFLECTIONS. — In these trumpets I discern the pure and precious gospel of Christ, and hear its joyful sound proclaiming the sufficiency and suitability of Jesus and his righteousness, calling sinful men to him and his ordinances, and encouraging them in their journey heavenward, and in their spiritual warfare with sin, Satan, the world, and death. Let me also observe, that even Sinai-visits, the most noted opportunities of intimacy with God, come quickly to an end; and that, in this world, we but remove from one wilderness to another. While, in the Hebrews' orderly march I discern the ransom of the Lord, directed by the Lion of the tribe of Judah, and having his Father's presence among them, march-23 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Manasseh was Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

24 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Benjamin was Abidan the son of Gideon.

C. C.—The same Hebrew word is written 'Reuel' in the English version of Ex. 2. 18. It would seem that when Reuel (or Jethro) went back to his own country, as stated in Ex. 18. 27, his son Hobab remained with Moses, and abode in the camp during the whole period of the sojourn at Sinai.

Now when the Israelites approached the borders of Midian proper, Hobab determined to leave them and go to his own country; it would seem, however, that in the earnest persuasion of Moses he remained with the Israelites and acted as their guide.—P.

1 The burning at Taberah is quenched by Moses' prayer. 4 The people lust for flesh, and loathe manna. 10 Moses complaineth of his charge. 16 God divideth his burden among seventy elders. 31 Quails are given in wrath at Kibroth-hattaavah.

AND when the people complained,<sup>1</sup> it displeased<sup>2</sup> the LORD: and the LORD heard it; and his anger was kindled: and the fire of the LORD burnt among them, and consumed them that were in the "utmost parts of the camp.<sup>3</sup>

2 And the people 'cried unto Moses; and when Moses 'prayed unto the LORD, the fire was quenched.<sup>4</sup>

3 And he called the name of the place Taberah:<sup>5</sup> because the fire of the LORD burnt among them.

4 ¶ And the 'mixed multitude that was among them fell a lusting: and the children of Israel also wept<sup>6</sup> again,<sup>7</sup> and said, 'Who shall give us flesh to eat?

5 We remember 'the fish which we did eat in Egypt freely; the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlick:

6 But now our soul is 'dried away: there is nothing at all, besides this manna, before our eyes.<sup>8</sup>

7 And 'the manna was as coriander-seed, and the colour thereof<sup>9</sup> as the colour of bdellium.

8 And the people went 'about and gathered it, and ground it in mills, or beat it in a mortar, and 'baked it in pans, and made cakes of it: and the taste of it was as the taste of fresh oil.

9 And when the 'dew fell upon the camp in the night, the manna fell upon it.<sup>1</sup>

10 ¶ Then Moses heard the people weep throughout their families, every man in the door of his tent; and the 'manger of the LORD was kindled greatly; Moses also was displeased.

11 And Moses said unto the LORD, Wherefore hast thou 'afflicted thy servant? and wherefore have I not found favour in thy sight, that thou layest the burden of all this people upon me?

12 Have I conceived all this people? have I begotten them, that thou shouldest say unto me, 'Carry them in thy bosom (as a nursing-father beareth the sucking child) unto the land which thou swarest unto their fathers?

ing in goodly order to their heavenly Canaan, let me exert myself to gain others, particularly my relations, to God and glory. There is in him enough for us all. And happy are they, if grace make them forget their father's house, and their own people, to go to the Lord! While, therefore, we have his ordinances with us, let us strive together in prayer for his presence therein; that it may be our effectual defence against enemies, and a source of every necessary comfort.

CHAPTER XI. [Ver. 1. The cause of complaint is not stated. It may have been from the length and the difficulty of the journey. They were now in the most sterile part of the wilderness of Sinai. It would seem too that the complaints were in a great measure confined to the strangers or slaves, called 'the mixed multitude,' who followed them from Egypt, and who marched not in the midst, but on the skirts of the camp. Upon these the 'fire of the Lord' fell. P.]

Ver. 5. [The murmurings began with the strangers, and soon extended to the Israelites. We can scarcely wonder at men long accustomed to the flesh, the fish, the acid vegetables, and luscious fruits of Egypt, wearying with the sameness of the somewhat insipid manna. Cucumbers, melons, and onions were, and still are, very abundant in Egypt. They form the staple articles of food among the lower classes; and are well suited to the natural wants of man in a hot and dry climate. P.]

Ver. 8. [In Ex. 16. 31 it is said the manna 'was like coriander-seed, white'; here it is said it was like coriander-seed, and in colour like bdellium. The two descriptions agree:—In form the manna resembled coriander-seed; but in colour it was white, like the transparent pale-coloured gum called bdellium. In Exodus the taste is said to be 'like wafers with honey'; here it is compared to 'fresh oil.' There is no discrepancy:—the former description applied to it as fresh gathered; this, as ground, and beaten, and baked. P.]

Ver. 10. [This unmanly, this childish 'weeping' of Israel was addressed, not to God in prayer, but to Moses, ver. 13, in unreasonable petition, or ungrateful reproach; therefore God's anger is 'greatly kindled.' But there are those who are offended when anger is ascribed to God: and why? because the anger of sinful men is often unreasonable, without cause, violent, unjust, and destructive—must therefore the anger of a holy God be necessarily of the same character? To deny that God is angry with sin and sinners because human anger is generally evil, were just as unreason-

13 Whence should I have flesh to give unto all this people? for they weep unto me, saying, Give us flesh, that we may eat.

14 I am not able to bear all this people alone, because it is too heavy for me.

15 And if thou deal thus with me, kill me, I pray thee, out of hand, if I have found favour in thy sight; and let me not see my wretchedness.

16 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Gather unto me seventy men of the elders of Israel, whom thou knowest to be the elders of the people, and officers over them; and bring them unto the tabernacle of the congregation, that they may stand there with thee:

17 And I will come down and talk with thee there: and I will take of the spirit which is upon thee, and will put it upon them; and they shall bear the burden of the people with thee, that thou bear it not thyself alone.

18 And say thou unto the people, Sanctify yourselves against to-morrow, and ye shall eat flesh: (for ye have wept in the ears of the LORD, saying, Who shall give us flesh to eat? for it was well with us in Egypt:) therefore the LORD will give you flesh, and ye shall eat.

19 Ye shall not eat one day, nor two days, nor five days, neither ten days, nor twenty days;

20 But even a whole month, until it come out at your nostrils, and it be loathsome unto you; because that ye have despised the LORD which is among you, and have wept before him, saying, Why came we forth out of Egypt?

21 ¶ And Moses said, The people, among whom I am, are six hundred thousand footmen; and thou hast said, I will give them flesh, that they may eat a whole month.

22 Shall the flocks and the herds be slain for them, to suffice them? or shall all the fish of the sea be gathered together for them, to suffice them?

23 And the LORD said unto Moses, Is the LORD's hand waxed short? thou shalt see now whether my word shall come to pass unto thee or not.

24 ¶ And Moses went out and told the people the words of the LORD, and gathered the seventy men of the elders of the people, and set them round about the tabernacle.

25 And the LORD came down in a cloud, and spake unto him, and took of the spirit that was upon him, and gave it unto the seventy elders: and it came to pass, that, when the spirit rested upon them, they prophesied, and did not cease.

5 To prophesy commonly signifies to foretell ere a thing comes to pass; but it also is employed to signify the explanation of a thing already announced. In this sense it is said, Ex. 7. 1, 'Aaron thy brother shall be thy prophet'; that is, not a foreteller of futurity, but the expositor of thy sentiments to Pharaoh. Like Aaron, then, these persons began to expound, apply, and enforce the divine word, in exhortation, reproof, correction, and instruction in righteousness.—C.

27 And there ran a young man, and told Moses, and said, Eldad and Medad do prophesy in the camp.

28 And Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of Moses, one of his young men, answered and said, My lord Moses, forbid them.

30 And Moses gat him into the camp, he and the elders of Israel.

31 ¶ And there went forth a wind from the LORD, and brought quails from the sea, and let them fall by the camp, as it were a day's journey on this side, and as it were a day's journey on the other side, round about the camp, and as it were two cubits high upon the face of the earth.

32 And the people stood up all that day, and all that night, and all the next day, and they gathered the quails: he that gathered least gathered ten homers; and they spread them all abroad for themselves round about the camp.

It was situated four days' march east of Sinai. It is probably identical, as the name would indicate, with the fountain of Haderah, which lies about 40 miles north-east of Sinai, in the midst of a wild, bleak, and barren desert. There is a larger fountain, called Ain, some distance to the north, and probably the camp may have extended to it. It is on the direct route from Sinai to Kadesh. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—How often men sin outrageously immediately after the most solemn exercises, and make the very commandments of Heaven the occasions of such sinning! We often murmur against the dispensations of Providence, even without any shadow of reason; nay, in direct contradiction to every

SITE OF ANCIENT MEMPHIS—WHERE MOSES PASSED HIS YOUTH.
[Numbers, xii:1.]—Memphis was the royal residence of the Pharaohs of the Sixth dynasty. It was an old capital of Egypt. It was founded by Menes, the first king of Egypt. Here was the temple consecrated to the worship of Isis, and here was the temple of Apis. To-day it is in utter desolation. Nothing remains above ground but ruins, and these overgrown with palm trees. Material for building old Cairo was brought from Memphis. The most interesting thing connected with this once splendid city is that it was here that Moses was brought up. The great cemetery near the site of Memphis, contains the tombs of the ancient empire, that is, the tombs built during the first eleven dynasties. Among these is the celebrated Step Pyramid.

8 With him will I speak mouth to mouth, even apparently, and not in dark speeches; and the similitude of the LORD shall he behold: wherefore then were ye not afraid to speak against my servant Moses?

9 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against them, and he departed.

Moses, by the expression, does not sanction any passionate rudeness of an irascible and unreasonable father, but a legal custom of censuring an undutiful child. From the melancholy records of our Redeemer's trial before Caiaphas, Mat. 26. 67. 27. 30. it seems to have continued as a mark of condemnation; and almost every eastern traveller in modern times has noticed and recorded the prevalence and permanence of the custom.—C.

1 The names of the men who were sent to search the land. 17 Their instructions. 21 Their acts. 26 Their relation.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Send thou men, that they may search the land of Canaan, which I give unto the children of Israel: of every tribe of their fathers shall ye send a man, every one a ruler among them.

3 And Moses, by the commandment of the LORD, sent them from the wilderness of Paran: all those men were heads of the children of Israel.

5 Of the tribe of Simeon, Shaphat the son of Hori.

6 Of the tribe of Judah, Caleb the son of Jephunneh.

reason; for ingratitude is the basest vice. Discontented persons loathe their very blessings, and seem solicitous to make themselves miserable; readily preferring the worst things which God withhold to the best which he bestows, and even the filthy pleasures of sin and sense to his unspeakable gift of grace.—It is a fearful mark of the curse of God upon the heart when men repine amidst plenty! Those who follow the people of God for base and carnal ends, quickly become murmurers when they meet with disappointments. A mixture of carnal and self-seeking men are ruinous to the church; and a mixture of carnal affections are the plague of the renewed heart. Through these it is that even the greatest saints are apt to lose their temper, extol their service, quarrel with the disposals of Providence, and distrust the power and kindness of God, when they meet with great provocations from their fellow-creatures—and to have fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, when they are especially called to reprove them by a contrary conduct. But God often tries his people, chiefly in respect of their most eminent graces, to humble them, and to prove them, when he finds them wanting; for the meekest are ready to wish themselves freed from trials, rather than to glorify God under them; nay, to wish death, when their temper is very unfit for it. But how richly God qualifies men for work when he calls them to it! Let me then never grudge to any the honours for which God hath fitted him; never condemn the government which God hath appointed; never forbid those who act for the honour of God, even though they follow not with us; nor ever neglect to accept the assistance which God affords me in my work, though it should eclipse my renown! But let me always remember that a curse or frown attends even God's granting of that which men ask in a murmuring and peremptory manner, and that he can easily render created comforts a tremendous and destructive plague!

CHAPTER XII. [Ver. 1. Or Cushite.—Cush was the son of Ham, Ge. 10. 6, and father of Nimrod, who founded the first great empire: and this wife is supposed to give offence as a descendant of Ham—whereas Zipporah, who is generally supposed to be now dead, is considered as a descendant of Midian, the son of Abraham by Keturah, Ge. 25. 2. But from Ex. 18. 5, 6 it appears that Zipporah had been brought to the camp, at most, a very short time before this event; and as there is no mention of her sudden death, an occurrence not likely to be overlooked, so there is no reason to suppose that Moses had married another wife; but that the offence is taken at Zipporah's real or imaginary influence with her husband. Ethiopia, as a geographical term, is one of very indefinite and general application in Scripture, unquestionably extending both to Asia and Africa, Ge. 2. 13; Eze. 30. 5; 38. 5. But if the name Ethiopian, or Cushite, be taken, not from the country, but the lineage of the woman, Moses had violated no law by his marriage: as God's prohibition on that head extended only to the Canaanites, De. 7. 3. C.—'Ethiopian' is in the Hebrew Cushite. There were two divisions of the Cushites: one settled in Arabia, and mingled with the Joktanites and Ishmaelites; the other crossed into Africa and colonized Ethiopia. The wife of Moses—doubtless a second wife—was not necessarily an Ethiopian; she was probably an Arabian Cushite. Zipporah was a Midianite, and could not therefore be termed a Cushite. P.]

Ver. 3. [These words, as so highly commendatory of Moses, are by some supposed an addition of Ezra, or some other inspired writer: but why indulge suppositions without evidence? The word translated meek may be justly rendered broken, afflicted, in which sense it would be an accurate description of his condition with his relatives and the whole people. But taking the word meek as descriptive of placidity of temper, there is no offence against modesty: because there is no offence against truth. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Too common, but very sinful, are contentions among saints; nor doth anything produce hotter disputes than jealousy of power. Grace, natural affection, duty, and safety, are all trampled under foot when men strive for grandeur and rule. But God takes a peculiar pleasure in vindicating and honouring his faithful ministers or people. He remarks exactly, and justly punishes, the injuries done to those who, from a meek regard to his law, will not avenge themselves. It is dangerous therefore to revile God's servants: they who do it shall at last be obliged to bow to them, and confess their sin. Yea, often God deals most sharply with his principal children when they offend him; and marks the abominable nature of their sin in the filth, pain, or shame of their punishment. But it is becoming when offending saints make the deepest submissions. And acceptable to God, honourable to us, and effectual for our neighbour's advantage, are sincere and affectionate intercessions for those who have injured us. But even while our sins hinder our heavenly journeys, the Lord will take care of our honour and comfort, if once we be penitent and humble.

CHAPTER XIII. [Ver. 17. 'Go up there (or thither) by the Negeb, and ascend the mountain.' The Negeb was the proper name of the region lying along the southern border of Canaan. The mountain was also a descriptive name given to that tract which lay between Jerusalem and Hebron. In going to Canaan from Kadesh their direct course was up the Negeb to the mountain, or, as it is called in the New Testament, 'the hill country.' P.]

Ver. 20. [There was need for courage of the highest order. It was a delicate, a difficult, and a dangerous mission. Great caution, close observation, and manly courage, such as would prevent the judgment from 23 And they came unto the <sup>11</sup>brook of Eshcol,<sup>8</sup> and cut down from thence a <sup>12</sup>branch with one cluster of grapes, and they bare it between two<sup>9</sup> upon a staff; and they brought of the pomegranates, and of the figs.

24 The place was called the brook Eshcol,<sup>1</sup> because of the cluster of grapes which the children of Israel cut down from thence.

REFLECTIONS.—It is hazardous to indulge our own senses and reasonings, rather than simply to submit to the revelations of God; for often the Lord chooses men's delusions, and permits them to be ensnared by their own unbelieving devices. How often are most of those who are employed in the most important transactions, evil and wicked; and get themselves remarked, chiefly to their lasting dishonour! Yea, the manifold experience of the power of God, and the frequent repetition of his promises, are of little avail with such as have abandoned themselves to the rage of their unbelief. The cowardly heart magnifies every object, and increases every difficulty: and unbelief obstinately concludes every enemy too mighty for us; while zeal for God dares every danger, and faith makes men confident of success. Credit therefore, O my soul, what the Lord hath spoken concerning the heavenly Canaan, and my entrance into it. Let me live by faith, not by sight. Let not unbelief and carnal sense, but faith and hope, be my spies, to enter within the veil. And let repeated tastes of fellowship with God, make my heart desire to depart, and be with Christ, which is far better.

29 Your carcasses shall fall in this wilderness; and all that were numbered of you, according to your whole number, from twenty years old and upward, which have murmured against me,

30 Doubtless ye shall not come into the land, concerning which I sware<sup>1</sup> to make you dwell therein, save Caleb the son of Jephunneh, and Joshua the son of Nun.<sup>2</sup>

31 But your <sup>h</sup>little ones, which ye said should be a prey, them will I bring in, and they shall know<sup>3</sup> the land which ye have despised.

32 But<sup>4</sup> as for you, your carcasses, they shall fall in this wilderness.

33 And your children shall wander in the wilderness <sup>l</sup>forty years, and <sup>m</sup>bear your whoredoms, until your carcasses be wasted in the wilderness.

34 After the number of the days in which ye searched the land, even <sup>n</sup>forty days, (each day for a year,) shall ye bear your iniquities, even forty years; and ye shall know <sup>o</sup>my breach of promise.<sup>3</sup>

35 I the LORD have said, <sup>p</sup>I will surely do it unto all this evil congregation, that are gathered together against me: in this wilderness they shall be consumed, and there they shall die.

36 ¶ And the men which Moses sent to search the land, who returned, and made all the congregation to murmur against him, by bringing up a <sup>q</sup>slander upon the land, 37 Even those men that did bring up the evil report upon the land, <sup>r</sup>died by the plague before the LORD.

38 But Joshua the son of Nun, and Caleb the son of Jephunneh, which were of the men that went to search the land, lived still.

39 And Moses told these sayings unto all the children of Israel: and the people <sup>s</sup>mourned greatly.

40 ¶ And they <sup>t</sup>rose up early in the morning, and gat them up into the top of the mountain, saying, Lo, we be here, and will go up unto the place which the LORD hath promised: for we have sinned.

41 And Moses said, <sup>u</sup>Wherefore now do ye transgress the commandment of the LORD? but it shall not prosper.

42 Go not up, for the LORD is not among you; that ye be not smitten before your enemies.

43 For the Amalekites and the Canaanites are there before you, and ye shall fall by the sword: because ye are turned away from the LORD, therefore the LORD will not be with you.

2 From Jos. 14. 1; 22. 13, we learn that Eleazar and others now present did afterwards enter into Canaan. Is not this a contradiction? 8 The phrase translated 'breach of promise' occurs but this once, so that there is no resource in comparison. The meaning must therefore be sought in the word itself, and the analogy of other divine truths. To say, with some, that the promise being conditional and the Israelites having sinned in their part, God means to tell them he is not bound to his part of the engagement, is really to explain nothing. For even admitting the phrase 'conditional promise' still it is merely an abbreviated name for both a promise and a threatening implied or declared, the one to the believing and obedient, the other to the unbelieving and rebellious; and as the fulfilment of the promise would be no disannulling of the threatening, so the infraction of the threatening would be no 'breach' of the promise. The literal translation will best explain and convey the meaning of the passage: 'Ye shall know my rising up against you, my displeasure, my indignation, which sense of the words is confirmed by the following verse.—C.

5 Now commenced the thirty-eight years' wandering. Of their journeys during this long period, and of the 'great and terrible wilderness' into which they were driven, not a single record has been preserved. The name Tia, 'wandering,' which the desert south of Palestine still bears, seems to be the only local memorial of it. Sacred history remains silent until, after the lapse of the thirty-eight years, another generation, under the same aged leaders, however, appearance more around the sacred fountain of Kadesh.—P.

1 The date and place of the divine communications contained in this chapter are not mentioned. It would seem from ver. 22, 23 that it must have been a considerable time after the giving of the law on Sinai, and consequently it could not have been during the first sojourn of the people at Kadesh. The regular diary breaks off at the close of chap. xiv., and is not again resumed till chap. xx. It is probable, but at least entirely certain, that the revelations made and the incidents recorded in x. xxi. took place during the thirty-eight years' wandering, though neither time nor place is indicated.—P.

10 And thou shalt bring for a drink-offering half an hin of wine, <sup>f</sup>for an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

11 Thus shall it be done for one bullock, or for one ram, or for a lamb, or a kid.

12 According to the number that ye shall prepare, so shall ye do to every one, according to their number.

13 All that are born of the country shall do these things after this manner, in offering an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

14 ¶ And if a stranger<sup>4</sup> sojourn with you, or whosoever <sup>g</sup>be among you in your generations, and will offer an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD; as ye do, so he shall do.

CHAPTER XV. [Ver. 38. Fringes, called in the New Testament the 'hem or border of the garment,' Mat. 9. 20; 23. 5. Being many, in separate detail, yet united in one garment: the fringes were the emblems or memorials of many commandments united in one law. The ribband, lace, or rather thread of blue, surrounding or pervading the whole, represented the one principle of the law—the unchanging love of God. And being the chief-priestly colour—for the robe of the ephod was all of blue, Ex. 28. 31—it reminded every believer that he was a priest of God, and bound to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ, 1 Pe. 2. 5. C.]

TOMBS OF THE MAMELUKES—IN THE REGION WHERE THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL SPENT SO MANY YEARS IN EGYPT.
 [NUMBERS, xv.]—Beyond the citadel in Cairo there are a number of beautiful tombs extending along the eastern side of the city, known as the tombs of the Mamelukes. The ruins of these tombs bear traces of great artistic merit, some of the minarets being exceedingly beautiful. From the galleries in the minarets the muezins summon the faithful to prayer five times a day. The muezzin in a kind of sing-song tone utters the following: "Allah is great! I testify that there is no other god but Allah! And Mohammed is the prophet of Allah! Come to prayer! Come to worship! Allah is great! There is no god but Allah!" These tombs are now falling to decay as all things belonging to the civilization of Egypt are falling to decay. This ancient land of the Pharaohs and the children of Israel, by the strange mutations of history is now under the dominance and influence of a Christian nation.

15 One<sup>9</sup> ordinance<sup>5</sup> shall be both for you of the congregation, and also for the stranger that sojourneth with you, an ordinance for ever in your generations: as ye are, so shall the stranger be before the LORD.

16 One law, and one manner, shall be for you, and for the stranger that sojourneth with you.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

18 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye come into the land whither I bring you,<sup>6</sup>

19 Then it shall be, that when ye eat of the bread of the land, ye shall offer up an heave-offering unto the LORD.

20 Ye shall offer up a cake of the first of your dough for an heave-offering: as ye do the heave-offering of the thrashing-floor, so shall ye heave it.

21 Of the first of your dough ye shall give unto the LORD an heave-offering in your generations.

22 ¶ And if ye have erred, and not observed all these commandments, which the LORD hath spoken unto Moses,

23 Even<sup>m</sup> all that the LORD hath commanded you by the hand of Moses, from the day that the LORD commanded Moses, and henceforward, among your generations;

24 Then it shall be, if ought be committed by ignorance,<sup>7</sup> without the knowledge of the congregation,<sup>8</sup> that all the congregation shall offer<sup>n</sup> one young bullock for a burnt-offering, for a sweet savour unto the LORD, with his meat-offering, and his drink-offering, according to the manner,<sup>9</sup> and one kid of the goats for a sin-offering.

25 And the priest shall make an atonement for all the congregation of the children of Israel, and it shall be forgiven them; for it is ignorance: and they shall bring their offering, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD, and their sin-offering before the LORD, for their ignorance:

26 And it shall be forgiven all the congregation of the children of Israel, and the stranger that sojourneth among them; seeing all the people were in ignorance.

It might also signify that in due time the Gentiles would be fully admitted into the church.—7.

8 There are two laws for sins of ignorance. Le. iv. Nu. xv. The first for the wilderness: the second for Canaan. But why are there two laws for the same case? They are not for the same case. The law in Le. 4. 2 is enacted for cases where the congregation, priest, or ruler, or people, have 'erred,' and 'not observed' all the commandments, that is, for any mere neglect arising from ignorance. The law in Nu. 15. 22 is enacted for cases where the sin of ignorance is 'against any of the commandments of the Lord; not a mere neglect, but a direct infraction. The distinction is well expressed in these words:—'We have left undone the things which we ought to have done; and we have done those things which we ought not to have done.'—C.

27 ¶ And if any soul sin through ignorance, then he shall bring a she-goat of the first year for a sin-offering.

28 And the priest shall make an atonement for the soul that sinneth ignorantly, when he sinneth by ignorance before the LORD, to make an atonement for him; and it shall be forgiven him.

29 Ye shall have one law for him that sinneth through ignorance, both for him that is born among the children of Israel, and for the stranger that sojourneth among them.

30 ¶ But the soul that doeth ought presumptuously,<sup>1</sup> (whether he be born in the land, or a stranger,) the same reproacheth the LORD; and that soul shall be cut off from among his people:

31 Because he hath despised the word of the LORD, and hath broken his commandment, that soul shall utterly be cut off;<sup>2</sup> his iniquity shall be upon him.

32 ¶ And, while the children of Israel were in the wilderness, they found a man that gathered sticks upon the sabbath-day.<sup>3</sup>

33 And they that found him gathering sticks brought him unto Moses and Aaron, and unto all the congregation.

34 And they put him in ward,<sup>4</sup> because it was not declared what should be done to him.

35 And the LORD said unto Moses, The man shall be surely put to death: all the congregation shall stone him with stones without the camp.

36 And all the congregation brought him without the camp, and stoned him with stones, and he died;<sup>5</sup> as the LORD commanded Moses.

37 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

38 Speak unto the children of Israel, and bid them that they make them fringes<sup>6</sup> in the borders of their garments, throughout their generations, and that they put upon the fringe of the borders a ribband of blue.

39 And it shall be unto you for a fringe, that ye may look upon it, and remember all the commandments of the LORD, and do them;

God to have his ministers decently provided for! But chiefly behold the agreeable nourishment and heart-cheering consolations of the Holy Ghost, which attend the offering of our Redeemer once for all! Behold the kindness of God in inviting the Gentiles to his church, and presaging their entrance into it in due time in such a multitude of laws, favourable to strangers! Behold how the Lord must be honoured with the first-fruits of all our substance! But especially behold the indispensable necessity of Christ, as our propitiation for sin, however inadvertently it be committed; and the infinite danger of wilful and presumptuous sinning exemplified in this violation of the Sabbath! Is it not shameful that we should need memorials of obedience to the laws of God, so great and gracious—nay, God, even our own God! Enter then, my soul, into the spirit of these things. While I live on Jesus' flesh and blood, and rely on his atonement alone, let me cheerfully give myself, and all that I have, to the Lord. Never dare to sin against light and love; to violate the Sabbath of the Lord my God, by thinking my own thoughts, speaking my own words, doing my own ways, or finding my own pleasures. But let his law be written on my heart; and every providence, every enjoyment, be improved by me as an excitement to holy obedience!

CHAPTER XVI. REFLECTIONS.—It is hard for the best of characters to stand before envy. Unsansitized honours often puff up men to their own destruction: and if God exalt them above most of their brethren, they can endure to be in subjection to none. Yea, God permits unsanitized professors, especially ministers and magistrates, to go often the most fearful lengths in sin. Every act of disobedience to or contempt of God's viceregents in the church or state, is by him accounted rebellion against himself: and often would sinful nations be utterly ruined, were it not for the intercession of those saints whom they abuse and persecute. But God can, and sometimes does, execute upon presumptuous sinners the most terrible correspondent justice. And though, with care, he distinguishes between the more and the less guilty, yet he sets up proper memorials of his judgments, that others may hear and fear to do wickedly. But notwithstanding, hardened sinners, who survive, forget the most awakening alarms, and return to their persecution of God's servants! Yet still, in the most endearing manner, ought we to promote the welfare and salvation of those who have injured us; and when we are maliciously accused, the greatest comfort is the testimony of a good conscience. How like unto their master Christ do ministers act, when they expose their very lives to prevent the ruin of such as abuse them! And quickly the Lord repents him of the evil, when, earnestly entreated by such as, along with himself, are abused by sinners. Let me now, with trembling, remember my faults this day.—How often have I, as these rebels, gone about to establish my own righteousness, and refused to submit to the laws of Christ; and and that ye seek not 'after your own heart, and your own eyes; after which ye use to go a whoring;

40 That ye may remember and do all my commandments, and be holy unto your God.

1 The rebellion of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram. 23 Moses separateth the people from the rebels' tents. 31 The earth swalloweth up Korah, and a fire consumeth others. 36 The censers are reserved to holy use. 41 Fourteen thousand and seven hundred are slain by a plague for murmuring against Moses and Aaron. 46 Aaron by incense slayeth the plague.

NOW Korah, the son of Izhar, the son of Kohath, the son of Levi; and Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab; and On, the son of Peleth, sons of Reuben, took men.<sup>1</sup>

2 And they rose up before Moses, with certain of the children of Israel, two hundred and fifty princes of the assembly, famous in the congregation, men of renown:

3 And they gathered themselves together against Moses, and against Aaron, and said unto them, Ye take too much upon you,<sup>2</sup> seeing all the congregation are holy, every one of them, and the LORD is among them: wherefore then lift ye up yourselves above the congregation of the LORD?<sup>3</sup>

4 ¶ And when Moses heard it, he fell upon his face:

5 And he spake unto Korah, and unto all his company, saying, Even 'to-morrow' the LORD will show who are his, and who is holy; and will cause him to come near unto him: even him whom he hath chosen will he cause to come near unto him.

6 This do; Take you censers, Korah and all his company;

7 And put fire therein, and put incense in them before the LORD to-morrow; and it shall be, that the man whom the LORD doth choose, he shall be holy: ye take too much upon you, ye sons of Levi;

8 And Moses said unto Korah, Hear, I pray you, ye sons of Levi;

9 Seemeth it but a small thing unto you, that the God of Israel hath separated you from the congregation of Israel, to bring you near to himself, to do the service of the tabernacle of the LORD, and to stand before the congregation to minister unto them?

1 The word translated 'took,' though last in our version, is the first in the Hebrew; and being in the singular number, must therefore denote the act, not of the whole company, but of Korah's adherents. The true meaning of the verse seems to be—'Now Korah the son of Izhar,' &amp;c., took even Dathan, &amp;c., and On, the son of Peleth (Dathan, Abiram, and On, being all sons of Reuben, see De. 11.6), and they rose up before Moses, &amp;c. Some high authorities, following the Septuagint and several MSS., read 'son of Reuben.' But the current of authority is decidedly for the plural, 'sons.'—C.

LORD: and what is Aaron, that ye murmur against him?<sup>6</sup>

12 ¶ And Moses sent to call Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab; which said, We will not come up:

13 Is it a small thing that thou hast brought us up out of a land that floweth with milk and honey to kill us in the wilderness, except thou make thyself altogether a prince over us?

14 Moreover, thou hast not brought us into a land that floweth with milk and honey, or given us inheritance of fields and vineyards: wilt thou put out the eyes of these men? we will not come up.

15 And Moses was very wroth,<sup>8</sup> and said unto the LORD, Respect not thou their offering:<sup>9</sup> I have not taken one ass from them, neither have I hurt one of them.<sup>1</sup>

16 ¶ And Moses said unto Korah, Be thou and all thy company before the LORD, thou, and they, and Aaron, to-morrow:

17 And take every man his censer, and put incense in them, and bring ye before the LORD every man his censer, two hundred and fifty censers; thou also, and Aaron, each of you his censer.

18 And they took every man his censer, and put fire in them, and laid incense thereon, and stood in the door of the tabernacle of the congregation with Moses and Aaron.

19 And Korah gathered all the congregation against them unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and the glory of the LORD appeared unto all the congregation.

20 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

21 Separate yourselves from among this congregation, that I may consume them in a moment.

22 And they fell upon their faces, and said, O God, the God of the spirits of all flesh, shall one man sin, and wilt thou be wroth with all the congregation?

23 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

24 Speak unto the congregation, saying, Get you up from about the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram.<sup>3</sup>

25 And Moses rose up, and went unto Dathan and Abiram; and the elders of Israel followed him.

26 And he spake unto the congregation, saying, Depart, I pray you, from the tents of these wicked men, and touch nothing of theirs, lest ye be consumed in all their sins.

27 So they gat up from the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, on every side:

thus attempted to thrust him from his office of priest and king over the people of God, in order that I might usurp his place! How often have I refused to come at his call, and offered strange incense before him?

COLUMNS OF THE TEMPLE SERAPEUM, PUTEOLI—A TEMPLE BUILT OF MARBLE TAKEN FROM THE COUNTRY IN WHICH MOSES GREW UP. [NUMBERS xvi].— This picture of the temple of Serapeum, at Puteoli, standing near the place where St. Paul landed upon his first missionary journey to Italy, is placed in connection with the name of Moses in this chapter because it was a temple built in honor of an Egyptian god. Plutarch asserts that Serapis was Osiris after he had passed into the subterranean world. As if to complete the idea of a temple to an Egyptian deity the Corinthian pillars found in this marble structure are from Africa. This temple consisted of a square court enclosed by forty-eight marble and granite columns with forty-three small chambers adjoining. The portico rested on six Corinthian columns, three of which remain. In the center of the court stood a circular temple surrounded by sixteen marble pillars. By four flights of steps the interior was approached where statues of Serapis, now in the museum at Naples, were found.

and Dathan and Abiram came out, and stood in the door of their tents, and their wives, and their sons, and their little children.

28 And Moses said, Hereby ye shall know that the LORD hath sent me to do all these works; (for I have not done them of mine own mind;)

29 If these men die the common death of all men, or if they be visited after the visitation of all men, then the LORD hath not sent me:

30 But if the LORD make a new thing, and the earth open her mouth, and swallow them up, with all that appertain unto them, and they go down quick into the pit, then ye shall understand that these men have provoked the LORD.

31 ¶ And it came to pass, as he had made an end of speaking all these words, that the ground clave asunder that was under them:

32 And the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their houses, and all the men that appertained unto Korah, and all their goods.

33 They, and all that appertained to them, went down alive into the pit, and the earth closed upon them: and they perished from among the congregation.

34 And all Israel that were round about them fled at the cry of them: for they said, Lest the earth swallow us up also.

35 And there came out a fire from the LORD, and consumed the two hundred and fifty men that offered incense.

36 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

37 Speak unto Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest, that he take up the censers out of the burning, and scatter thou the fire yonder; for they are hallowed.

38 The censers of these sinners against their own souls, let them make them broad plates for a covering of the altar; for they offered them before the LORD, therefore they are hallowed: and they shall be a sign unto the children of Israel.

39 And Eleazar the priest took the brazen censers, wherewith they that were burnt had offered; and they were made broad plates for a covering of the altar:

40 To be a memorial unto the children of Israel, that no stranger, which is not of the seed of Aaron, come near to offer incense before the LORD, that he be not as Korah, and as his company; as the LORD said to him by the hand of Moses.

was present at Aleppo during the time of a most destructive earthquake.

We heard his simple narrative of the trembling and yawning of the earth, the sudden and struggling descent of the living inhabitants, the piercing cry, the closing of the chasms, and the flowing of the blood, as from an immense wound; and he presented a most harrowing picture of judgment to Christians, such as that of Korah and his company presented to Israel.—C.

4 The infatuation and unweariness of this generation of the Israelites are astonishing. Some have supposed that they imagined Moses and Aaron to have used some secret arts for the destruction of the rebels, and they speak of them as the people of the Lord, as if their death had not been a judgment from God. It is more probable, however, that the ground of their charge was a belief that Moses and Aaron might by their prayers have prevented their awful punishment.—J.

8 Of the precise nature of the plague we are not informed. It may have been in the form of a sweeping epidemic—such as the disease commonly called Indian cholera—which is still seen to select, as it were, particular localities, and to be restrained by Providence at particular boundaries; or it may have been inflicted by a destructive wind, whose ravages are directed and confined in particular currents. Note. In this courageous and generous act of intercession, Aaron is a special example of Christ, standing between the living and the dead, having put away sin returning as an atoning priest, to Moses the representative of one condemning but now satisfied law, Ro. 10:4.—C.

CHAPTER XVII. [Ver. 6. There were originally but twelve tribes, but when Joseph was increased into Ephraim and Manasseh, Ge. 48:17, they became thirteen; afterwards when the tribe of Levi, instead of being numbered for war, was chosen of God for his service, instead of the first-born of every tribe, Nu. 1:47; 3:41, the tribes were again reckoned as twelve, Levi ceasing to be counted. As in this narrative every one of their princes gave him a rod apiece, and the rod of 41 ¶ But on the morrow all the congregation of the children of Israel murmured against Moses and against Aaron, saying, Ye have killed the people of the LORD.

42 And it came to pass, when the congregation was gathered against Moses and against Aaron, that they looked toward the tabernacle of the congregation: and, behold, the cloud covered it, and the glory of the LORD appeared.

43 And Moses and Aaron came before the tabernacle of the congregation.

44 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

45 Get you up from among this congregation, that I may consume them as in a moment. And they fell upon their faces.

46 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron, Take a censer, and put fire therein from off the altar, and put on incense, and go quickly unto the congregation, and make an atonement for them: for there is wrath gone out from the LORD; the plague is begun.

47 And Aaron took as Moses commanded, and ran into the midst of the congregation: and, behold, the plague was begun among the people: and he put on incense, and made an atonement for the people.

48 And he stood between the dead and the living; and the plague was stayed.

49 Now they that died in the plague were fourteen thousand and seven hundred, besides them that died about the matter of Korah.

50 And Aaron returned unto Moses, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and the plague was stayed.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Aaron's rod among all the rods of the tribes only flourisheth. 10 It is left for a monument against the rebels.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and take of every one of them a rod, according to the house of their fathers, of all their princes, according to the house of their fathers, twelve rods: write thou every man's name upon his rod.

3 And thou shalt write Aaron's name upon the rod of Levi: for one rod shall be for the head of the house of their fathers.

4 And thou shalt lay them up in the tabernacle of the congregation before the testimony, where I will meet with you.

5 And it shall come to pass, that the man's rod whom I shall choose shall blossom: and I will make to cease from me the murmurings of the children of Israel, whereby they murmur against you.

6 ¶ And Moses spake unto the children of Israel, and every one of their princes gave him a rod apiece,<sup>2</sup> for each prince one, according to their fathers' houses, even twelve rods: and the rod of Aaron was among their rods.

7 And Moses laid up the rods<sup>3</sup> before the LORD in the tabernacle of witness.

8 And it came to pass, that on the morrow Moses went unto the tabernacle of witness; and, behold, the rod of Aaron for the house of Levi was 'budded, and brought forth buds, and bloomed blossoms, and yielded almonds.<sup>4</sup>

9 And Moses brought out all the rods from before the LORD unto all the children of Israel: and they looked, and took every man his rod.<sup>5</sup>

10 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, 'Bring Aaron's rod again before the testimony, to be kept for a token against the rebels;<sup>6</sup> and thou shalt quite take away their murmurings from me, that they die not.

11 And<sup>7</sup> Moses did so: as the LORD commanded him, so did he.

12 And the children of Israel spake unto Moses, saying, 'Behold, we die, we perish, we all perish.

13 Whosoever cometh any thing near unto the tabernacle of the LORD shall die: shall we be consumed with dying?

1 The charge of the priests and Levites. 8 The priests' portion. 21 The Levites' portion. 25 The heave-offering to the priests out of the Levites' portion.

AND the LORD said unto Aaron, Thou, and thy sons, and thy father's house with thee, shall 'bear the iniquity of the sanctuary: and thou, and thy sons with thee, shall bear the iniquity<sup>1</sup> of your priesthood.

2 And thy 'brethren also of the tribe of Levi, the tribe of thy father, bring thou with thee, that they may be joined unto thee, and minister unto thee: but thou, and thy sons with thee, shall minister before the tabernacle of witness.

3 And they shall keep thy charge, and the charge of all the tabernacle; 'only they shall not come nigh the vessels of the sanctuary and the altar, that neither they nor ye also die.

4 And they shall be joined unto thee, and keep the charge of the tabernacle of the congregation, for all the service of the tabernacle: and a 'stranger shall not come nigh unto you.

5 And 'ye shall keep the charge of the sanctuary, and the charge of the altar; that there be no<sup>2</sup> wrath any more upon the children of Israel.

6 Never was the evidence of a miracle complete. (1) A dead rod not only buds, but blossoms, and bears fruit, at once. (2) The princes examined all, and each took his own rod. (3) They were rebuked that examined, and ambitious of the honour to be conferred on Aaron by this decision. (4) Aaron's rod was publicly deposited as an evidence of the fact recorded against the rebels. (5) They acquiesced in the evidence, and never murmured upon this head again.—Note. When infidelity denies miracles, it must deny them either upon a theory that asserts the impossibility of a miracle, or the insufficiency of the evidence. But such a theory is unphilosophical, being a mere assumption, without proof; and if the evidence for this miracle be sufficient, then is there no sufficient evidence for any historical fact into this conclusion, no doubt, infidelity is driven; and then it is madness, and reasoning with it is vain.—C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is very desirable to prevent all disputes among the people of God; but often very difficult to extinguish some men's pretensions to what was never theirs. Abundant is the grace of God, who will even work miracles to prevent the sin and ruin of such as have rebelled against him: and what a mercy is it when a minister's call to his office is manifested by his success therein; and if sinners, even at the last, be brought to repentance! Nothing, surely, but a bestowal of gracious influence will effectually stop all murmurings against the dispensations of God, and bring sinners to submit to them. But in this budding rod let me not only behold the fruitfulness of the Aaronic priesthood, in its usefulness to the people, and the certain succession of priests while the period continued, with the speedy justice which overtook the invaders thereof: but let me chiefly remark the eternal, the sole high-priesthood of our Lord Jesus, manifested by the blessed effects of the gospel rod of his strength in the conversion, sanctification, and comfort of sinful men.

CHAPTER XVIII. [Ver. 7. The sphere of the priest's labours is here distinctly defined. It embraced the offering of all sacrifices upon the altar; it embraced 17 But the <sup>firstling</sup> of a cow, or the firstling of a sheep, or the firstling of a goat, thou shalt not redeem; they are holy: thou shalt sprinkle their blood upon the altar, and shalt burn their fat for an offering made by fire, for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

18 And the flesh of them shall be thine, as the <sup>wave-breast</sup> and as the right shoulder are thine.

19 All <sup>the</sup> heave-offerings of the holy things, which the children of Israel offer unto the LORD, have I given thee, and thy sons and thy daughters with thee, by a statute for ever: it is a <sup>covenant of salt</sup> for ever before the LORD unto thee, and to thy seed with thee.

20 And the LORD spake unto Aaron, <sup>Thou</sup> shalt have no inheritance in their land, neither shalt thou have any part among them: <sup>I am</sup> thy part and thine inheritance among the children of Israel.

21 ¶ And, behold, I <sup>have</sup> given the children of Levi all the tenth in Israel for an inheritance, for their service which they serve, even the service of the tabernacle of the congregation.

22 Neither must the children of Israel henceforth <sup>come</sup> nigh the tabernacle of the congregation, lest they bear sin, <sup>and</sup> die.<sup>8</sup>

23 But the Levites shall <sup>do</sup> the service of the tabernacle of the congregation, and they shall bear their iniquity. It shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations, <sup>that</sup> among the children of Israel they have no inheritance.

24 But <sup>the</sup> tithes of the children of Israel, which they offer as an heave-offering unto the LORD, I have given to the Levites to inherit: therefore I have said unto them, Among the children of Israel they shall have no inheritance.

25 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

26 Thus speak unto the Levites, and say unto them, When ye take of the children of Israel the tithes, which I have given you from them for your inheritance, then ye shall offer up <sup>an</sup> heave-offering of it for the LORD, even a tenth <sup>part</sup> of the tithe.<sup>9</sup>

27 And this your heave-offering shall be reckoned<sup>1</sup> unto you, as though it were the corn

This emblematical use of salt seems to have passed by tradition into the manners of the Arabs, and some other oriental nations—with any of whom, should even an enemy have catered salt, the person with whom he has so eaten is bound to become, for the occasion, his friend and protector.—C.

1 'Red' is the emblem of sin, Is. 1. 18. For a heifer of that colour, without any spot or blemish, and as yet unyoked, the people are required to search. The difficulty of the discovery naturally leads them to inquire, Why is this appointed? (comp. Ex. 12. 26, 27), and thence to self-examination, acknowledgment of guilt, and refuge in atonement. With this ordinance, which could extend but to the purifying of the body, the beautiful contrast of the death of Christ, who, through the eternal Spirit, offered himself without spot to God, and 'cleanses the conscience from dead works,' He. 9. 13, 14.—C.

28 Thus ye also shall offer an heave-offering unto the LORD of all your tithes which ye receive of the children of Israel; and ye shall give thereof the LORD's heave-offering to Aaron the priest.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 The water of separation made of the ashes of a red heifer. 11 The law for the use of it in purification of the unclean.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

3 And ye shall give her unto Eleazar the priest, that he may bring her <sup>forth</sup> without the camp, and one shall slay her before his face.

4 And Eleazar the priest shall take of her blood with his finger, and <sup>sprinkle</sup> of her blood directly before the tabernacle of the congregation seven times.

5 And one shall <sup>burn</sup> the heifer in his sight; her skin, and her flesh, and her blood, with her dung, shall he burn.

6 And the priest shall take <sup>cedar-wood</sup>, and hyssop, and scarlet, and cast it into the midst of the burning of the heifer.

REFLECTIONS.—The ministerial work is necessary and important; and the greatest care and diligence is necessary to render a person faithful in it. He must not only put away sin from himself, but take all care to prevent it in others. And extensive is the account that must be given to God, not only for himself, but for others under his care. How needful then is it that all in their stations, particularly parents, masters, and magistrates, should exert themselves to render the ministry comfortable and successful! God will have his servants decently provided for in the church, and in the heavenly state; nor will ever a godly people fail to make a liberal provision for a gospel ministry. But base are the minds of those ministers who, having a competency, entangle themselves with the affairs of this life, or desire to excuse themselves from being charitable out of what God hath brought to their hand! And may I not also, in all this, discern the extensive care, faithful labours, and glorious rewards of my Redeemer; and his improvement of all to his Father's honour and his people's good!

CHAPTER XIX. REFLECTIONS.—Behold how polluted are men, dead in trespasses and sins—much more abominable than the beasts that perish! To carnal reasoning, some of God's ordinances appear absurd. How strange is it to make ashes, mingled with water, the mean of purification from the deepest defilement! But it is infinitely dangerous to condemn the least of his institutions. These ceremonies are indeed insufficient to take away sin; for the most remarkable of them for atonement or purification spread the defilement! But the meaning here is concerning Christ and his church. Being apprehended by the chief priests and elders of Israel, slain without the camp, burned in the furnace of his Father's love; and his blood, his life, offered to God for the completion of his justice: the virtue of his death, connected with the clean water, the pure influences of his Spirit, doth, in all generations, purge his people's consciences, and all their concerns, from dead works to serve the living God. Let it then be the care of my soul to begin, continue, and end my life, with a believing applica-

MOUNT OF OLIVES, FROM THE TEMPLE PLATEAU—A VIEW CHRIST WITNESSED MANY TIMES. [Numbers, xix:3.]—"And ye shall give her unto Eleazer the priest, that he may bring her forth without the camp, and one shall slay her before his face." The bodies of those animals offered for the sin of the congregation were burnt outside the camp, teaching that sin had no proper place in the city of God. In accordance with this view our Lord suffered without the gate. "Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate. Let us go forth unto him without the camp bearing his reproach." Above is a picture of the Mount of Olives from the Temple Plateau in Jerusalem. Upon the spot where this picture was taken the rites and ceremonies were perfected of which Jesus Christ was the living fulfillment.

8 And he that burneth her shall wash his clothes in water, and bathe his flesh in water, and shall be unclean until the even.

9 And a man that is clean shall gather up the ashes of the heifer, and lay them up without the camp in a clean place; and it shall be kept for the congregation of the children of Israel for a water of separation:<sup>3</sup> it is a purification for sin.<sup>4</sup>

10 And he that gathereth the ashes of the heifer shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even: and it shall be unto the children of Israel, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among them, for a statute for ever.

11 ¶ He that toucheth the dead body of any man<sup>5</sup> shall be unclean seven days.<sup>6</sup>

12 He shall purify himself with it on the third day, and on the seventh day he shall be clean: but if he purify not himself the third day, then the seventh day he shall not be clean.

13 Whosoever toucheth the dead body of any man that is dead, and purifieth not himself, defileth the tabernacle of the LORD; and that soul shall be cut off from Israel: because the water of separation was not sprinkled upon him, he shall be unclean; his uncleanness is yet upon him.

14 This is the law, when a man dieth in a tent; <sup>7</sup>All that come into the tent, and all that is in the tent, shall be unclean seven days:

15 And every open vessel, which hath no covering bound upon it, is unclean.

16 And whosoever toucheth one that is slain with a sword in the open fields, or a dead body, or a bone of a man, or a grave, shall be unclean seven days.

17 And for an unclean person they shall take of the ashes<sup>7</sup> of the burnt heifer of purification for sin, and running<sup>8</sup> water<sup>9</sup> shall be put thereto in a vessel;

18 And a clean person shall take hyssop, and dip it in the water, and sprinkle it upon the tent, and upon all the vessels, and upon the persons that were there, and upon him that touched a bone, or one slain, or one dead, or a grave:

19 And the clean person shall sprinkle upon the unclean on the third day, and on the seventh day; and on the seventh day he shall purify himself, and wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and shall be clean at even.

20 But the man that shall be unclean, and shall not purify himself, that soul shall be cut

2 The heifer was not brought to Aaron the high priest, but to Eleazar his son, for the high priest must not render himself unclean. Le. 21.10-12. In this distinction Aaron was the emblem of our High priest Jesus, while Eleazar represents those who, like Paul, acknowledging themselves to be 'chief of sinners,' 1 Ti. 1.15, yet having, like him, 'obtained mercy,' 1 Ti. 1.13, are commissioned to lead fellow-sinners to the 'blossom of sprinkling' and the 'washing of regeneration,' Tit. 3.5-C.

All the great sacrifices which were offered for sin, though they purified those for whom they were made, because themselves impure. The sins of those that offered them were laid upon them. In all this they were typical of him who was made sin for us, though he knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God by him.

4 So Joseph of Arimathea, who was clean or innocent of any part in the death of our Lord, Lu. 23.51, a 'good and a just man,' because he lived by faith in the Son of God, Ro. 1.17, took down the body of Jesus, wrapped it in linen, and laid it in the sepulchre.—C.

3 ch. 13.26; 32.8. De. 4.46; 23. Jos. 14.6, 7.

1 The diary or regular narrative of the acts and travels of the Israelites is here taken up again after an interval of thirty-eight years, and taken up on the same spot where it had been dropped. A continuous history is given from this time till they entered Canaan. This second visit to Kadesh appears to have been prolonged like the first. It was signalized also by some solemn incidents. The first was the death of Miriam. The next was a murmuring of the people because the supply of water failed. In the spring could not meet the wants of such a multitude, especially as the flocks and herds were now assembled at it. A second time God gave them water by a miracle.—P.

5 This incidental remark is important:—'We and our cattle.' It proves that the flocks and herds had survived the forty years' wandering, and had been collected at Kadesh, probably in prospect of an immediate entrance into Canaan.—P.

8 It is said in ver. 12 that Moses did not believe God fully in this instance. The nature of his sin, and the manner in which it was manifest, are not very clearly shown; but probably they may be indicated in the last clause of ver. 10. It is plain that Moses was in a state of great excitement. His customary meekness had deserted him. He spoke to the people in passionate language:—'Hear now, ye rebels.' The words which follow ought to be thus translated:—'Can we fetch you water out of the rock? Have I power to do this? There is want of faith here. Then he acted passionately, striking the rock twice, instead of merely speaking to it, as physical force would be required to bring the water.—P.

off from among the congregation, because he hath defiled the sanctuary of the LORD: the water of separation hath not been sprinkled upon him; he is unclean.

21 And it shall be a perpetual statute unto them, that he that sprinkleth the water of separation shall wash his clothes; and he that toucheth the water of separation shall be unclean until even.

CHAPTER XX.

1 The children of Israel come to Zin, where Miriam dieth. 2 They murmur for want of water. 7 Moses smiting the rock bringeth forth water. 12 God is displeased with Moses and Aaron at Meribah. 14 Moses at Kadesh desireth a passage through Edom, which is denied him. 22 At Mount Hor Aaron resigneth his place to Eleazar, and dieth.

THEN came the children of Israel, even the whole congregation, into the desert of Zin in the first month: and the people abode in Kadesh; and Miriam died there, and was buried there.<sup>1</sup>

2 ¶ And there was no water for the congregation: and they gathered themselves together against Moses and against Aaron.

3 And the people chode with Moses, and spake, saying, Would God that we had died when our brethren died before the LORD!

4 And why have ye brought up the congregation of the LORD into this wilderness, that we and our cattle<sup>2</sup> should die there?

5 And wherefore have ye made us to come up out of Egypt, to bring us in unto this evil place? it is no place of seed, or of figs, or of vines, or of pomegranates; neither is there any water to drink.

6 And Moses and Aaron went from the presence of the assembly unto the tabernacle of the congregation, and they fell upon their faces: and the glory of the LORD appeared unto them.

7 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

8 Take the rod, and gather thou the assembly together, thou, and Aaron thy brother, and speak ye unto the rock before their eyes; and it shall give forth his water, and thou shalt bring forth to them water out of the rock: so thou shalt give the congregation and their beasts drink.

9 And Moses took the rod from before the LORD, as he commanded him.

10 And Moses and Aaron gathered the congregation together before the rock; and he said unto them, Hear now, ye rebels; must we fetch you water out of this rock?<sup>3</sup>

tion thereof. It is death, it is despair, if I neglect it. Having fellowship with him in his resurrection, by justification and regeneration, I shall, in due time, enter on his eternal Sabbath, without spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing.

CHAPTER XX. [Ver. 1. This was in the first month of the fortieth year after the departure from Egypt, comp. ch. 33.38; ver. 28 of this chapter, and De. 1.3. The intermediate thirty-seven years Moses passes over in silence. The reason of this silence may be collected thus:—Moses wrote, not for curiosity, that he might satisfy it; nor for national vanity, that he might flatter it: but for God, that he might glorify him; and for man, that he might instruct him. Moses wrote, as the historian of providence and redemption; by the one to show how the world is governed, how sin is restrained, overruled, and punished; by the other, 11 And Moses <sup>m</sup>lifted up his hand, and with his rod he smote the rock twice: and the water<sup>a</sup> came out abundantly; and the congregation drank, and their beasts also.

12 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron, Because ye <sup>e</sup>believed me not, to sanctify me in the eyes of the children of Israel, therefore ye <sup>s</sup>shall not bring this congregation into the land which I have given them.

13 This<sup>a</sup> is the water of Meribah;<sup>4</sup> because the children of Israel strove with the LORD, and he was <sup>s</sup>anctified in them.

14 ¶ And Moses <sup>s</sup>ent messengers from Kadesh unto the king of Edom, Thus saith thy brother Israel, Thou knowest all the travel that hath befallen us;

15 How <sup>o</sup>ur fathers went down into Egypt, and we have dwelt in Egypt a long time; and the Egyptians vexed us, and our fathers:

16 And <sup>w</sup>hen we cried unto the LORD, he heard our voice, and sent an angel, and hath brought us forth out of Egypt; and, behold, we are in <sup>a</sup>Kadesh,<sup>5</sup> a city in the uttermost of thy border.

17 Let us pass, I pray thee, <sup>t</sup>hrough thy country: we will not pass through the fields, or through the vineyards, neither will we drink of the water of the wells; we will go by the king's high-way, we will not turn to the right hand nor to the left, until we have passed thy borders.

18 And Edom said unto him, Thou shalt not pass by me, lest I come out against thee with the sword.

19 And the children of Israel said unto him,

Kadesh presents one of the greatest geographical difficulties in the whole Mosaic Itinerary. Maps and commentators generally agree that Kadesh-barnea and Kadesh are two distinct and distant places. Kadesh-barnea they place on the frontier of Palestine, about midway between the southern extremity of the Dead Sea and the Mediterranean; and Kadesh, where Miriam died, in the mountains of Edom, about midway between Ezion-geber on the Red and Zoar on the Dead Sea. This point of geography, it must be observed, is altogether conjectural, there being no certain landmarks nor continuous historical records, as in other instances, by which the locality can be determined. A high probability, however, is derived from ch. 33. 36, where it is said, 'They removed from Ezion-geber (which is in the Elanitic Gulf of the Red Sea) and pitched in the wilderness of Zin, which is Kadesh,' and 'removed from Kadesh and pitched in Mount Hor.' Now this Kadesh is evidently in the direct or most convenient road to Mount Hor, but the Kadesh-barnea of the ordinary scriptural maps lies far to the north-west. Again, we find the Israelites, when the spies returned from Canaan, encamped in Kadesh, ch. 13. 26, and from De. 1. 29, 20-24 we find this Kadesh identified with Kadesh-barnea. Upon the whole, therefore, we are induced to conclude that Kadesh-barnea and Kadesh are two names, not for one spot or town, but for one extensive district, and that, according to Eusebius, it was in the neighbourhood of Mount Hor, near Petra, and where the tomb of Miriam was still pointed out in his time.—C.

Edom had a conventional right to refuse the passage. The conventional right was founded on will, and power—the moral right on kindness and mercy—the one was of man, the other of God, and therefore should have predominated. But even a moral right is not always to be enforced: so Israel turned aside, but neither from fear nor weakness, but at the commandment of God, De. 2. 4, 5, and in the exercise of that charity that 'seeketh not her own,' but 'suffereth long, and is kind,' 1 Co. 13. 4, 5.—C.

*We will go by the high-way; and if I and my cattle drink of thy water, then I will pay for it: I will only (without doing any thing else) go through on my feet.

20 And he said, Thou shalt not go through. *And Edom came out against him with much people, and with a strong hand.

21 Thus Edom refused to give Israel passage through his border: wherefore Israel <sup>t</sup>urned away from him.<sup>6</sup>

22 ¶ And the children of Israel, even the whole congregation, journeyed from Kadesh, and came unto mount Hor.

23 And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron in mount Hor, by the coast of the land of Edom, saying, 24 Aaron shall be gathered unto his people: for he shall not enter into the land which I have given unto the children of Israel, because ye rebelled against my word at the water of Meribah.

25 Take Aaron and Eleazar his son, and bring them up unto mount Hor:

26 And strip Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son: and Aaron shall be gathered unto his people, and shall die there.

27 And Moses did as the LORD commanded: and they went up into mount Hor in the sight of all the congregation.

28 And Moses stripped Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son; and Aaron died there in the top of the mount: and Moses and Eleazar came down from the mount.

29 And when all the congregation saw that how mercy is exhibited, sin pardoned, and holiness established. C.]

Ver. 12. [The sin of Moses and Aaron is recorded, but not particularized, unless in so far as it may be inferred from the narrative. Amongst the internal evidences of the divine mission of Moses, we must rank the unparalleled candour with which he records his sin and his punishment. No hypocrite, imposing upon others—no enthusiast, imposing upon himself—has ever recorded or admitted his own errors. The deceiving hypocrite cannot afford to let in the light. The self-deceived enthusiast has not discovered his own darkness. The sin of Moses seems to have consisted, (1) In angrily and provokingly calling the people 'rebels.' (2) In going beyond the divine command, ver. 8, merely to 'speak unto the rock,' and smiting it twice, either in anger or unbelief, or both. (3) In strange and unaccountable unbelief in the promise of God, of which he had had so many trials. (4) In the expression, 'must we fetch water?' he seems to attribute the miracle to himself and Aaron, rather than to God. Lord! what is man! Moses thy servant, meekest of men, is chafed into unseasonable anger, and he that talked with thee face to face has fallen under thy deserved displeasure! 'Let us fear therefore, lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of us should seem to come short of it,' He. 4. 1. C.]

Ver. 16. [Kadesh, the 'holy' place or city, was originally called En-Mishpat, 'the fountain of judgment.' It is described as being in the 'Wilderness of Paran,' and also in the 'Wilderness of Zin.' Paran was the general name of a large region; Zin the specific name of a section of it. There is no trustworthy evidence to show that Kadesh and Kadesh-barnea were different. They were different names for the same place. The site of Kadesh is now marked by the fountain of Weibeh, at the foot of the hills on the eastern side of the great valley of Arabah, opposite the highest peaks of Edom. P.]

Ver. 21. [The Israelites were prevented for some reason from entering Canaan from the south, and were therefore compelled to pass along the eastern side of the Dead Sea, and cross the Jordan. The territory of the Edomites lay between the camp at Kadesh and the east bank of the Jordan. If not permitted to pass through Edom, a long, dreary, and dangerous journey must be undertaken through the desert of Arabia. Hence the message to the King of Edom, and the fair and urgent request for permission to pass through his land. When refused they were obliged to turn due south so as to sweep round the southern border of Edom. P.]

Ver. 23. [Mount Hor was within Edom. The camp of the Israelites was stationed doubtless in the great valley, at the western base of the range of which Hor is one of the peaks. The traditional tomb of Aaron still exists on the rocky summit of Mount Hor. It is a rock-hewn cave, surmounted by a small domed building. On the west it looks down into the Arabah where the encampment lay; on the east it looks into the wild and strange ravine and ruins of Petra. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Much of our time is spent as a tale that is told, passed away in God's wrath, without anything worth remarking. And death at length makes quick and repeated inroads in families which have been long forborne. Miriam, Aaron, and Moses now die all in one year. And as it was with them, so God often writes indignation upon the death of his own people, who are saved in the Lord their God: for in the chastisement of his choicest saints he is severely strict, as, indeed, their sins dishonour him in a distinguished manner. Children readily imitate their parents in their wickedness. Bad customs and tempers cleave close to men, and show themselves whenever an occasión presents itself: and those are often ready to wish for death who are very unfit for it. Men's principal friends are often treated the worst; but the mercy and power of God are exerted for the relief of sinful rebels against him. Yet, alas! how prone are the best of men to unbelief under long or repeated trials, and to passion under great provocations! and often reproaches, just in their matter, may be very sinful in their manner. How lasting are quarrels between families and nations! and how inveterate the hatred of Edomites of the world against the church and people of God! little of earthly comforts can we hope for in our way to the Canaan above! but when believers look most beautiful on the borders of the grave, and when faith disarms death of all its terrors—when they depart deliberately and cheerfully into the joy of our Lord—how comely and how comfortable! And it is a peculiar joy to dying ministers to see the cause of God transmitted into the hands of zealous and faithful successors. But let me not bid adieu to Aaron, the saint of God, till I behold in him, as in a figure, Jesus, the great High-priest of my profession! Seasonable and divinely solemn was his call to his work! with an unmeasurable unction of the Holy Ghost, and perfect purity of nature, was he prepared for it. By his miracles; his destruction of his Jewish and Gentile opposers; by the marvellous influence of the gospel rod of his strength, is his office confirmed and ratified of God! He delivers all believers from spiritual slavery; justifies and sanctifies them; leads them up through this wilderness world; and he can well speak to their respective cases and doubts. He is our sole High-priest, and the spiritual Father of all such as are made priests unto God: and with amazing holiness, courage, labour, patience, and pity he executes his work. At the expense of his life he averted the plague of infinite justice from his unreasonable abusers: and having finished his work of Aaron was dead, they mourned for Aaron thirty days, even all the house of Israel.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Israel with some loss destroy the Canaanites at Hormah. 4 The people murmuring are plagued with fiery serpents. 7 They repenting are healed by a brazen serpent. 10 Sundry journeys of the Israelites. 21 Sihon is overcome, 33 and Og.

AND when <sup>a</sup>king Arad<sup>2</sup> the Canaanite, which dwelt in the south, heard tell that Israel came by the <sup>b</sup>way of the spies, then he fought against Israel, and took <sup>c</sup>some of them prisoners.

2 And Israel <sup>d</sup>vowed a vow unto the LORD, and said, If thou wilt indeed deliver this people into my hand, then I <sup>e</sup>will utterly destroy their cities.

3 And <sup>f</sup>the LORD hearkened to the voice of Israel, and delivered up the Canaanites; and they utterly destroyed them and their cities:<sup>3</sup> and he called the name of the place <sup>g</sup>Hormah.

4 ¶ And they journeyed from mount Hor, by the way of the Red sea,<sup>4</sup> to <sup>h</sup>compass the land of Edom: and the soul of the people was much discouraged<sup>5</sup> because of the way.

5 And the people <sup>i</sup>spake against God, and against Moses, Wherefore have ye brought us up out of Egypt to die in the wilderness? for there is no bread, neither is there any water; and our soul loatheth this light bread.

6 And <sup>k</sup>the LORD sent fiery serpents<sup>6</sup> among the people, and they bit the people; and much people of Israel died.

7 ¶ Therefore the people came to Moses, and said, We have sinned; for we have spoken against the LORD, and against thee: pray unto the LORD, that he take away the serpents from us. And Moses prayed for the people.

8 And the LORD said unto Moses, <sup>m</sup>Make thee a fiery serpent, and set it upon a pole: and it shall come to pass, that every one that is bitten, when he looketh upon it, shall live.

9 And <sup>n</sup>Moses made a serpent of brass, and put it upon a pole; and it came to pass, that if

10 ¶ And<sup>b</sup> the children of Israel set forward, and pitched in Oboth.

11 And they journeyed from Oboth, and pitched at Ije-abarim,<sup>7</sup> in the wilderness which is before Moab, toward the sun-rising.

12 ¶ From thence they removed, and pitched in the <sup>c</sup>valley of Zared.<sup>8</sup>

13 From thence they removed, and pitched on the other side of Arnon, which is in the wilderness that cometh out of the coasts of the Amorites: for <sup>d</sup>Arnon is the border of Moab, between Moab and the Amorites.

14 Wherefore it is said in the book<sup>9</sup> of the wars of the LORD, What he did in the Red sea,<sup>1</sup> and in the brooks of Arnon, obedience, he publicly and willingly, upon Mount Calvary, resigned himself unto death, leaving his robes of finished righteousness to all who believe.

CHAPTER XXI. [Ver. 1. The word translated 'spies' is in the Syriac and other ancient versions rendered 'places.' The Septuagint and other authorities consider it a proper name, and render it 'the way of Atharim.' There seems, however, no good reason for departing from our English version. For if, contrary to the ordinary opinion of geographers, it be incorrect—an opinion, be it observed, of no more than conjectural authority—and if Kadesh and Kadesh-barnea be but two names for one place, see note ch. xx., then Israel, now at Kadesh, would naturally enter Canaan 'by the way of the spies.' C.—When the people were encamped at Kadesh it would seem that the warlike inhabitants of the Negeb and southern Canaan had established an army of observation in the mountains near them, prepared to defend the passes, and to make an attack on any favourable opportunity. The opportunity offered when the Israelites turned southward. Then the enemy attacked them in the rear, and took some prisoners. But they paid dearly for a temporary advantage. P.]

Ver. 5. [The line of march from Mount Hor was down the great valley to Ezion-gaber at the northern end of the Gulf of Akabah; then eastward across the mountain ridge to the plateau of Arabia. Here they encountered their greatest difficulties. The plateau is destitute of verdure and water. It is a dreary undulating expanse, covered with flints and debris of limestone, exposed to the parching heat of an unclouded sun. The Israelites traversed it at the very worst season, about the end of August. P.]

Ver. 9. [It signifies such a pole as was the banner-staff of the tribes, to which they were accustomed to look in decamping and marching.—He lived. The sending of the serpents was an acknowledged judgment, the cure an evident miracle. There seems no good reason for denying the serpent to be a type of Christ, Jn. 3. 14, on the alleged ground of its being a name of Satan. Christ was made sin and a curse for us, 2 Co. 5. 21; Ga. 3. 13, and appeared, not a sinner, yet in the very 'likeness of sinful flesh,' Ro. 8. 3. The sight of this serpent healed—so, says our Lord, 'Look unto me, and be ye saved,' Is. 45. 22; He. 12. 2. C.]

Ver. 10. [It ought to be observed that only a very few of the stations are here mentioned. A pretty full list is given in Nu. xxxiii. On reaching Oboth the worst of the journey was passed: they were on the borders of the rich pasture-land of Moab, east of the Dead Sea. P.]

Ver. 14. [Book or narrative. There is no necessity for translating it book, and then conjecturing whether the passage be a quotation from a Moabitish poem, or Mosaic book of directions to Joshua, and now lost.—Wars of the Lord, that is, wars directed by his providence and word, for punishment of wicked nations.—Red Sea, or as some think 'at Suph,' which they suppose the name of a place in the neighbourhood. Does it not more likely mean the Red Sea as in the text, and particularize it as the place where the wars of the Lord began, and closing with Pisgah, from which Moses viewed the full extent of the promised land? C.]

Ver. 16, 18. [The they went is supplied by the translators. The correctness of the insertion is questionable, as the passage seems rather to commemorate the progress of the wars of the Lord than the journeys of Israel. The words, 'by direction of the lawgiver, with their staves,' are rendered by some high authorities, 'by a decree upon their borders.' The authorized version is, however, admitted to be literal; and the mention of staves perfectly intelligible, as intimating the providential ease with which the work of digging was accomplished, and abundance of water obtained. C.—Ver. 18. This spirited ode was sung by the people, and appears to have been inspired by some signal act of divine power and mercy on the banks of the Arnon.

MOSQUE OF OMAR AND JEWISH QUARTER—WHERE CHRIST DROVE THE MONEY CHANGERS FROM THE TEMPLE. [Numbers, xxi:8.] —“And the Lord said unto Moses, make thee a fiery serpent, and set it upon a pole: and it shall come to pass, that everyone that is bitten, when he looketh upon it, shall live.” The Mosque of Omar now stands upon the site of the ancient Temple. The Temple summed up in itself all the meaning of the tabernacle.

Jesus Christ, who taught in the Temple and drove the money-changers from the Temple, and claimed it as His Father's house, summed up in Himself all the meaning of the tabernacle and the Temple, and was the full living expression of the entire process of type and rite and shadow and sacrifice which preceded Him as so many means of training, and object lessons in the history of the Jewish race.

23 And<sup>a</sup> Sihon would not suffer Israel to pass through his border; but Sihon gathered all his people together, and went out against Israel into the wilderness: and he came to Jahaz, and fought against Israel.

24 And<sup>a</sup> Israel smote him with the edge of the sword, and possessed his land from Arnon unto Jabbok, even unto the children of Ammon: for the border of the children of Ammon was strong.

25 And Israel took all these cities: and Israel dwelt in all the cities of the Amorites, in Heshbon, and in all the villages<sup>b</sup> thereof.

26 For Heshbon was the city of Sihon the king of the Amorites, who had fought against the former king of Moab, and taken all his land out of his hand, even unto Arnon.<sup>9</sup>

27 Wherefore they that speak in<sup>1</sup> proverbs<sup>2</sup> say, Come into Heshbon, let the city of Sihon be built and prepared:

28 For there is a<sup>3</sup> fire gone out of Heshbon, a flame from the city of Sihon: it hath consumed Ar of Moab, and the lords of the high places of Arnon.

29 Woe to thee, Moab! thou art undone, O people of<sup>4</sup> Chemosh!<sup>3</sup> he hath given his sons that escaped, and his daughters, into captivity unto Sihon king of the Amorites.

30 We have shot<sup>4</sup> at them; Heshbon is perished even unto Dibon, and we have laid them waste even unto Nophah, which reacheth unto Medeba.

31 ¶ Thus Israel<sup>5</sup> dwelt in the land of the Amorites.

32 And Moses sent to spy out<sup>6</sup> Jaazer, and they took the villages thereof, and drove out the Amorites that were there.

33 ¶ And<sup>m</sup> they turned and went up by the way of Bashan: and Og the king of Bashan went out against them, he and all his people, to the battle at Edrei.<sup>5</sup>

That section of it lying along the base of the mountains at the north-east angle of the Dead Sea was called Arboth-Moab. It was due east of Jericho, and was separated from the plain of Jericho by the river Jordan. It is a low plain, partially covered with a white nitrous crust, intersected by deep gulches and water-courses, and studded with shrubberies of tamarisk, acacia, and myrtle. The beauty and fertility of this great plain, with the rapid river running through it, must have reminded the Israelites of Egypt.—P.

1 Literally, Arboth-Moab, the white dry places of Moab. Arabah was the name given to the deep valley through which the Jordan flows. That section of it lying along the base of the mountains at the north-east angle of the Dead Sea was called Arboth-Moab. It was due east of Jericho, and was separated from the plain of Jericho by the river Jordan. It is a low plain, partially covered with a white nitrous crust, intersected by deep gulches and water-courses, and studded with shrubberies of tamarisk, acacia, and myrtle. The beauty and fertility of this great plain, with the rapid river running through it, must have reminded the Israelites of Egypt.—P.

2 Moabites on the east side of Jordan, and therefore 'this side,' in his narrative, means 'this side'—C.

3 Some manuscripts read 'children of Emmah,' but as Balaam came from beyond the Euphrates, ch. 23. 7, and as the children of Ammon do not appear to have ever emigrated to Mesopotamia, we prefer the Authorized Version, and consider it as recording not merely the priestly office, but the judiciary dignity of Balaam as a prince of his own people, a circumstance which renders his covetousness and acceptance of a bribe the more shameful, as poverty had no part in undermining his principles.

hand, and all his people, and his land; and thou shalt do to him as thou didst unto Sihon king of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heshbon.

35 So they smote him, and his sons, and all his people, until there was none left him alive: and they possessed his land.

CHAPTER XXII.

2 Balak's first message for Balaam is refused. 15 His second message obtaineth him. 22 An angel would have slain him, if his ass had not saved him. 36 Balak entertaineth him.

AND the children of Israel set forward, and pitched in the plains of Moab,<sup>1</sup> on this side Jordan<sup>2</sup> by Jericho.

2 ¶ And Balak the son of Zippor saw<sup>3</sup> all that Israel had done to the Amorites.

3 And Moab was sore afraid of the people, because they were many; and Moab was distressed because of the children of Israel.

4 And Moab said unto the elders of Midian, Now shall this company lick up all that are round about us, as the ox licketh up the grass of the field. And Balak the son of Zippor was king of the Moabites at that time.

5 He sent messengers therefore unto Balaam the son of Beor, to Pethor, which is by the river of the land of the children of his people, to call him, saying, Behold, there is a people come out from Egypt: behold, they cover the face<sup>4</sup> of the earth, and they abide over against me.

6 Come now therefore, I pray thee, curse me this people; for they are too mighty for me: peradventure I shall prevail, that we may smite them, and that I may drive them out of the land: for I wot that he whom thou blessest is blessed, and he whom thou cursest is cursed.<sup>5</sup>

7 And the elders of Moab, and the elders of Midian, departed with the rewards of divination in their hand; and they came unto Balaam, and spake unto him the words of Balak.

8 And he said unto them, Lodge here this night, and I will bring you word again, as the LORD shall speak unto me. And the princes of Moab abode with Balaam.

Perhaps it was the discovery of a copious spring by which the thirst of the fainting multitudes was assuaged. The Hebrew words may be thus rendered:—

'Spring up, O well! Sing ye unto it!
The well, the princes digged it.
The nobles of the people excavated it;
With the sceptre—with their staves.' P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Continued courage and dependence upon God are highly necessary, that at last we may prove more than conquerors. Religious vows, when properly conducted, are likewise sometimes profitable. But upon what inconsiderable temptations, prevailing lusts, formerly punished, again break forth! Often the long continuance of God's mercies with men render them cheap in their eyes. But let us remember it is hazardous to offend God, who hath so many instruments of justice at his beck; and that sufferings for sin should lead us to repentance for it; especially since God is so ready to forgive the penitent, and to turn away his wrath. But, oh unspeakable mercy! as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, so Jesus Christ, the Son of man, was lifted up on the cross, and is now lifted up in the gospel, for the cure of all those deadly maladies contracted from the seduction of the old serpent the devil—when we look to him by faith!

In all our wanderings on earth God can grant us wells of comfort, and fill our mouths with his praise: he can bestow noted victories in favour of his people, even on this side death. And what easy work it is to conquer the strongest enemies when God's time is come, and he helps us by his grace! Yet in these victories let me observe, that they who intend mischief to others, often fall into the pit which themselves have digged; that worldly possessions are changeable and frail; and especially that ill-gotten gain is seldom long enjoyed.

CHAPTER XXII. [Ver. 4. Midian, in which Jethro the father-in-law of Moses was priest, was situated near Horeb. How then do the Moabites, who lay at a great distance to the north, enter into consultation with the Midianitish elders? Some think there were two Midians, and it may have been so. But as Moses gives no note of distinction, this opinion does not seem probable. Those who reflect in how many parts of the world the British people are settled, will easily comprehend how the Midianites may have had possessions both at Horeb and in Moab. Nor are we to be surprised at the special consultation with the Midianites. The history of Jethro sufficiently testifies his political sagacity, Ex. 18. 10–12, 14, 29, and it is by no means improbable that his kindred in Moab may have been distinguished by similar qualities. C.— See note on Ex. 2. 15. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Relations by blood are sometimes the bitterest enemies to one another, and seek to ruin those who might expect kindness from them. The most awful things in religion, imprecations of divine wrath not excepted, are often transformed into ordinances of the devil: and sinners, with great expense and toil, court the assistance of hell, when they might have freely from heaven whatever they need. Yea, great men, who scorn to worship their Maker, frequently cringe as slaves to the very slaves of the devil! What inestimable value do carnal men put upon earthly riches and honours, as if these were sufficient to determine to anything! And there is great need to realize eternal things, that nothing temporal may be able to decoy us. But religion is sometimes put on as a cloak by those who have no real regard to it. And the most presumptuous claims to God, and pretence of high regard to his will, are used when they would gladly counteract it. Wicked messengers indeed rarely report the whole of the truth as it really is: and the Lord often apparently indulges dissemblers in their 9 And <sup>1</sup>God came unto Balaam,<sup>6</sup> and said, What men are these with thee?

10 And Balaam said unto God, <sup>m</sup>Balak the son of Zippor, king of Moab, hath sent unto me, saying, 11 Behold, there is a people come out of Egypt, which covereth the face of the earth: come now, curse me them; peradventure I shall be able to overcome them,<sup>7</sup> and drive them out.

12 And God said unto Balaam, *Thou shalt not go with them; thou shalt not curse the people: for they are blessed.

13 And Balaam rose up in the morning, and said unto the princes of Balak, Get you into your land: for the LORD refuseth to give me leave to go with you.

14 And the princes of Moab rose up, and they went unto Balak, and said, Balaam refuseth to come with us.<sup>8</sup>

15 ¶ And Balak sent yet again princes, more, and more honourable than they.

16 And they came to Balaam, and said to him, Thus saith Balak the son of Zippor, Let nothing, I pray thee, hinder thee from<sup>9</sup> coming unto me, 17 For †I will promote thee unto very great honour, and I will do whatsoever thou sayest unto me: come therefore, I pray thee, curse me this people.

18 And Balaam answered and said unto the servants of Balak, †If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the word of the LORD my God, to do less or more.

19 Now therefore, I pray you, †tarry ye also here this night, that I may know what the LORD will say unto me more.

20 And God came unto Balaam at night, and said unto him, †If the men come to call thee, rise up, and go with them;<sup>1</sup> but *yet the word which I shall say unto thee, that shalt thou do.

21 And Balaam †rose up in the morning, and saddled his ass, and went with the princes of Moab.

22 ¶ And God's anger was kindled *because he went;<sup>2</sup> and the *angel of the LORD stood in the way for an adversary against him. (Now he was riding upon his ass, and his two servants were with him.)

23 And †the ass saw the angel of the LORD standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand: and the ass turned aside out of the way, and went into the field; and Balaam smote the ass, to turn her into the way.

6 That Balaam was by profession a believer in, and by office a priest of, Jehovah, there can be no reasonable doubt. And that God should honour such a man with a vision and a commission need not appear strange, when it is considered that Balaam bears a testimony to Moab that a better man could not have borne, because he would not have been induced to accompany the messengers for love of reward, Jude 11.—C.

1 God had said to Balaam, ver. 12.

Thou shalt not go with them; now he says, 'Go with them; is he not therefore changeable in his purposes, and even contradictory in his prohibitions and permissions?' No; God prohibits him from going with the messenger, and the anxiety of Balaam, Moab, and Midian is excited, and their attention doubly drawn to the coming of Balaam. God permits or orders Balaam to go with the second messengers, who were 'more honourable,' ver. 15, than the first, not out of respect to their rank, but out of regard to his own prophecy of employing Balaam's warning—a warning which their confidence in Balaam should have induced the Moabites to observe.—C.

2 God had directed Balaam to go; why then is his anger kindled because he went? Is not this capriciousness? No; God had said, ver. 20, 'If the men come to call thee, rise up, and go.' But Balaam, listening, not to God, but to a covetous heart, 2 Pe. 2:15, seizes the permission to go, but disregards the condition of the call, rises in the morning, saddles his ass, and accompanies the princes in his covetous desire to go with them for gain.—C.

9 The character of Balaam, however strange and contradictory, may appear when specially considered, is nevertheless one of the most common—a man determined to obey God in one department, easily tempted, and strongly inclined to disobey him in another—a man eagerly desiring the comfort of being religious, yet eagerly seeking the profit of unrighteousness—a man wishing to be honest, yet 'hasting to be rich,' and therefore 'not innocent,' Pr. 28:30—a man labouring to lay hold upon heaven with the one hand, yet grasping the earth with the other—a man vainly endeavouring to reconcile impossibilities by 'serving two masters' at the same time, Mat. 6:24, and faithfully in the end forsaken by the one, and righteously condemned by the other, Pr. 23:5; Ps. 52:5, 7.—C.

25 And when the ass saw the angel of the LORD, she thrust herself unto the wall, and *crushed Balaam's foot against the wall; and he smote her again.

26 And the angel of the LORD went further, and stood in a narrow place, <sup>b</sup>where was no way to turn either to the right hand or to the left.

27 And when the ass saw the angel of the LORD, she fell down under Balaam: and *Balaam's anger was kindled, and he smote the ass with a staff.

28 And the LORD <sup>a</sup>opened the mouth of the ass; and she said unto Balaam, What have I done unto thee, that thou hast smitten me these three times?

29 And Balaam said unto the ass, Because thou hast mocked me: I *would there were a sword in mine hand, for now would I kill thee.

30 And the ass said unto Balaam, Am not I thine ass, upon which thou hast ridden<sup>4</sup> ever since<sup>5</sup> I was thine unto this day? was I ever wont to do so unto thee? And he said, <sup>6</sup>Nay.

31 Then the LORD opened the eyes of Balaam, and he †saw the angel of the LORD standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand: and he bowed down his head, and †fell flat on his face.

32 And the angel of the LORD said unto him, <sup>a</sup>Wherefore hast thou smitten thine ass these three times? behold, I went out to withstand thee,<sup>7</sup> because thy way is *perverse before me:

33 And the ass saw me, and turned from me these three times: unless she had turned from me, surely now also I †had slain thee, and saved her alive.

34 And Balaam said unto the angel of the LORD, I †have sinned; for I knew not that thou stoodest in the way against me: now therefore, if it displease thee,<sup>8</sup> I will get me back again.<sup>9</sup>

35 And the angel of the LORD said unto Balaam, <sup>m</sup>Go with the men: but only the word that I shall speak unto thee, that thou shalt speak. So Balaam went with the princes of Balak.

36 ¶ And when Balak heard that Balaam was come, he *went out to meet him unto a city of Moab, which is in the border of *Arnon, which is in the utmost coast.

37 And Balak said unto Balaam, Did I not earnestly send unto thee to call thee? wherefore camest thou not unto me? am †I not able indeed to promote thee to honour?

38 And Balaam said unto Balak, Lo, I am come unto thee: have †I now any power at all own way, and permits them to follow the course which he had once prohibited: and how fond are they with eagerness to follow his permission, and even go beyond it! The brute creation are often endangered, and suffer for man's sin; even by the wickedness of those to whom they have been assistant. But vain is every attempt to destroy the church, while her God can so easily check it. In the most unexpected form he can rebuke such as think to oppose him, however hearty to say any thing? the word that God putteth in my mouth, that shall I speak.

39 And Balaam went with Balak, and they came unto Kirjath-huzoth.<sup>1</sup>

40 And Balak offered oxen and sheep, and sent to Balaam,<sup>2</sup> and to the princes that were with him.

41 And it came to pass on the morrow, that Balak took Balaam, and brought him up into the high places of Baal, that thence he might see the utmost part of the people.

4 And God met Balaam: and he said unto him, I have prepared seven altars, and I have offered upon every altar a bullock and a ram.

5 And the LORD put a word in Balaam's mouth, and said, Return unto Balak, and thus thou shalt speak.

6 And he returned unto him, and, lo, he stood by his burnt-sacrifice, he and all the princes of Moab.

7 And he took up his parable, and said, Balak the king of Moab hath brought me from<sup>2</sup> Aram, out of the mountains of the east, saying, Come, curse me Jacob; and come, defy<sup>3</sup> Israel.

8 How shall I curse, whom God hath not cursed? or how shall I defy, whom the LORD hath not defied?

under divine inspiration. He saw that God was blessing and after the flesh; and he saw that with higher and richer blessings he would bless the spiritual Israel. Hence he says, Let my soul die the death of the righteous, i.e. the spiritual Israel, and let my last end be like his, i.e. the spiritual Israelite. — P.

26 But Balaam answered and said unto Balak, 'Told not I thee, saying, All that the LORD speaketh, that I must do?

27 And Balak said unto Balaam, Come, I pray thee, I will bring thee unto another place; peradventure it will please God that thou mayest curse me them from thence.

28 And Balak brought Balaam unto the top of 'Peor, that looketh toward 'Jeshimon.<sup>3</sup>

29 And <sup>m</sup>Balaam said unto Balak, Build me here seven altars, and prepare me here seven bullocks and seven rams.

30 And Balak <sup>n</sup>did as Balaam had said, and offered a bullock and a ram on every altar.

CHAPTER XXIV.

AND when Balaam saw that it pleased the LORD to bless Israel, he went not, as at other<sup>a</sup> times, <sup>b</sup>to seek for enchantments, but he set his face toward the wilderness.

2 And Balaam lifted up his eyes, and he saw Israel <sup>a</sup>abiding in his tents according to their tribes; and the <sup>a</sup>Spirit of God came upon him.<sup>1</sup>

3 And<sup>c</sup> he took up his parable, and said, Balaam the son of Beor hath said, and the man whose eyes are open<sup>2</sup> hath said;<sup>3</sup>

4 He hath said, which heard the words of God, which <sup>f</sup>saw the vision of the Almighty, falling<sup>4</sup> into a trance, but having his eyes open;

5 How <sup>g</sup>goodly are thy tents, O Jacob! and thy tabernacles, O Israel!

6 As the <sup>h</sup>valleys are they spread forth, as gardens<sup>i</sup> by the river's side, as the <sup>i</sup>trees of lign-aloes, which the LORD hath planted, and as cedar-trees beside the waters.

7 He shall <sup>j</sup>pour the water out of his buckets, and his seed shall be in many waters; and his king<sup>m</sup> shall be higher than Agag, and his kingdom shall be exalted.

8 God<sup>n</sup> brought him forth out of Egypt; he hath as it were the strength of an unicorn: he shall eat up the nations his enemies, and shall break their bones, and pierce them through with his arrows.

9 He<sup>c</sup> couched, he lay down as a lion, and as a great lion; who shall stir him up? <sup>p</sup>Blessed is he that blesseth thee, and cursed is he that curseth thee.

10 ¶ And Balak's anger was kindled against Balaam, and he smote his hands together: and Balak said unto Balaam, I called thee to curse mine enemies, and, behold, thou hast altogether blessed them these three times.

11 Therefore now flee thou to thy place: I thought to promote thee unto great honour; but, lo, the LORD hath <sup>q</sup>kept thee back from honour.

12 And Balaam said unto Balak, <sup>r</sup>Spake I not also to thy messengers which thou sentest unto me, saying, 13 If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the commandment of the LORD, to do either good or bad of mine own mind; but what the LORD saith, that will I speak?

14 And now, behold, I go unto my <sup>s</sup>people: come therefore, and I will <sup>a</sup>advertise thee what this people shall do to thy people in the <sup>t</sup>latter days.

15 ¶ And he <sup>u</sup>took up his parable, and said, Balaam the son of Beor hath said, and the man whose eyes are open hath said;

16 He hath said, which <sup>v</sup>heard the words of God, and knew the knowledge of the most High, which saw the vision of the Almighty, falling into a trance, but having his eyes open.<sup>6</sup>

17 I shall see <sup>w</sup>him, but not now; I shall behold him, but not nigh:<sup>7</sup> there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel, and shall smite the corners of <sup>x</sup>Moab, and destroy<sup>9</sup> all the children of Sheth.<sup>1</sup>

18 And <sup>y</sup>Edom shall be a possession, Seir also shall be a possession for his enemies; and Israel shall do valiantly.

19 Out of Jacob shall come <sup>z</sup>he that shall have dominion, and shall destroy him that remaineth of the city.

20 And when he looked on Amalek, he took up his parable, and said, Amalek was <sup>aa</sup>the first of the nations, but his <sup>t</sup>latter end shall be that he perish for ever.<sup>2</sup>

21 And he looked on the Kenites,<sup>3</sup> and took up his parable, and said, <sup>ab</sup>Strong is thy dwelling-place, and thou puttest thy nest in a rock:

22 Nevertheless the Kenite<sup>4</sup> shall be wasted, until Asshur shall carry thee away captive.<sup>5</sup>

23 And he took up his parable, and said, Alas! who shall live when God doeth this?

24 And <sup>ac</sup>ships shall come from the coast of Chittim,<sup>6</sup> and shall afflict Asshur, and shall afflict Eber, and he also shall perish for ever.

running from one refuge of lies to another! And it is always necessary for the saints to watch and pray, since, unknown to them, their enemies may be adding one attempt after another to destroy them.

CHAPTER XXIV. Ver. 1. He would not again, in his magical and superstitious manner, consult God, but resolved to curse them without asking God's leave. —[Superstitious confidence in the repetition of a few words was common amongst the heathen, and constituted the principal part of their prayers, Mat. 6. 7.]

The Jews, in times of their ignorance, entertained, and many of them do still entertain, a similar belief; hence they have as ignorantly, as superstitiously and falsely, accused our Lord of stealing the Tetragrammaton, or mysterious name of JEHOVAH, out of the temple, and working his miracles by its repetition. Many have seen, even in professing Christian countries, a few words from the New Testament, or from some vain tradition, written on parchment or paper, and hung around the neck or on the shoulders for the cure of diseases. Such superstitious belief seems to have influenced Balaam, until, having now made three experiments by sacrifice, he is compelled to give up the vain attempt at enchantment. C.]

Ver. 3, 4. Balaam, whose power to curse was so much relied on, whose will was so much inclined to it, and whose knowledge and manifestations of God are so remarkable, must and will confirm it, that Israel shall be blessed.

Ver. 6-8. These predictions not only respect the glorious state of the Jews under Joshua, David, Solomon, Asa, Jehoshaphat, &c.; but also represent the

SARCOPHAGUS DRINKING TROUGH NEAR NAZARETH—NEAR WHERE CHRIST WAS BROUGHT UP. [NUMBERS, xxiv: 17.]—Balaam's Prophecy of Christ: "I shall see him, but not now: I shall behold him, but not nigh: there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel." Just a little way from Nazareth as you pass toward Cana of Galilee, you reach a little village where there is a fountain, and an ancient sarcophagus. These sarcophagi, found in many places in Palestine, are said to date from the time of the Romans. This picture is given here because it illustrates a scene in the neighborhood of Nazareth, often passed over by Christ when he was a boy. It illustrates the prophecy by Balaam which refers to Christ. This is a characteristic scene. We have the thorny cactus, the olive trees, the donkey and the little Arab boy.

25 And Balaam rose up, and went and returned to his place: and Balak also went his way.

CHAPTER XXV.

1 Israel at Shittim commit whoredom and idolatry. 6 Phinehas killeth Zimri and Cozbi. 10 God therefore giveth him an everlasting priesthood. 16 The Midianites are to be vexed.

AND Israel abode in "Shittim," and the people began to commit whoredom with the daughters of Moab.<sup>2</sup>

2 And they called the people unto the sacrifices of their gods:<sup>3</sup> and the people did eat, and bowed down to their gods.

3 And Israel joined himself unto Baal-peor:<sup>4</sup> and the anger of the LORD was kindled against Israel.

4 And the LORD said unto Moses, "Take all the heads of the people," and hang them up before the LORD against the sun, that the fierce anger of the LORD may be turned away from Israel.

5 And Moses said unto the judges of Israel, Slay ye every one his men that were joined unto Baal-peor.

6 ¶ And, behold, one of the children of Israel came and brought unto his brethren a Midianitish woman, in the sight of Moses, and in the sight of all the congregation of the children of Israel, who were weeping before the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

the son of Aaron the priest, saw it, he rose up from among the congregation, and took a javelin in his hand;

8 And he went after the man of Israel into the tent, and thrust both of them through, the man of Israel, and the woman through her belly. So the plague was stayed from the children of Israel.

9 And those that died in the plague were twenty and four thousand.

10 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

11 Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, hath turned my wrath away from the children of Israel, (while he was zealous for my sake among them,) that I consumed not the children of Israel in my jealousy.

12 Wherefore say, Behold, I give unto him my covenant of peace:

extent, flourishing state, remarkable increase, and marvellous power of the spiritual kingdom of Christ.

[Ver. 6. Trees of lign-aloës, ahalim (Aquilaria Agallochum of botanists), is a tree which grows in Northern India and Central Asia. Its wood is very fragrant, and was much prized on this account by the ancients. It is entirely different from aloës. An essence is obtained by pounding the wood, and then pouring boiling water upon it, when the essence floats. P.—Ver. 7. 'Waters shall flow out of his two buckets; and his posterity shall be by many waters.' The meaning is—that Israel is likened to a man carrying two pails of water, after the eastern mode, upon his shoulders; and out of these water, the emblem and source of all richness, flows abundantly. His posterity too would grow up by many waters—in the most fertile regions of the earth. P.—Agag was king of the Amalekites, 1 Sa. 15. 8, and it is probable it was the hereditary title of the monarchs of this people. For Israel to be higher than Agag, is to have power over the most inveterate of their enemies.—Ver. 8. The animal meant is uncertain—the rhinoceros, such as was seen by Campbell in South Africa, the head of which is lodged in the museum of the Missionary Society of London, seems to answer best both to the name unicorn, and to mighty strength: which is described as his distinguishing attribute. C.]

Ver. 17-19. These predictions had their accomplishment in the victories and conquests of the Hebrews over the Moabites or Edomites, and neighbouring nations, in the days of Ehud, Gideon, and Jephthah, Ju. iii. vii. xi.; David, 2 Sa. v. viii. x.; Jehoshaphat, 2 Ch. xx.; 2 Ki. iii.; Uzziah, 2 Ch. xxvi.; and after the Chaldean captivity, in the time of Hyrcanus and Alexander Jannæus; and perhaps may have a further literal accomplishment when the Jews take possession of Canaan. They may also relate to the conquests of the heathen nations to Jesus Christ under the New Testament.

Ver. 20. The Amalekites were once one of the principal nations around Canaan, and were the first who attacked the Israelites; and therefore gradually destroyed by them in the days of Gideon, Saul, David,

Hezekiah, and Esther.—[This statement has reference to antiquity and power. The Amalekites were a very ancient race, and they were among the most powerful of the clans of Western Asia. They have long disappeared, and not a trace of them remains. P.]

Ver. 21. Perhaps these Kenites were not the posterity of Jethro, but rather an Arabian tribe who were neighbours to the Amalekites, and were at last carried captive by the Assyrians, about the time of Hezekiah or Manasseh.

Ver. 24. This was fulfilled when first the Greeks, and afterwards the Romans, invaded Asia, subdued Assyria, Canaan, and the places about; and when their respective empires were, not long after, brought to ruin: the Greeks about one hundred years before Christ, and the Romans about A.D. 476; and will be more fully accomplished in the ruin of the Popish and Turkish empires.—[Eber is generally supposed to have given name to the Hebrews, though some eminent authorities assign a different etymology. It appears from Ge. 10. 25 that he had two distinguished sons, who became the heads of many distinguished tribes; for 'he also' Boethroyd reads 'they also,' viz. the Assyrian land force, and the naval power of Chittim, shall perish for ever. The Assyrian monarchy has already perished, so likewise have the Greek and Roman powers by which Eber (the Jews) was afflicted.' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Wretched indeed are those who are, by their conscience, excluded from the carnal enjoyments of this world, and notwithstanding live in these lusts which will exclude them from heaven: for great light may abound in the head, when there is nothing but naughtiness in the heart. Often sinners are proud of those gifts which God bestows upon them for the benefit of his people: and their knowledge, being cursed, is an effectual hindrance of true wisdom. But numerous and large are the blessings which God bestows upon faithful people! they may be an eyesore to Satan and his agents; yet God lays an effectual restraint upon their most inveterate enemies; and he will at last convince his opposers of the emptiness and folly of all their devilish devices for thwarting his purposes, or annoying his people. What infinite knowledge is there in God! he perfectly discerns every circumstance of nations and persons, ages unnumbered, before there is the smallest appearance thereof. He sees all changes to the end, all the destruction and havoc which sin will make in the world of one nation after another. But blessed be the Lord, who hath raised up a Horn of salvation in the house of his servant Jacob;—a Star to enlighten the Gentiles, and be the glory of his people Israel;—a Captain of salvation to go forth conquering and to conquer. But let me not dismiss this eastern sorcerer Balaam, with his high pretences to religion, his glorious speeches, and his noted intimacy with God, without seriously inquiring, What am I—what have I—what do I—what desire I—more than he?

CHAPTER XXV. REFLECTIONS.—If the devil's agents prevail not against the church one way, they will try another. But let us remember, that no enchantment can hurt us but that of our own lusts; that one sin leads to another; and that few temptations are more dangerous than the lustful love of women. If once the heart be ensnared, the miserable slave of lust and beauty may be enticed to anything sinful. Nothing more endangers the soul's final apostasy from God than yielding to the solicitation of fleshly lusts: nor doth anything more effectually secure the justice of God and despair of hell. Yea, general distempers and loathsome diseases are the fruit of general and loathsome iniquities: and such sinners quickly become impudent in their crimes. It is necessary therefore to punish sins with great impartiality, as the higher men are the more aggravated and hurtful is their offence. A well-timed and prudent zeal for the honour of God, in opposition to prevailing abominations, is a remarkable blessing to nations and churches. And God greatly honours and rewards such as dare to be bold and impartial in his cause for ridding a land of sin, and rescuing it from plagues. But friendship in sin quickly issues in mutual hatred and ruin; and tempters to sin are tormented with trouble. But in Phinehas may I not discern Jesus, whose zeal for his exposing, and disappointing him, is no breach of charity:

but an exercise of it in favour of his victims. To 'smite' the seducer of innocence, the demoralizer of youth, is so far from being contrary to love, that it is frequently a merciful exercise of it, even towards the guilty, whom it serves to arrest in his career of evil.—C.

To prepare for the

(2) To illustrate the promises to the tribes which it appears that Korah was burned

the earth. Booth-contradiction. 'And the earth opened her

—C. The remarkable difference of the rate of increase and decrease in the several tribes, might give occasion for much curious investigation.
The most striking point are the astorishing increase in Manasseh, and the still more astonishing decrease in Simeon.
The former, from being numerically the lowest of the tribes at the former census, is at this become the sixth; and the latter,
from being the third,
has become the lowest of all, having lost not very much less than one half of its former numbers. For the increase of Manasseh it is difficult to discover any other cause than the Lord's blessing upon the house of Joseph; but as to the decrease in Simeon, it is without reason conceived that this tribe suffered from privileges, or that it suffered loss in the matter of Baal-peor.—*Pict.

—This was a vast number to spring

from one man, considering that Benjamin, who had ten sons, wanted nearly 20,000 of this number. We may here give, at one view, the results of a comparison between the census at Mount Sinai and the present. The total number was nearly the same.

They were now

1200 fewer than they were then; but seven tribes had in-creased

in number. Benjamin had increased

1900. Issachar, 9000.

Zebulun, 3000. Manasseh, 20,500. Benjamin, 10,200. Dan, 1700. Asher, 11,000.

The other five, however, had decreased.

Reuben had decreased 2700. Simeon, 2200. Gad,

5150. Ephraim, 8000;

and Naphtali, 8000.

From this comparison, Henry remarks,

1. That all the three tribes that were encamped under the standard of Judah, who was the ancestor of Christ, were increased, for his church shall be edified and multiplied.

2. That none of the tribes had increased

so much as that of Manasseh, which in the former account was the smallest of all the tribes, only 12,200; while here it is one of the most considerable; and his brother Ephraim, who which then was numerous, is here one of the least. Jacob had crossed hands upon their heads, and had preferred

Ephraim before Manasseh, which perhaps the Ephraimites had prized themselves too much in,

and had trampled upon their brethren

the Manassites; but when the Lord saw that Manasseh was despised, he thus multiplied him exceedingly, for it is his glory to help the weakest, and raise up them that are cast down.—f.

Jordan near Jericho.

64 But among these there was not a man of them whom Moses and Aaron the priest numbered, when they numbered the children of Israel in the wilderness of Sinai.<sup>6</sup>

65 For the LORD had said of them, 'They shall surely die in the wilderness. And there great usefulness and fame. What alteration Providence makes in families, tribes, and nations, and what havoc death makes of mankind, in a short time! Exactly, though gradually, are the threatenings of God's word accomplished! but amidst all the changes of this world, his faithfulness abides the same: yea, with care and wisdom he fixes even the outward lot of his people; and the promises of his grace are sure to the faithful; and in the enjoyment of them we ought therefore to be attentive to his gracious disposal.

CHAPTER XXVII. REFLECTIONS. — With

M EJDAL ESH-SHEMS—NEAR WHERE MOSES AND ELIAS APPEARED ON THE MOUNT. [Numbers, xxvii:12-23.]—"And the Lord said unto Moses, Get thee up into this mount Abarim, and see the land which I have given unto the children of Israel," etc. Mejdal esh-Shems is on the road from Banias to Damascus. It is a Druse village, and is at the foot of Mount Hermon, near the place where, according to tradition, Christ was transfigured when Moses and Elias appeared with Him. It is true that Moses was not permitted to cross the Jordan, but it is a striking evidence of the truth that our career does not end with death that Moses, though buried on the other side of Jordan, appears upon this side during this crisis in our Lord's life, when before His disciples He seemed to hold back the veil that separates time from eternity, and disclosed the glories of the spiritual world.

was not left a man of them, save Caleb the son of Jephunneh, and Joshua the son of Nun.

CHAPTER XXVII.

THEN came the daughters of <sup>a</sup>Zelophehad, the son of Hopher, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, of the families of Manasseh the son of Joseph; and these are the names of his daughters, Mahlah, and Noah, and Hoglah, and Milcah, and Tirzah.

<sup>1</sup> They presented themselves before the highest court of judicature, consisting of Moses, the high-priest, and the heads of the congregation. It would seem that this court was held close by the tabernacle, and also, perhaps, that Moses might the more readily consult the Lord in any difficult case. It is said that in after times the Sadducees used to follow the tabernacle, always holding their judicial meetings in the place where the tabernacle rested. It is good to acknowledge the Lord in all our ways.

Rosenmüller translates the passage, 'In the company of Korah who died in his own sin.'

English version seems, however, the true meaning of the passage. The daughters do not deny that their father died in the wilderness as a just punishment for his early unbelief or murmuring, but evidently intimate and plead his sentence, as he had not joined the party of Korah at a time when the opposition to Aaron and Aaron, and defection from the worship of Jehovah, were on the point of becoming universal, ch. 16. 19.—C.

<sup>4</sup> The Jewish law of inheritance provides, (1) That on the demise of the father, the land descends to the sons. (2) If there be no sons, it descends to the daughters. (3) If no daughters, the brothers of the deceased become heirs. (4) If no brethren or paternal uncle, the land passes to the grand-uncles, or uncles of his father. (5) If there be no grand-uncles, then the nearest of kin succeeds. The law states nothing beyond the fifth degree, as in a nation constituted as Israel was, an heir could scarcely fail to be found within that degree.—C.

these daughters of Zelophehad let me manifest a strong faith in the promises of God, a strong desire after the better country, and a tender regard to my parents' honour; so shall my labour not be in vain in the Lord. While I observe, that it is appointed for all men once to die: that God's faithful children are often most severely chastised for their sin: but that in death believers retire to their best friends, to their unchanging and eternal rest;—while I profit by the death of others, whom I have seen depart before me in peace and comfort:—let me, with Moses, kindly accept God's warnings of my own death.—Let me manifest a deep concern for the welfare of the church after I am gone; and rejoice that Jesus liveth, and is appointed of God as her Governor, to put all true believers in possession of the promised rest.—And let me, with Joshua, cheerfully comply with God's call to the hardest work, and always act according to his inspired directions.

CHAPTER XXVIII. [Ver. 1. It is remarkable that Moses does not refer back to these commands as already given, but proceeds to deliver them as if promulgated for the first time: the reason is obvious—Moses not only means to show the things to be observed, but to exemplify God's method of teaching; which, like all other teaching, consists largely of repetition, see Jn. 14. 26. It is also worthy of remark that the book of Leviticus is generally delivered as a directory how the ordinance is to be observed; here we have a positive command that it must be observed in due season. The phrase due season renders it probable that during the journeyings in the wilderness religious ordinances had been greatly neglected; indeed there is a constant tendency, even in spiritual men, to 'weary in well-doing,' and many an admonition and promise do they require to persuade them that in due season they shall

COLUMN AND STATUE OF THE VIRGIN, NAZARETH—NEAR THE SITE OF THE HOME OF JOSEPH AND MARY. [NUMBERS, xxviii and xxix.]—In the twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth chapters of Numbers we have the round of sacrifice daily, weekly, monthly, and annually drawn out in its fullness and symmetry. The sacrifices of the Old Testament combined regularity with variety; there was some sacrifice for every day, and for every week in its seventh day, and for every month in its first day, and for every year in its seventh month. Through these and their great festivals, all the interests and events of life were embraced, showing that the whole of life was to be consecrated to God. So Christ, who summed up all this meaning in His own life, died for us that it might be possible for all to make a perfect self-surrender to God. We give, to illustrate these two chapters, the column and statue of the Virgin at Nazareth, in the city of our Lord's boyhood.

5 And <sup>a</sup> tenth part of an ephah of flour for a meat-offering, mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil.

6 It is a continual burnt-offering, which was ordained in mount Sinai for a sweet savour, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD.

7 And <sup>the</sup> drink-offering thereof shall be the fourth part of an hin for the one lamb: in the holy place shalt thou cause the strong wine to be poured unto the LORD for a drink-offering.

8 And the other lamb shalt thou offer <sup>at</sup> even: as the meat-offering of the morning, and as the drink-offering thereof, thou shalt offer it, a sacrifice made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

9 ¶ And <sup>on</sup> the sabbath-day two lambs of the first year without spot, and two tenth-deals of flour for a meat-offering, mingled with oil, and the drink-offering thereof.

10 This is the burnt-offering of every sabbath, <sup>besides</sup> the continual burnt-offering, and his drink-offering.<sup>4</sup>

11 ¶ And <sup>in</sup> the beginnings of your months ye shall offer a burnt-offering unto the LORD; two<sup>m</sup> young bullocks, and one ram, seven lambs of the first year without spot;

12 And <sup>a</sup> three tenth-deals of flour for a meat-offering, mingled with oil, for one bullock; and two tenth-deals of flour for a meat-offering, mingled with oil, for one ram;

13 And a several tenth-deal of flour, mingled with oil, for a meat-offering unto one lamb, for a burnt-offering of a sweet savour, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD.

14 And their drink-offerings shall be half an hin of wine unto a bullock, and the third part of an hin unto a ram, and a fourth part of an hin unto a lamb: this is the burnt-offering of every month throughout the months of the year.

15 And one <sup>kid</sup> of the goats for a sin-offering unto the LORD shall be offered, besides the continual burnt-offering, and his drink-offering.

16 ¶ And <sup>in</sup> the fourteenth day of the first month<sup>5</sup> is the passover of the LORD.

10 It is observable that there is not so much as one peace-offering ordered in all the chapters, which was a sort of sacrifice that was most for the benefit of those that brought them to the altar; but all burnt-offerings, and all sin-offerings, which were wholly for the honour of God, and acknowledgment of his sovereign dominion over them, and of the duty they owed to him. As the sin-offerings were shadows of that great sacrifice of God's Son, which was one day to be offered for the sins of men, out of his own infinite love to them; so the whole burnt-offerings, which were always of the most perfect creatures, the finest flour, the choicest fruits of the earth, and the best liquors, were shadows of that excellent degree of piety, which the Son of God intended to bring into the world, which would move and every man's love to God, to give themselves wholly up to him, and devote all they had, even their own lives, to his service.—Patrick.

* The special offering of this feast consists of only ten animals, there being but one bullock, whereas in the sacrifices directed in ch. 28.11, 19, 24 there were twelve. The reason why this number was chosen and appointed by God upon this occasion is most probably to be found in a reference to the ten plagues of Egypt, from which Israel was protected, and the infliction of which they were delivered from bondage. i The afflicting of the soul on the tenth day, and the offering of ten animals, seems here a memorial, not merely of protection and deliverance, as in the former case, but a recognition of the ten commandments the Israelites had covenantally observed, yet perfidiously violated, and which violation they here sacrificially acknowledge with sorrow and humiliation. —C.

x In ver. 17, 20, 23, 26, 29, 32, the bullocks decrease by one each day. The meaning of such sacrificial peculiarities is sometimes revealed by Moses or explained by Paul; at other times, where neither give any explanation, we must have recourse to analogy, which, to a certain limited extent, is a safe guide; and at times, though the 'veil of Moses' be taken from our face, we must yet acknowledge that we 'see as through a glass, darkly.' In the present case there is no small difficulty in giving any reason for this diminution as the Scripture is every-where silent in the point. Still, it seems highly probable that the bullock, as the emblem of labour, Pr. 14. 4, being the animal daily sub-tracted from the sacrifice, might be intended to remind the offerers that every day of sacrifice to God was diminishing their amount of labour, and bringing them nearer to rest in God. Some have imagined the daily diminution in the sacrifice to shadow forth the gradual disappearance of the Jewish dispensation, but there appears neither authority nor emblematic analogy by which this conjecture can be supported; though certain of the Jewish rabbins consider it as pointing to the gradual diminution of the nations, until all shall have come under the rule of Messiah, and there shall remain no more sacrifices but those of thanksgiving, prayer, and praise. —C.

8 It is worthy of special remark, that in each of these feasts there is a peculiar sacrifice for the day, but to every day is invariably retained 'the continual burnt-offering.' This is a most wise and admirable appendage, and originates in a deep insight into the human heart. Religious excitement, like every other excitement, has a continual tendency to enervate the heart, and to render it negligent of ordinary duties. Therefore, both before and after these august and impressive ceremonies the ordinary, the everyday business of religion is scrupulously enjoined, even to the minutest particular. —Vale.

The little things of religion, if we so call any parts of religion—do not act as the weightier matters; neither do the greater things of religion supersede our attention to the little. Mat. 23.23.—C.

9 This is called the great day of the feast, Ju. 7. 37, yet the sacrifices were fewer than upon any other of the feast-days. This might well serve to teach the Israelites not to trust to the multitude of their sacrifices for pardon, peace, or other blessings; but to the one offering for atonement, to which, since the days of Abel, the eye of faith had always been directed He. 12.14. The Jewish rabbins affirm that upon this day it was customary to draw water from the pool of Siloam, and to pour it mixed with wine upon the sacrifices. This custom is not intimated either by Moses or any of the prophets, though the rabbins attempt to deduce it from Is. 12. 3. And it is not improbable that Lord alluded to it when he cried, 'If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink;' thereby turning an unauthorized pomus, and useless ceremony, into an occasion of calling the attention of the people to spiritual duties enjoined and the spiritual privileges promised by God.—C.

burnt-offering, every day a he-goat for a sin-offering, and seventy oxen in all for a burnt-offering during the seven days, as well as every day two rams and fourteen yearling lambs, with the requisite meat-offerings and drink-offerings. Whilst, therefore, the number of rams and lambs was double the number offered at the pass-over and feast of pentecost, the number of oxen was fivefold: for, instead of fourteen, there were seventy offered during the seven days. This multiplication was distributed in such a way, that instead of there being ten offered every day, there were thirteen on the first day, twelve on the second, and so on, deducting one every day, so that on the seventh day there were exactly seven offered; the arrangement being probably made for the purpose of securing the holy number seven

1 Vows are not to be broken. 3 The exceptions of a maid's vow, 6 of a wife's, 9 of a widow's, or of her that is divorced.

AND Moses spake unto the heads of the tribes concerning the children of Israel, saying, <sup>This is</sup> the thing which the LORD hath commanded.

3 ¶ If a woman also vow a vow unto the LORD, and bind <sup>herself</sup> by a bond, <sup>being</sup> in her father's house in her youth;<sup>3</sup>

4 And her father hear her vow, and her bond wherewith she hath bound her soul, and her father shall hold his peace at her: then all her vows shall stand, and every bond wherewith she hath bound her soul shall stand.

5 But if <sup>her</sup> father disallow her in the day that he heareth, not any of her vows, or of her bonds wherewith she hath bound her soul, shall stand; and the LORD shall forgive her, because her father disallowed her.

1 From a reference to the foregoing chap. ver. 39, it will appear that the <sup>vows</sup> here intended are chiefly vows of things to be dedicated to God, as they are placed in contact with <sup>free-will offerings</sup> and sacrifices positively enjoined. In this case, the vow being bound lawful, a <sup>man</sup> is bound, even were he a son in his father's house, provided the vow were of his own property.—C.

4 In vows or promissory oaths, a person, as it were, pledges his soul for the performance of the things vowed or sworn.

5 A daughter unmarried, and resident with her father, and <sup>not</sup> bound by the law of her husband, may have any vow set aside by the authority of the father or husband; provided it be disallowed so soon as discovered. But this is no dispensing power exercised by either. It is accompanied by no mental reservation; it is a subjective positive rule, or private or unknown interpretation, whereby it can be dispensed. It is a line marked out by God, previous to the vow, and beyond which the vow cannot pass. If it therefore fall in the word it is not violated in fact, for it was made under a condition that cannot be fulfilled, and therefore falls to the ground, as if it had never been made.—C.

8 Boothroyd translates it 'his iniquity,' which seems the true sense, for if the wife intended to fulfil the vow, and was prevented, she cannot be charged with iniquity; whereas the husband is guilty by going beyond the authority conferred by the law of God, <sup>in</sup> iniquity. The pronoun shows in the Hebrew that the woman is meant. In the case cited, should the husband by any act of arbitrary power prevent his wife from fulfilling a just vow, then he would bear the sin which she would have had to bear had she broken the vow of her own accord.—P.

6 ¶ And if she had at all an husband, when she vowed,<sup>4</sup> or uttered ought out of her lips, wherewith she bound her soul;

7 And her husband heard <sup>it</sup>, and held his peace at her in the day that he heard <sup>it</sup>; then her vows shall stand, and her bonds wherewith she bound her soul shall stand.

8 But if her husband disallowed her on the day that he heard <sup>it</sup>; then he shall make her vow which she vowed, and that which she uttered with her lips, wherewith she bound her soul, of none effect: and the LORD shall forgive her.

9 ¶ But every vow of a widow, and of her that is divorced, wherewith they have bound their souls, shall stand against her.

10 And if she vowed in her husband's house, or bound her soul by a bond with an oath;

11 And her husband heard <sup>it</sup>, and held his peace at her, <sup>and</sup> disallowed her not; then all her vows shall stand, and every bond wherewith she bound her soul shall stand.

12 But if her husband hath utterly made them void on the day he heard <sup>them</sup>; then whatsoever proceeded out of her lips concerning her vows, or concerning the bond of her soul, shall not stand: her husband hath made them void; and the LORD shall forgive her.

13 Every vow, and every binding oath to afflict the soul, <sup>her</sup> husband may establish it, or her husband may make it void.

14 But if her husband altogether hold his peace at her from day to day; then he establisheth all her vows, or all her bonds, which <sup>are</sup> upon her: he confirmeth them, because he held his peace at her in the day that he heard <sup>them</sup>.

15 But if he shall any ways make them void after that he hath heard <sup>them</sup>; then he shall <sup>hear</sup> her iniquity.<sup>5</sup>

Ver. 39. [The annual sacrifices enjoined at the public charge were, according to these chapters of repetition: goats 15; kids 21; rams 72; bullocks 132; lambs 1101; in all, 1241. In addition there were vast numbers of sin, trespass, and peace offerings, by individuals; together with the astonishing number of lambs offered at the passover. When Cestius, the Roman governor, sought the number of visitants at Jerusalem, the priests answered that the lambs killed were 256,500. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—In these numerous and complex oblations, and their often-repeated occasions, I remark the insufficiency of the Jewish ceremonies. Yet I cannot but behold and admire the one oblation of the Redeemer himself, so fully completing all justice, pardoning sin, procuring peace, and securing life and comfort for every believer. In virtue and usefulness no answerable to, but in glory so infinitely transcending, them all.—But while I travel through such groups of typical feasts and oblations, let me, illuminated by gospel light, stop to behold in them the blessed new promise of grace; let me view it in its gracious origin, glorious power, wonderful construction, important parts, condition, and promise; its wise, effectual, and infinitely useful administration, and its delightful properties; as all my salvation and all my desire! Here let me contemplate Jesus in his savoury and saving names, his wonderful natures, his glorious person as God-man, his endearing excellences and qualifications, his saving offices of Mediator, Saviour, Redeemer, Prophet, Priest, and King, and his heart-captivating relations to God and men; let me consider his infinitely diversified but necessary states of humiliation and exaltation, his delightful labours of love in undertaking for us, assuming our nature, obeying and suffering in our stead, rising from the dead, ascending to glory, appearing in the presence of God as our advocate, and returning to judge the world, to complete and carry to the highest our eternal salvation; while I admire all his fulness, natural or communicative, as lodged in him for sinful men. Let me behold the ten commandments as a broken covenant of works fulfilled, magnified, and made honourable for me, in having the Lawgiver himself its obedient subject, fulfilling at once both its pre-disadvantageous circumstances, amidst poverty, reproach, distress, persecution by men, temptation and harassment by devils, and under an infinite load of sins borne, will of God fixed, and pain inflicted on were borne by the Son of God, suffered for by him, removed from him and from us in our respective justification, destroyed in us by sanctification, marvelously improved by providence for our good, and their glorification. Thus a great and everlasting salvation was effected for sinful men—for ME—devised in God's everlasting deep love, secured with the blood of his Son, freely offered in the gospel, powerfully applied by the Holy Ghost, and in time and eternity is enjoyed in full right of marriage, law, and sonship, and in the most delightful possession. Thus the spirituality, self-existence, infinity, eternity, unchangeableness, independence, greatness, wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness, and truth of the most High, the great JEHOVAH, are vindicated from all reproach, all the injury done to them by sin is fully resented, and themselves glorified to the highest; and in consequence hereof they all appear smiling and breathing forth unbounded love and mercy to sinful men—to sinful men. Thus a redeeming Godhead, in all his persons, petitions, purposes, works, fulness, and property, is offered to, bestowed on, enjoyed, and to be for ever enjoyed, by rebellious men—by rebellious men—as my ALL and in ALL.—Let me then observe, that my whole life, whether I fast or whether I feast, whether I weep or whether I rejoice, ought to be a life of faith on the Son of God, who loved me, and thus gave himself for me; and that, while I study to have as many solemn feasts on his death as I can, I ought never, morning or evening, to neglect the daily service of God in my closet and my family.

CHAPTER XXX. REFLECTIONS.—In order to our more perfectly obeying what the Lord requires of us by his gracious authority, it is often useful and necessary that we bind ourselves by new bonds of self-engagement: and the obligation of such engagements is solemn and awful, and therefore should be made with great deliberation, and care be taken that the fulfilment thereof no way interfere with any relative duty. God hates robbery for burnt-offering, and pays the strictest attention to the peace and order of families. Let therefore all my vows be well considered and important. Let them proceed from a serious consulting with Jesus Christ, as my father and husband, in solemn prayer and careful searching of his word. In all my religious concerns let me pay the strictest regard to relative duties; and having opened my mouth unto the Lord, never dare to go back again from my vows.

CHAPTER XXXI. [Ver. 2. This is one of the passages against which infidelity has uttered its fellest and fiercest assaults. We may not pollute the page, nor the reader's eye, with its foul speeches. But we may ask the infidel, Do you believe God to be the moral Lawgiver and Ruler of the world? If you deny, we cease to argue with the madness of atheism. But if God be acknowledged as the Lawgiver and Ruler, then has he not a right to enforce his own laws by appropriate penalties? Nature, as it is called—though surely nature is but another name for the will, laws, and government of God—nature has often swept away by earthquake, pestilence, or famine, her tens and hundreds of thousands; yet surely nature has not been arraigned for the deed! Why then should God be arraigned at the bar of proud and unholly infidelity for punishing a wicked people by the hand of man? No sane man will accuse God, under the name of nature, in the one case, and none but a hopeless infidel will accuse him under his real name on the other. C.]

Ver. 5. [The muster of the army, upon this occasion, seems to be neither in proportion to the population of the tribes nor the military exigency of the case. That each tribe however comparatively weak, should be required to furnish a military contingent as numerous as the strongest, would to human wisdom seem unreasonable. But divine wisdom intends, by this apparent disproportion, to teach some great and important lessons. (1) That every man, and every community, is to furnish for God's service all that God requires, according as his providence bestows, without any relative comparison of what means others have, what sacrifices others make, or what service they render, or may be able to render, to God and his cause. (2) This equality of draught from unequal numbers is farther intended to inculcate the important lesson, that all real honour is derived from devotedness and zeal in the cause of God and his truth, and therefore it was necessary that every tribe should have an equal opportunity of exhibiting those qualities and securing those honours. See Jn. 12. 26.—Note, What an admonition does this equality of array suggest to churches! Some are few in number, and poor in worldly resources, but as God requires, every one of his tribes to send its thousand to the war, so does he require each of his churches to make equal sacrifices to provide for his service, and equal exertions to bear witness to his truth. And true it is, for our encouragement, there are churches whose fewness in number, and poverty of means, have neither damped exertion nor denied success. C.]

And these the Lord commanded them to slay for sins, that when individualized still continue in these countries to be punished with death, and which instead of being diminished in atrocity by being nationalized, as was the case with the Canaanites and Midianites, became by their universality the more abominable in the sight of a holy God. See the horrible catalogue, Le. 18. 21-27, and the sentence of the righteous Judge, ver. 24-30. C.]

Ver. 14. [From the omission of any reference to Joshua as general, and the rebuke given indiscriminately to all the captains, it seems certain that the army had no commander-in-chief, but that each tribe had sent forth its own quota under their own leaders. This avoided all suspicion of favouritism, and removed every cause of jealousy, until circumstances required still greater concentration of counsel, and the character of Joshua as a leader had earned for him an indisputable claim to the first rank. C.]

Ver. 17. [Every male. The killing of 'every male among the little ones' has been censured by infidels as an act of cruelty unworthy the character of a merciful God. 1 The frequent repetition of this or some similar form of expression, affords one of the strongest incidental evidences of the divine inspiration of the Pentateuch. The whole record, therefore, must be inspired; or the author must have been guilty of deliberate and systematic deceit.—P.

But in 2 Sa. 11. 11 the ark seems decidedly to have been in the camp in the day of battle, and with the cognizance and approbation, of David, and as David was a scrupulous observer of divine ordinances, we are disposed to join with those who conceive that Phinehas took the ark as one of the holy instruments. 8 And they slew the kings of Midian, besides the rest of them that were slain, namely, Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, five kings of Midian: Balaam also the son of Beor they slew with the sword.

9 And the children of Israel took all the women of Midian captives,<sup>4</sup> and their little ones, and took the spoil of all their cattle, and all their flocks, and all their goods.

10 And they burnt all their cities wherein they dwelt, and all their goodly castles, with fire.

11 And they took all the spoil, and all the prey, both of men and of beasts.

12 And they brought the captives, and the prey, and the spoil, unto Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and unto the congregation of the children of Israel, unto the camp at the plains of Moab, which are by Jordan near Jericho.

13 ¶ And Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and all the princes of the congregation, went forth to meet them without the camp.

14 And Moses was wroth with the officers of the host, with the captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, which came from the battle.<sup>5</sup>

15 And Moses said unto them, Have ye saved all the women alive?

16 Behold, these caused the children of Israel, through the counsel of Balaam, to commit trespass against the LORD in the matter of by God's command? If it be replied, the ordinary death of children is natural. The answer is easy: what in this case is nature but the result of certain organic laws? and what are organic laws, but the result of God's will? So that we arrive, in spite of infidelity, at the point of God's will in the one case, and command in the other. If the infidel deny that death is the result of God's will, then he becomes an atheist, with whom it is generally vain to argue: for he who is mad enough to deny the being and government of a God, is certainly not sane enough to comprehend any rational argument. See Ps. 14. 1. The infidel who in this case accuses the 'God of the Jews,' accuses, at the same time, the 'God of nature,' whom infidels, in general, pretend to acknowledge and worship, and whom, therefore, even upon their own principles, they dare not openly condemn. The sentence against the males is against the perpetuation of a wicked community; the sentence against the women is in condemnation of lewdness, seduction, and idolatry. C.]

Ver. 18. [The assertion that Moses, in this verse, permitted the people to retain the 'women children' for concubines is one of the most monstrous that frontless infidelity has ever had the hardihood to pronounce. For, not to speak of other parts of the law already promulgated, as Ex. 20. 14; Le. 19. 20, the restrictions, De. 21. 11-14, will sufficiently demonstrate that the direction in the text was merely a permission to hold them as bond-women, a class who were amply protected against every form of oppression, and endowed with many privileges, for which see note on Le. 25. 46. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Short-lived is success in sinning, and at last most dearly bought. Enticers to sin therefore ought to be held as our worst enemies, and treated accordingly: especially since God takes the greatest delight in comforting and honouring those who have been singularly zealous for his cause. And it is easy for him to accomplish great exploits, whether by many or by few. Our humane tenderness, carried to an excess, often spares our most dangerous enemies and the most guilty criminals. But everything, even in war, ought to be conducted with a sacred regard to religion, strict equity, and brotherly kindness; and the whole success thankfully ascribed to God. And after

Peor, and there was a plague among the congregation of the LORD.<sup>6</sup>

17 Now therefore <sup>7</sup>kill every male among the little ones, and kill every woman that hath known man by lying with him.<sup>7</sup>

18 But all the women-children, that have not known a man by lying with him,<sup>8</sup> keep alive for yourselves.

19 And <sup>9</sup>do ye abide without the camp seven days: whosoever hath killed any person, and whosoever hath touched any slain, purify both yourselves and your captives on the third day, and on the seventh day.

20 And <sup>10</sup>purify all your raiment, and all that is made of skins,<sup>9</sup> and all work of goats' hair, and all things made of wood.<sup>1</sup>

21 ¶ And Eleazar the priest said unto the men of war which went to the battle, This is the ordinance of the law which the LORD commanded Moses;

22 Only<sup>11</sup> the gold, and the silver, the brass, the iron, the tin, and the lead, 23 Every thing that may abide the fire, ye shall make it go through the fire, and it shall be clean; nevertheless it shall <sup>12</sup>be purified with the water of separation: and all that abideth not the fire, ye shall make go through the water.

24 And<sup>13</sup> ye shall wash your clothes on the seventh day, and ye shall be clean, and afterward ye shall come into the camp.

25 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

26 Take the sum of the prey<sup>14</sup> that was taken, both of man and of beast, thou, and Eleazar the priest, and the chief fathers of the congregation:<sup>3</sup>

27 And divide the prey into <sup>15</sup>two parts; between them that took the war upon them, who went out to battle, and between all the congregation:

28 And levy a <sup>16</sup>tribute unto the LORD of the men of war which went out to battle; one soul of five hundred, both of the persons, and of the beeves, and of the asses, and of the sheep:

29 Take it of their half, and give it unto Eleazar the priest, for <sup>17</sup>an heave-offering of the LORD.

30 And of the children of Israel's half thou shalt take one portion of fifty, of the persons, of the beeves, of the asses, and of the flocks,<sup>4</sup> of all manner of beasts, and give them unto the Levites, which <sup>18</sup>keep the charge of the tabernacle of the LORD.

31 And Moses and Eleazar the priest did as the LORD commanded Moses.

32 And the booty, being the rest of the prey which the men of war had caught, was six hundred thousand, and seventy thousand, and five thousand sheep, <sup>6</sup> The character of Balaam is most extraordinary. It is full of inconsistencies; and yet on a close and thorough examination of it we are forced to admit that it is not without parallels in the history of the church. Balaam knew God and feared him; but it was the fear of a cringing slave. He was ambitious and covetous; and he was most fertile in schemes for the purpose of hiding his covetousness, and gratifying his ambitious designs, while professing to obey and honour God. He never ventured on an open act of transgression. He had not courage for that. But he adopted secret and indirect measures to accomplish the four purposes of his heart. He blessed the Israelites with his mouth, because he was compelled to do so by the Spirit of God; but he advised a system of wish, gross, and fendish dictation, which entailed upon the Israelites a fearful curse. Never did man more richly deserve death than Balaam.—P.

A particular geography of many cities and districts mentioned in Scripture is often little more than conjecture. Still there are great landmarks, so to speak, by which the sacred historian can be followed. The text affords a striking example both of the conjectural and the known. Of the position and limits of the land of Jazer, for example, nothing more is accurately known than that it was somewhere in the neighbourhood of Gilead. But the land of Gilead is identified by means of the distinguished mountain range which has continued since the days of Moses so much an object of history that its locality cannot be mistaken, and its very name (now written Deilaad) continues nearly unaltered. The 'land of Gilead' extended from the river Hieromax on the north to Nebo on the south. Its beauty and fertility have been celebrated by modern travellers with an enthusiasm that well accounts for the jealousy of Moses lest the love of ease, and of the 'pleasant land,' should tempt them to forsake their brethren and provoke their God.—C. c Mi. 7. 14. 16. 50. 19. This proof the objector never can furnish; wherefore, further answer is unnecessary.—C.

The two tribes and a half amounted to 120,580, and of these we learn (Jos. 4. 13) that 4000 were over Jordan, leaving 70,580 to guard the families and flocks against the Midianites, Ammonites, and Idumeans.—C.

p The whole country had been almost subdued by Moses, the cities captured, and the people either slain or driven out, see ch. xxii. How is it, therefore, that the inhabitants of the land are mentioned here? The natural explanation is this. On the east of Moab and Gilead lay the wide plains of Arabia, thinly peopled by nomads. Thither the conqueror Amoritæ fled, and he would naturally hover along the borders, watching any opportunity to attack the Israelites, and occupy their country.—P.

REFLECTIONS.—The love of the world, and the pride of life, frequently hasten men in their earthly settlements. Though such, even in this world, often issue in early and frequent disasters; and it is a fearful symptom when the rising generation tread in their fathers' sinful steps, and grow worse and worse. How base is it to desire our own rest and ease, when God's place is still familiarly known to travellers. Besides these notes of identification, it is still in being, though in ruins, and bears its ancient name, merely transformed by pronunciation into Heshbon.—Elealeh is described by Eusebius as situated a mile from Heshbon. It is now called El Aal, which in Arabic signifies 'the high,' which corresponds to its meaning in the Hebrew.—Kiryathaim continued a place of importance till the fourth century of our era, but amidst the ruins of Moab

ENTRANCE TO THE AMPHITHEATRE, PUTEOLI—NEAR WHERE ST. PAUL LANDED IN ITALY. [NUMBERS, xxxii: 23.]—"But if ye will not do so, behold, ye have sinned against the Lord: and be sure your sin will find you out." There is no truth better illustrated by the ruins of ancient cities than the one contained in the verse we quote above. In Egypt, in Assyria, in Greece, in Italy, the ruins of great cities teach in mute silence the truth that the sins of nations find nations out and the sins of individuals find individuals out. Before us are the melancholy ruins of a great theatre that stood in Puteoli. Here men and beasts contended for one another's lives for the gratification of a depraved populace. This whole region overlooking the Bay of Naples is now practically deserted. It has been well said that there is no statute of limitation in regard to the debt of sin. Wherever a people disregard the plain laws of God written in nature and in the constitution of their own lives they must pay the penalty of a fearful doom.

man armed for war, before the LORD to battle, as my lord saith.

28 So concerning them Moses commanded Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the chief fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel:

29 And Moses said unto them, If the children of Gad and the children of Reuben will pass with you over Jordan, every man armed to battle before the LORD,<sup>9</sup> and the land shall be subdued before you; then ye shall give them the land of Gilead for a possession:

30 But if they will not pass over with you armed, they shall have possessions among you in the land of Canaan.

31 And the children of Gad and the children of Reuben answered, saying, As the LORD hath said unto thy servants, so will we do:

32 We will pass over armed before the LORD into the land of Canaan, that the possession of our inheritance on this side Jordan may be ours.

33 And Moses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manasseh<sup>1</sup> the son of Joseph, the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land, with the cities thereof in the coasts, even the cities of the country round about.

35 And Athroth, Shophan, and Jaazer, and Jogbehah, 36 And Beth-nimrah, and Beth-haran, fenced cities; and folds for sheep.

37 And the children of Reuben built Heshbon, and Elealeh, and Kirjathaim, 38 And Nebo, and Baal-meon,<sup>4</sup> (their names being changed,) and Shibmah; and gave other names unto the cities<sup>4</sup> which they builded.

39 And the children of Machir the son of Manasseh went to Gilead, and took it, and dispossessed the Amorite which was in it.

40 And Moses gave Gilead unto Machir the son of Manasseh; and he dwelt therein.<sup>5</sup>

9 'Before the Lord.' From Nu. 10. 18, 20, it will be seen that the Reubenites and Gadites marched immediately before the Kohathites, who bore in the sanctuary, which were the ark and mercy-seat, the visible tokens of God's immediate presence. They are therefore literally required to pass over Jordan 'before the Lord.'—C.

1 No special reason is stated for giving a settlement in these lands to the half-tribe of Manasseh, nor are they said to have made any request similar to that of the tribes of Reuben and Gad. The conquests of the sons of Manasseh in Gilead, as recorded, ver. 40, &c., afford, however, a better reason for the grant to them, than even that which was pleaded by their brethren. See ver. 4. and the valley of which was admitted by Moses, and evidently approved by the whole nation.—C.

The localities of Athroth, &c., until we come to Heshbon, are little more than matters of conjecture.—C.

the exodus Gilead was divided into two parts: one, south of the Jabbar, belonged to Sihon the Amorite, and was allotted to Gad. The other, lying between the rivers Jabbar and Hieromax, belonged to Og king of Bashan, and was conquered by and allotted to the half-tribe of Manasseh. A portion of this northern section of Gilead was captured by Jair, and its villages received the name of Havoth-Jair. Kenath was one of the chief cities of the Bashan, and was situated on the western slopes of the mountain range which bounds the plain of Bashan on the east. It is now called Kunawat, and its ruins are some three miles in circuit, and are among the finest east of the Jordan.—P.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

1 Two and forty journeys of the Israelites. 50 The Canaanites are to be destroyed.

THESE are the journeys of the children of Israel, which went forth out of the land of Egypt with their armies, under the hand of Moses and Aaron.

2 And Moses wrote their goings out according to their journeys by the commandment of the LORD: and these are their journeys according to their goings out.<sup>1</sup>

3 And they departed from Rameses in the first month, on the fifteenth day of the first month: on the morrow after the passover the children of Israel went out with an high hand in the sight of all the Egyptians.

4 (For the Egyptians buried all their first-born, which the LORD had smitten among them: upon their gods also the LORD executed judgments.)

5 And the children of Israel removed from Rameses, and pitched in Succoth.

6 And they departed from Succoth, and pitched in Etham, which is in the edge of the wilderness.

7 And they removed from Etham, and turned again unto Pi-hahiroth, which is before Baal-zephon: and they pitched before Migdol.

8 And they departed from before Pi-hahiroth, and passed through the midst of the sea into the wilderness, and went three days' journey in the wilderness of Etham, and pitched in Marah.

9 And they removed from Marah, and came unto Elim: and in Elim were twelve fountains of water, and threescore and ten palm-trees; and they pitched there.

10 And they removed from Elim, and encamped by the Red sea.

people are in hardships and need our assistance! But how wise to improve past experiences, as means of preventing future iniquities. Yea, it is prudent to remove every monument of idolatry, lest it should entice us to offend. A holy indignation against sin, in whatever form it appears, is commendable and useful. But since the best of men often uncharitably mistake their neighbours' words or designs, and judge before they hear, it is therefore proper that everybody be allowed to explain himself; that every article of our agreements be precisely stated, and fully understood, at the making of them, that there may be no disputing afterward; and that the strictest equity, and the tenderest affection, may be maintained among the people of God, who are all brethren in Christ Jesus.

CHAPTER XXXIII. [Ver. 2. The Israelites in going from Egypt to Canaan did not proceed along one direct line of route. They were led from place to place, sometimes back, sometimes forward, by a divine guide. For thirty-eight years they were literally

'wanderers,' moving apparently from pasture to pasture, and from fountain to fountain, like one of the great nomad tribes of Arabia. The full history of these wanderings is not given. All the places through which they passed are not mentioned. Even the few stations whose names are recorded cannot all be identified. It is consequently impossible to trace the footsteps of the Israelites in every part of the wilderness journey. There are, however, several leading stations which have been identified; and taking these as landmarks, it is not difficult to determine the general line of march. It would seem that Moses first wrote the diary which is given in Exodus, Leviticus, and the early chapters of Numbers; then by divine command he wrote this summary, supplying the names of many stations not given in the diary. It forms a most valuable topographical document. P.]

Ver. 10. [The plain at the mouth of Wady Taiyibeh must be the place of the encampment by the sea. It is a wild lonely spot. The sublime scenery of the Sinai mountains here first bursts upon their view: the glittering granite peaks, the gorgeous colouring of the nearer cliffs, the deep blue sea, and away far beyond it the pale outline of the African coast. P.]

Ver. 13. [The sites of Dophkah and Alush are unknown. The route from the Wilderness of Sin to Rephidim was in all probability up Wady Feiran, which affords a tolerably easy and wide approach from the coast-plain of Sin to Sinai. In it is the copious fountain of Feiran; and it ought to be noted that between Sin and Rephidim there was no complaint of want of water. Perhaps Feiran may be identical with Dophkah or Alush. P.]

Ver. 36. [The Israelites were twice at Kadesh; once on the second, and once on the fortieth year of their journey, Nu. 12. 16; 13. 2, 26, 33; 20. 1. In this chapter the first visit is not noticed. In the extended narrative in Nu. x.-xii. there are only two stations mentioned between Sinai and Kadesh; here no less than seventeen are enumerated. The question arises, Were all these visited during the first journey to Kadesh? or do any of them belong to the second? The former

x The whole is mere conjecture, and therefore void of authority.

y It is wiser and better to acknowledge ignorance of such details, and to rest in the great historical fact which nothing can deny, that the Israelites were now entered upon those 'wanderings' to which they were condemned because they 'tempted the Lord; and on account of which he sware in his wrath they should not enter into his rest.—C.

It was situated about 60 miles nearly south of Sinai. But though its place is known by means of the peculiar rocks from which its name was derived, signifying the backbone of a man, as well as by historic record, yet its very ruins have disappeared. Like other encampments of the Israelites it retains a name—more distinguished than some, it has a local habitation—but like Israel it has fallen, by sin, under the displeasure of Jehovah, and has been swept of all its commerce and riches by the best of all righteous destruction.—C.

ag All the stations from Kadesh to Arboth-Moab are not given here. Others at which the people encamped on their route southward to Ezion-gaber are mentioned in De. 10. 6, 7.

ah Immediately after leaving Kadesh they crossed the Arabah to the foot of Mount Hor, where Aaron died. After thirty days' mourning they set out on their long but final journey.

ai The rate of travel must have been very slow, and they must have lingered at places, and zigzagged through the desert in search of water and pasture.

aj Passing down the Arabah once more, they turned eastward at Ezion-gaber, which stood at the northern extremity of the Gulf of Akabah. They swept round the southern and eastern borders of Edom, and passed through a desert wild and waterless. At length the territory of the Edomites was passed, and the people encamped at 'Ije-Abarim' (the mounds of Abarim), in the border of Moab. Two more stages brought them to the banks of the Arnon, on crossing which they entered the land of the Amorites. The wilderness was now left behind, but the wanderings had not yet drawn to a close. Their eyes and hearts were fixed upon Canaan—the country we call the Jordan. They wished to enter it by the shortest and easiest road. They consequently asked of Sihon a passage through his borders. It was refused. A new struggle was made, the whole country east of the Jordan was conquered, and two tribes settled there.—P.

al Whether this enumeration contains the entire, or only the principal movements and encampments, is unknown. Analogy would lead us to conclude that it records not the various daily marchings, but merely the departures and encampments. Moses does indeed give a brief epitome of the history of the Jews; but history is not his object. Providence and redemption are his object, and history is the means by which his grand object is attained.—C.

50 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses in the plains of Moab, by Jordan near Jericho, saying,

51 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye are passed over Jordan into the land of Canaan;

52 Then ye shall drive out all the inhabitants of the land from before you, and destroy all their pictures,<sup>9</sup> and destroy all their molten images, and quite pluck down all their high places.

53 And ye shall dispossess the inhabitants of the land, and dwell therein: for I have given you the land to possess it.

appears more probable. In giving the summary contained in this chapter Moses would scarcely have omitted the first visit to Kadesh, had he been enumerating the stations as well after as before that visit. It is more natural to suppose that he gives a full list of the places of encampment between Sinai and Kadesh; and then, omitting all notice of the thirty-eight years' wandering as not properly pertaining to the journey to Canaan, he takes up the narrative again at the close of the second visit. This theory, however, is not free from difficulties. According to ver. 36 the people marched direct from Ezion-gaber to Kadesh; and the stations from Moseroth to Jotbathah were passed in succession before reaching Ezion-gaber. But these stations are identical with those mentioned in De. 10. 6, 7, where they afterwards encamped when going from Kadesh to Ezion-gaber, comp. Nu. 21. 4; De. 2. 8; they consequently lay between these places, and in the Arabah. The Israelites must therefore have traversed the Arabah several times. The most direct line of route was rarely, if ever, followed. The people appear to have directed their course right and left, back and forward, passing and repassing the same spots, in obedience to their divine guide. Two points alone are fixed between Sinai and Kadesh; these are Hazeroth and Ezion-gaber. The latter they must have approached from the north; and after encamping there, they turned back again northward. In going from Hazeroth they probably went down Wady el-Ain and Wetry to the shore of the gulf; then along the shore past Ezion-gaber, and up the Arabah; then back down the Arabah to Ezion-gaber, and finally up it to Kadesh. MONASTERY NEAR BETHSAIDA—WHERE CHRIST PERFORMED MANY OF HIS WONDERFUL WORKS. [Numbers, xxxiv:11.]—"And the border shall descend and shall reach unto the side of the sea of Chinnereth eastward." We give this view of the monastery near Bethsaida, because it stands upon the side of the sea of Chinnereth, now called the Sea of Galilee. This monastery is near the city of Bethsaida, one of the towns in which Christ performed so many of his wonderful works and one of the towns upon which he pronounced a woe. We are looking here toward the east. We see the upper Gadarene country there beyond the Sea of Galilee, and the gradual falling of the country as it slopes toward the sea on the north. Tourists stop here and find good accommodations in this monastery. According to prophecy, it really has been more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon than for this place.

x Mediterranean or Great Sea. ver. 6. 7. 7.

y The land here described to Moses is much smaller than that originally given in covenant promise to Abraham, see Ge. 15. 18. The southern border began at the southern end of the Dead Sea; it ran due south, up the great valley of Arabah, past the ascent of Akkrabbim (a line of cliffs across the valley) to Kadash; thence it turned westward across the wilderness of wandering to the torrent (not the river, as in Ge. 15. 18) of Egypt, i.e. Wady el Arish.—P.

ad The eastern border has several well-known landmarks:—Riblah on the Orontes; Ain, the great fountain of the Orontes, a few miles west of Riblah; the Sea of Chinnereth, or Galilee; the Salt or Dead Sea. The eastern border, therefore, beginning at Kuryetein, was drawn west by south across the plain to Riblah, excluding the territory of Damascus. Thence it turned due south, down the valleys of Coele-Syria and the upper Jordan to the Sea of Galilee; and then followed the Jordan to the Dead Sea. The whole country east of the Jordan was thus excluded from the land.—P.

border unto the entrance of Hamath; and the goings forth of the border shall be to Zedad.

9 And the border shall go on to Ziphron, and the goings out of it shall be at Hazar-enan: this shall be your north border.

10 And ye shall point out your east border from Hazar-enan to Shepham.

11 And the coast shall go down from Shepham to Riblah, on the east side of Ain; and the border shall descend, and shall reach unto the side<sup>6</sup> of the sea of Chinnereth<sup>7</sup> eastward.

12 And the border shall go down to Jordan, and the goings out of it shall be at the salt sea: this shall be your land,<sup>8</sup> with the coasts thereof round about.<sup>9</sup>

13 And Moses commanded the children of Israel, saying, This is the land which ye shall inherit by lot, which the LORD commanded to give unto the nine tribes, and to the half-tribe:

14 For the tribe of the children of Reuben, according to the house of their fathers, and the tribe of the children of Gad, according to the house of their fathers, have received their inheritance, and half the tribe of Manasseh have received their inheritance:

15 The two tribes and the half-tribe have received their inheritance on this side Jordan near Jericho eastward, toward the sun-rising.

16 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 17 These are the names of the men which shall divide the land unto you; Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun.

18 And ye shall take one prince of every tribe, to divide the land by inheritance.

19 And the names of the men are these: Of the tribe of Judah, Caleb the son of Jephunneh.

20 And of the tribe of the children of Simeon, Shemuel the son of Ammihud.

21 Of the tribe of Benjamin, Elidad the son of Chislon.

REFLECTIONS.—It is useful to remember and record God's providences, for the after direction or comfort of ourselves and others in future trials and temptations; for this world is but a waste howling wilderness, and the condition of churches and saints therein always changing and unsettled.—But the believing recollection of God's dispensations will enable us cheerfully to pass on, while we discover how he preserves his people in all, and sets their mercies and judgments the one over against the other,—guides them with his counsel while here, and afterwards brings them to glory! But dangerous and infectious is intimacy with wicked men, and with the unfruitful works of darkness! Carefully then ought professors of the true religion to avoid it, and to remove out of the way whatever might occasion temptation or stumbling.

CHAPTER XXXIV. [Ver. 3. The map commences at the south, because that was the quarter with which the Hebrews were best acquainted, as lying next Egypt. South quarter, that is, south extremity eastward, before the line turns northwards.—Coast of the Salt Sea, that is, point of the Dead Sea, called salt, because it is saltier than other seas. So great is the quantity of salt in solution in its water, that bodies float in it that sink in any other water. By Salt Sea eastward, some geographers understand Ezion-gaber, on the Red Sea, and draw the southern line thence to the eastern or Pelusiac branch of the Nile; but ver. 12 seems to fix the name Salt Sea to the Dead Sea, into which Jordan empties itself. C.]

Ver. 4. [A trifling and well-authorized change in the translation by Boothroyd completely reconciles this description with the geographical features of the country, and with history. 'Your south border shall wind to the ascent of Akkrabbim, and pass on to Zin, and thence extending to the south of Kadash-barnea, and from Azmon the boundary shall wind about to the river of Egypt.' C.]

Ver. 9. [The Mediterranean was the western border. On the north the border commencing at the sea ran towards Hor ha-Hor, 'the great mountain,' i.e. the culminating point of Mount Lebanon on the north, where it attains an elevation of nearly 10,000 feet. From thence the line was drawn towards Zedad, now called Sudud, on the great plain due east of the extremity of Lebanon. But before reaching Sudud it bent north to Ziphron, a town near Hamath; and then struck south-east to Hazar-enan ('the town of the fountains'), now called Kuryetein. P.]

Ver. 17. [This was a narrow territory when considered as a gift from God. But its very narrowness marks his wisdom as well as his goodness. God intends to make his people his witnesses to the world, and their narrow territory forces them to do their duty abroad; while their religious institutions are ever recalling them home. Besides, it is a gross mistake that the greatness of a nation depends upon its extent of territory. The most distinguished nations, both in ancient and modern times, have been cooped up in narrow territorial limits. And be it remembered, the great drama of providence, in which Israel still acts so conspicuous a part, is not yet closed. He was a Jew, according to the flesh, who will yet claim 'the heathen for his inheritance, and the utmost ends of the earth for a possession.' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is necessary to bring our mind to our lot, since God sets the bounds to it: and, though a small portion of this world may be allotted to the people of God, yet is that small portion fertile and well protected. How instructive the boundaries of this promised land! the memorial of Heaven's justice on Sodom at the south-east; the memorial of Egyptian bondage on the south-west; the wilderness of their wandering on the south; the goodly mountain Lebanon on the north; the great sea, that emblem of eternity, on the west; and Jordan, that river of God, on the east. Thus are we surrounded with mementoes of our state. But, in all, infallible is the accomplishment of God's promises, whatever hard warfare and wearisome waiting may be necessary to precede it. Let me therefore, even now, raise up my weary spirit—Jesus, the Prince of all the tribes of ransomed men, shall quickly assign me my share in his celestial Canaan!

22 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Dan, Bukki the son of Jogli.

23 The prince of the children of Joseph, for the tribe of the children of Manasseh, Hanniel the son of Ephod.

24 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Ephraim, Kemuel the son of Shipthan.

25 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Zebulun, Elizaphan the son of Parnach.

26 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Issachar, Paltiel the son of Azzan.

27 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Asher, Ahihud the son of Shelomi.

28 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Naphtali, Pedahel the son of Ammihud.

29 These<sup>a</sup> are they whom the LORD commanded to divide the inheritance unto the children of Israel in the land of Canaan.<sup>1</sup>

AND the LORD spake unto Moses in the plains of Moab, by Jordan near Jericho, saying,

2 Command<sup>a</sup> the children of Israel, that they give unto the Levites, of the inheritance of their possession, cities to dwell in; and ye shall give also unto the Levites suburbs for the cities round about them.

3 And the cities shall they have to dwell in; and the suburbs of them shall be for their cattle, and for their goods, and for all their beasts.<sup>1</sup>

4 And<sup>b</sup> the suburbs of the cities, which ye shall give unto the Levites, shall reach from the wall of the city and outward a thousand cubits<sup>2</sup> round about.

5 And ye shall measure from without the city on the east side two thousand cubits,<sup>3</sup> and on the south side two thousand cubits, and on the west side two thousand cubits, and on the north side two thousand cubits; and the city shall be in the midst: this shall be to them the suburbs of the cities.

6 And 'among the cities which ye shall give unto the Levites there shall be six cities for refuge,<sup>4</sup> which ye shall appoint for the manslayer, that he may flee thither: and to them ye shall add<sup>5</sup> forty and two cities.

4 The cities of refuge among the Israelites were widely different from the asyls among the Greeks and Romans, as also from the privileged alms among the Roman Catholics. Those among the Hebrews were for the protection of such only as had slain a person involuntarily. They were necessary, because the old patriarchal law still remained in force, viz. that the nearest akin had a right to avenge the death of his relation by slaying the murderer; for the original law enacted, that whosoever shed man's blood by man should his blood be shed; and none was judged so proper to execute this law, as the man who was nearest akin to the deceased. As many rash executions of this law might take place, it was deemed necessary to qualify its claims, and prevent injustice: and the cities of refuge were judged proper for this purpose. — Clarke.

m The avenger of blood was the nearest kinsman of the person slain. The congregation before which the manslayer stood was the magistrates of the city of refuge, or of the city to which the slain man pertained.

n These cities were conveniently situated so as to be accessible to the various districts of the land, and we learn that the best provision was made for the manslayer's easy and safe fleeing thither. The roads that led to them were kept in good repair, so that he might not miss the way, posts were erected, where several roads happened to meet, bearing the inscription, 'city of refuge.' Do not these cities of refuge remind us of the salvation of the gospel of our Lord, the only refuge provided for perishing sinners to flee to 'from the wrath to come?' To them there seems to be allusion in He. 6. 17, 18-7.

CHAPTER XXXV. [Ver. 4. The Septuagint reads 'two thousand cubits' both in the 4th and 5th verses; but the Hebrew MSS. are decidedly in favour of the present reading: how then are these two accounts of measure to be reconciled? Thus—the measure of 1000 cubits, ver. 4, is from the wall: the measure of 2000 cubits, ver. 5, is not from the wall, but from the city itself: the first 1000 cubits constituting the suburbs of the wall, a part which in the neighbourhood of walled cities is often occupied by houses; the second 2000 cubits constituting what is called the field of the suburbs, Le. 25. 34, and appropriated to agriculture and cattle. The extent of the walls is not given, but the land thus measured would form a square of about three-quarters of a mile in every direction from the walls; a very small concession, when the cities thus appropriated were in all but 48, Jos. 21. 41, when it is remembered that the Levites are estimated at 46,000 males and females, Le. 26. 62, a number that must be greatly increased by the requisite servants. Still more distinct will this moderation appear, when it is remembered that the Levites never had exclusive possession of these cities, but held them in common with the tribes amongst whom they resided; and what superiority in the possession of the whole city and district the secular tribes conceded to the Levites, beyond their individual occupancy, does not appear: compare Jos. 21. 17 with Ju. 19. 15, 16; and Jos. 21. 13 with 2 Sa. 5. 5.—Note. Amongst the incidental evidences of the divine mission of Moses must be reckoned, (1) This extreme moderation in providing for his own tribe. (2) The ready acquiescence of the Levites to be literally disinherited, and allowed little more than a lodging-place, where their brethren were so richly endowed: had either been impostors, they must have acted on worldly motives; and worldly motives have never yet produced self-denial, when there was power and opportunity to attain to self-aggrandizement. Let us be sure that to practise the self-denial of Christ is always our best argument for Christ, Phi. 2. 6. C.]

Ver. 11. [According to the Jewish law, the kinsman of any one who was killed had a legal right, and held it an imperative duty, to avenge the death by slaying the aggressor. The appointment, therefore, of these cities was an institution of great wisdom and mercy; while it afforded an expressive and eminent type of Christ as the refuge of sinners. (1) The slayer flees, ver. 11, because the avenger follows: so the sinner has fled to Jesus, He. 6. 18. (2) They protect till the judgment sits: so must all appear at the judgment-seat of Christ, 2 Co. 5. 10, when believers obtain a public

CAMELS FEEDING AT NAZARETH—ON THE HILLS OVER WHICH CHRIST WALKED. [Numbers, xxxv:9-34.]—We give here a picture taken from a scene in Nazareth, the city of our Savior, to illustrate the cities of refuge referred to in the thirty-fifth chapter of Numbers. The cities of refuge may hardly be considered a type, but they constitute an illustration of Christ as the sinner's refuge. The cities of refuge were near every portion of the land, and Christ as the Son of God is near us all. Within the cities of refuge there was no condemnation, and so there is no safety for sinners except in Christ. To leave the city of refuge was to meet destruction, so we cannot go away from Christ but at the peril of our hopes. These camels were being taken from Syria into Egypt.

that he die: he that smote him shall surely be put to death; for he is a murderer: the revenger of blood shall slay the murderer when he meeteth him.

22 But if he thrust him suddenly without emmity, or have cast upon him any thing without laying of wait;

23 Or with any stone, wherewith a man may die, seeing him not, and cast it upon him, that he die, and was not his enemy, neither sought his harm;

24 Then the congregation shall judge between the slayer and the revenger of blood, according to these judgments:

25 And the congregation shall deliver the slayer out of the hand of the revenger of blood, and the congregation shall restore him to the city of his refuge, whither he was fled: and he shall abide in it unto the death of the high priest,<sup>3</sup> which was anointed with the holy oil.

26 But if the slayer shall at any time come without the border of the city of his refuge, whither he was fled;

27 And the revenger of blood find him without the borders of the city of his refuge, and the revenger of blood kill the slayer; he shall not be guilty of blood.<sup>4</sup>

28 Because he should have remained in the city of his refuge until the death of the high priest: but after the death of the high priest the slayer shall return into the land of his possession.

29 So these things shall be for a statute of judgment unto you, throughout your generations, in all your dwellings.

30 Whoso killeth any person, the murderer shall be put to death by the mouth of witnesses: but one witness shall not testify against any person to cause him to die.<sup>5</sup>

31 Moreover, ye shall take no satisfaction<sup>6</sup> for the life of a murderer, which is guilty of death;<sup>7</sup> but he shall be surely put to death.

32 And ye shall take no satisfaction for him

3 Maimonides views this in the light of a prudent charity to the man-slayer, and to the relations of him that was slain, since by this means the man-slayer was kept out of the sight of the avenger of blood, who might have been tempted some time or other to slay him, if he had come in his way; but by long absence his anger might be mitigated, at least by the death of the high-priest, the most excellent of all persons, and most dear to any one in the nation, which made the public grief when he died so great that men forgot their private resentments.—l.

The design of this law was to keep the tribes distinct, and hereby to fulfil the prophecies, particularly those respecting the Messiah. As this law affected only heiresses, there are numerous instances of women marrying out of their own tribes. And by reason of such marriages, as Ainsworth remarks, there might be kindred between Elizabeth the mother of John the Baptist, who was of the daughters of Aaron, and Mary the Virgin, the mother of our Lord, who was of the lineage of David and tribe of Judah.—l.

1 The inconvenience of the inheritance of daughters 5 is remedied by marrying in their own tribes, 7 test the inheritance should be removed from the tribe. 10 The daughters of Zelophehad marry their father's brothers' sons.

2 And they said, The LORD commanded my lord to give the land for an inheritance by lot to the children of Israel: and my lord was commanded by the LORD to give the inheritance of Zelophehad our brother unto his daughters.

3 And if they be married to any of the sons of the other tribes of the children of Israel, then shall their inheritance be taken<sup>1</sup> from the inheritance of our fathers, and shall be put to the inheritance of the tribe whereunto they are received:<sup>2</sup> so shall it be taken from the lot of our inheritance.

4 And when the jubilee<sup>3</sup> of the children of Israel shall be, then shall their inheritance be put unto the inheritance of the tribe whereunto they are received: so shall their inheritance be taken away from the inheritance of the tribe of our fathers.

5 ¶ And Moses commanded the children of Israel, according to the word of the LORD, saying, The tribe of the sons of Joseph hath said well.

acquittal through his grace, Mat. 25. 34, 40. (3) There were cities of refuge on both sides of Jordan, so the sinner finds Christ a refuge on earth, as he will find him his glory in heaven, Jn. 14. 1-3. (4) These cities were not only for Israel, but for the stranger and sojourner: so is Christ a refuge for Jew and Gentile, Ro. 2. 10, and all who follow him count themselves strangers and pilgrims on the earth, He. 11. 13. (5) These cities refused protection to the murderer; so Christ refuses salvation to the unbelieving and impenitent, the unregenerate and unsanctified, Mat. 25. 41, 46. (6) The congregation on being the legally constituted judges, were the administrators of this refuge and deliverance, ver. 25; so the church is appointed to afford instruction and comfort by the ordinances, and deliver penitent sinners, by a merciful discipline, from the snare of the devil, Ga. 6. 1. (7) The guilty who have fled for refuge must abide in the city till the death of the high-priest, ver. 25; so must the sinner abide in Christ, Jn. 15. 4, 6, 7, constantly bearing about in his body the dying of the Lord Jesus, 2 Co. 4. 10. (8) At the death of the high-priest the guilty returns to his possession, ver. 28; so by faith in the death and resurrection of Christ, as delivered for our offences, and raised for our justification, Ro. 4. 25, we enter into possession of the earnest of the Spirit, 2 Co. 5. 5, and abide in faith, waiting for the adoption, the redemption of the body, Ro. 8. 23. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—What care God takes to arrange his ministers in the church and world as best promotes the edification of his people! Often, for that purpose, as in the case of the Levites, he turns a curse into a blessing. At the same time it is his will that his ministers should be suitably provided for, that they may not be embarrassed with carnal care or labour: and to provide for a gospel minister ought to be the great care of every people. Such as minister to us in spiritual things have a right to reap our carnal things; and such as are engaged in gospel administrations should, as far as possible, disengage themselves from every worldly care. Never, therefore, should we receive worldly portions without devoting a part of them to the Lord or the benefit of his church. How heinous is the guilt of hating and murdering our neighbours! And it is presumptuously wicked for such as are in power to permit wilful murder to pass without the due punishment of death. But if men sinfully indulge their escape, God's sword will in due time reach them. Yet, on the contrary, care ought to be taken that none be punished but upon sufficient examination and full proof; and that none be punished with death for anything done contrary to his intention. But what a lively type of Jesus are these cities of refuge! What murder of God—of Christ—of our souls—of our neighbour—of time—of ordinances—of mercies and judgments—we commit ignorantly and in unbelief! and if death overtake us loitering in our sins, we must perish in them! But Jesus, in his person, covenant, blood, power, and grace, is a safe and comfortable refuge set before us in the gospel. He is everywhere near to flee to; and the way to him is plain and clear. Strangers, Gentiles as well as Jews, have equal access to him. Him that cometh to him he will in no wise cast out; and in him we must abide for ever, that we may be safe. But how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation!—if we sin wilfully after we have received the knowledge of the truth!—if we tread under foot the Son of God—count the blood of the covenant an unholy thing, and do despite unto the Spirit of grace!

<sup>9</sup> This law is here made general, although the Talmudists are of opinion that it was designed only for that generation, and that after the first division of the land by Joshua, even heiresses might marry into any tribe. The restriction in the case of heiresses was recognized by the Attic laws. They ordained that an heiress should not marry out of her kindred, but dispose of herself and her estate to one of the nearest of kin to her. Plato made the same provision, suggesting that if there was a want of near kindred, it should descend to her father's brother, or the children of the grandfather, some of whom he ordains should marry her.—J.

prudent to foresee difficulties, that we may avoid them: and in laws, covenants, and other affairs, to have every point so fixed that no disorder or dispute may arise in after-times. But let us remember that it is most profitable to acknowledge the Lord in all our ways; for often he defers his directions till men perceive the necessity of them: and a ready obedience to his command and will, when known, yea, even to those of our superiors, is necessary and becoming. But, whatever power parents have in the marriage of children, none ought to be forced into marriage connections contrary to their inclination.

THE FIFTH BOOK OF MOSES, CALLED DEUTERONOMY.

This book is so called because it contains a repetition of many laws formerly delivered. It records the history of Israel during one month before Moses' death, and another after it. Here we have scarcely any new history but what relates to Moses' renewal of the covenant between God and Israel, his charge to Joshua, and his death. Never, except in ch. 31. 14-21, and 34. 4, is God exhibited as speaking to Moses or the Israelites as in the three preceding books. But Moses, just going to leave them by death, in the most affecting manner rehearses to them what God had done for them; and the laws which he had given them, with several explications and additions. This rehearsal was extremely necessary and kind. (1) Many of the laws in respect of their matter, and all of them in respect of their Author and intent, were very important and worthy to be again and again inculcated. (2) The weakness of the Israelites made it necessary that the laws which immediately concerned them should be represented separately from those which concerned the priests and Levites. (3) The persons to whom these laws had been originally published were now almost all dead, and a new generation was grown up, to whom God would have his laws repeated by Moses himself, that, if possible, it might make a lasting impression upon them. (4) They were just going to take possession of Canaan; it was therefore proper that they should be expressly admonished of the conditions upon which they were to hold it. In this, his last speech and dying words, (1) Moses gives a summary rehearsal of what events had happened to them in the wilderness, ch. i. ii. iii.; 9. 7-29; 10. 1-7. (2) He rehearses the moral laws which had been given from Mount Sinai; and, by a variety of motives, drawn from the kindness of God towards them, and from the danger of disobedience, charges and calls upon them to obey them, iv.-xi. (3) With a mixture of moral institutes he inculcates manifold ceremonial and judicial observances: some of which, as of extirpating false prophets and idolatrous cities; making battlements round the roofs of houses; expiating uncertain murder; taking down hanged malefactors in the evening; punishing of rebellious children; distinguishing apparel of the sexes; marriage of captive women and wives of deceased brethren; of divorcing of wives and trial of virginity; of runaway servants, &c., had not before been plainly established, xii.-xxvi. (4) To enforce obedience to these laws, he charges them to surrender themselves solemnly to God at Ebal and Gerizzim as his dutiful servants, who regarded his blessings, and stood in awe of his curses. He solemnly announces the blessings annexed to their obedience, and denounces the curses which would befall them if disobedient, xxvii.-xxxi. (5) After encouraging Joshua his successor, and leaving a song for the people, warning them of their future sins, miseries, and deliverances, and a testamentary benediction for their encouragement, he views the promised land from Mount Pisgah, where he dies, and is buried by God, and lamented by the Israelites, xxxi.-xxxiv.

thorities are for transposing this verse between 19 and 20, and that position would certainly seem the most natural.

Still it is dangerous to attempt such violent dislocations, when unauthorized by MSS. Were the geography of the journey better known, it is more probable the location of the verse would appear both natural

TOWER OF CASTLE—NEAR WHERE THE TRANSFIGURATION TOOK PLACE. [DEUT., 1:7.]—Reference is made in this verse to Lebanon, and we give a picture of the great Subeibeh Castle, which stands about three miles above Cæsarea Philippi, at the foot of Mount Hermon, which belongs to the general Lebanon range. The top of this castle is 2,300 feet above the Mediterranean Sea and 1,000 feet above the town of Cæsarea Philippi. This is, perhaps, one of the largest castles in the world, and certainly the most massive fortification in all Syria. It is capable of accommodating a whole army, and stands here by the roadside overlooking the boundary between Syria and Palestine. Standing on the top of the tower, we are in sight of Dan, which is just below us, and which marked the northern limit of the Holy Land. This castle is in a state of remarkable preservation, which is probably owing to the quality of the stone, which is very compact and hard as adamant.

Israel,<sup>3</sup> according unto all that the LORD had given him in commandment unto them;

4 After<sup>4</sup> he had slain Sihon the king of the Amorites, which dwelt in Heshbon, and Og the king of Bashan, which dwelt at Astaroth in Edrei:

5 On<sup>5</sup> this side Jordan,<sup>6</sup> in the land of Moab, began Moses to declare<sup>5</sup> this law, saying,

6 ¶ The LORD our God spake unto us in Horeb, saying, Ye have dwelt<sup>7</sup> long enough in this mount:

7 Turn you, and take your journey, and<sup>8</sup> go to the mount of the Amorites, and unto all the places nigh thereunto,<sup>6</sup> in the plain, in the hills, and in the vale, and in the south, and by the sea side, to the land of the Canaanites, and unto Lebanon, unto the great river, the river Euphrates.

8 Behold, I have set<sup>7</sup> the land before you: go in and possess the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to give unto them, and to their seed after them.

9 ¶ And I spake unto you<sup>8</sup> at that time, saying,<sup>1</sup> I am not able to bear you myself alone:

10 The LORD your God hath multiplied you, and, behold, ye are this day as the stars of heaven for multitude.

11 (The LORD God of your fathers make you a thousand times so many more as ye are, and bless you, as he hath promised you!)

12 How can I myself alone bear your cumbrance, and your burden, and your strife?

13 Take<sup>9</sup> you wise men, and understanding, and known among your tribes, and I will make them rulers over you.

14 And ye answered me, and said, The thing which thou hast spoken is good for us to do.

15 So I took the chief of your tribes, wise men, and known, and made<sup>1</sup> them heads over you, captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, and captains over fifties, and captains over tens, and officers among your tribes.

16 And I charged your judges at that time, and necessary. As the verse stands, it can be easily understood by throwing out the words spoke, and instead of reading it as a parenthesis, understanding it as a commentary upon the history which terminated in the exclusion of Moses himself and the last generation from Canaan, see ver. 34, 35, 37, and demonstrating upon how brief a period the most important events may depend.

brought us forth out of the land of Egypt, to deliver us into the hand of the Amorites, to destroy us.

28 Whither shall we go up? our brethren have discouraged<sup>7</sup> our heart, saying, 'The people is greater and taller than we; the cities are great, and walled up to<sup>8</sup> heaven; and, moreover, we have seen the sons of the Anakims there.

29 Then I said unto you, 'Dread not, neither be afraid of them.

30 The LORD your God, 'which goeth before you, he shall fight for you, 'according to all that he did for you in Egypt before your eyes;

31 And 'in the wilderness, where thou hast seen how that the LORD thy God bare thee, as a man doth bear his son, in all the way that ye went, until ye came into this place.

32 Yet in this thing 'ye did not believe the LORD your God, 33 Who<sup>k</sup> went in the way before you, to search you out a place to pitch your tents in, in fire by night, to show you by what way ye should go, and in a cloud by day.

34 ¶ And the LORD heard the voice of your words, and was wroth, and sware, saying,

35 Surely<sup>1</sup> there shall not one of these men of this evil generation see that good land, which I swear to give unto your fathers,

36 Save Caleb the son of Jephunneh; he shall see it, and to him will I give <sup>m</sup>the land that he hath trodden upon, and to his children, because he hath wholly followed the LORD.<sup>9</sup>

37 Also<sup>n</sup> the LORD was angry with me for your sakes, saying, Thou also shalt not go in thither.

38 But Joshua the son of Nun, which 'standeth before thee, he shall go in thither: encourage him; for he shall cause Israel to inherit it.

39 Moreover, <sup>r</sup>your little ones, which ye said should be a prey, and your children, which in that day had no knowledge between good and

8 Passion and impatience always exaggerate—so we may easily account for this extravagant statement. C.—That is, with very high walls, which could not be easily scaled. High walls around houses, &c., in these parts of Arabia, are still deemed a sufficient defence against the Arabs, who scarcely ever attempt anything in the way of plunder except on horseback. The monastery on Mount Sinai is surrounded with very high walls without any gate; in the upper part of the wall, thirty-two feet from the ground, there is a sort of window or opening from which a basket, sometimes a rope with a loop at the end, is suspended by a pulley, by which both persons and goods are received into and sent from the place.—J.

8 Creatures, each of which might be crushed beneath the finger of a child, and yet by their courage, fierceness, activity, and numbers, they either put their strongest assailants to flight, or destroy them by their stings. In well-inhabited and cultivated countries, where deer are comparatively few, the force of the comparison will not be easily perceived. Yet even in the most improved districts they have been known to destroy dogs and horses. Pliny states, that from some districts of Crete they actually expelled the inhabitants, and Ælian declares that some parts of Scythia north of the Danube were so infested with bees as to be inaccessible to fight. In his Travels in Africa records an instance in which not only himself and his party were put to flight by them, but several beasts of their caravan actually stung to death. It is possible also there may be more in the comparison than meets the eye; for though we may not on a few examples affirm it for a general or universal rule, yet more than once have we seen it tried and verified, that he who has the coolness or courage to stand immovably still, allow the exasperated bee to alight upon him, will remain untouched and unharmed, while those who run away are the object of their deadly hostility. May not the text, therefore, remind a people well accustomed to the dispositions of bees, that had the Israelites stood still the very show of courage would have secured their enemies?—C.

evil, they shall go in thither, and unto them will I give it, and they shall possess it.

40 But as for you, 'turn you, and take your journey into the wilderness, by the way of the Red sea.

41 Then ye answered and said unto me, 'We have sinned against the LORD, we will go up and fight, according to all that the LORD our God commanded us. And when ye had girded on every man his weapons of war, ye were ready to go up into the hill.

42 And the LORD said unto me, Say unto them, 'Go not up, neither fight; for I am not among you; lest ye be smitten before your enemies.

43 So I spake unto you; and ye would not hear, but 'rebelled against the commandment of the LORD, and went presumptuously<sup>1</sup> up into the hill.

44 And the Amorites, which dwelt in that mountain, came out against you, and 'chased you, as bees do,<sup>2</sup> and destroyed you in Seir, even unto Hormah.

45 And ye 'returned and wept before the LORD; but the LORD would not hearken to your voice, nor give ear unto you.

46 So ye 'abode in Kadesh many days, according unto the days that ye abode there.

CHAPTER II.

1 The story is continued, that they were not to meddle with the Edomites, 9 nor with the Moabites, 16 nor with the Ammonites: but Sihon the Amorite was given up to be subdued by them.

THEN we 'turned, and took our journey into the wilderness by the way of the Red sea, as the LORD spake unto me; and we 'compassed mount Seir<sup>1</sup> many days.

2 And the LORD spake unto me, saying,

3 Ye have compassed this mountain 'long enough: turn you northward.

4 And command thou the people, saying, 'Ye are to pass through the coast of your brethren the children of Esau, which dwell in appointed while Jethro was still at Sinai, Ex. 18. 27, but the seventy after Jethro was gone, and Hobab his son remained, Nu. 10. 29, and after the camp had moved from Sinai, Nu. 10. 12. Between the accounts of the appointment of the rulers of thousands, &c., in Exodus and Deuteronomy there is evident difference, but no contradiction. Jethro suggests referring the decision to God, Ex. 18. 23; God directs, and Moses submits the matter to the people's approval, and the rulers to their free election. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—It much becomes aged ministers, from time to time, to remind their people of the principal occurrences of Providence towards them, and of their carriage towards God under them: and the nearer their end, the more serious and diligent ought they to be in this work. In repeated views of the providences and oracles of God, some new and affecting circumstances will readily present themselves, to which we had not formerly adverted, and call forth new expressions of gratitude and praise: and it is beautiful when all the kindness of God is enjoyed, as founded on his spiritual promises. What a mercy is it to a nation when they have judges able, patient, pious, and impartial! But heinous is the guilt when, notwithstanding God's gracious promises and kind providences, we wickedly rebel against him; when, discrediting God's promise and care, we obstinately lean to our own understanding; and when we readily credit everything said in opposition to God's record, and disregard every encouragement to believe it! And men's wilfulness frequently manifests itself in such diversified contradictions to God's will! The most eminent saints share along with the wicked in their temporal miseries. And often they are forced to weep for their sufferings who would not weep for their sins. But, alas! to no purpose is weeping when the door of mercy is once shut. It is but the sorrow of the world, which worketh death.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 1. 'We went round Mount Seir during many days.' This was literally true. Commencing their journey at Kadesh on the west, they travelled along the western side of the mountain range of Seir or Edom to Ezion-gaber; then they turned and passed close to its southern border; then they turned again and traversed the wilderness of Arabia, close to the eastern border; and they finally entered and marched across Moab on its northern border. P.]

Ver. 23. [This is a most important ethnological note. It proves that the aborigines of Palestine, both east and west of the Jordan, were of one stock, and were of gigantic stature. The different names by which they were called—Rephaim, Emim, Horim, Anakim, Zamzummim, and Avim—were either descriptive epithets, or the inventions of different races of men. The Caphtorim were better known as Philistines. Caphtor was probably a province of Egypt. P.]

Ver. 26. [Does not Moses, by his 'words of peace,' act disingenuously with Sihon, when he knew, if he believed his own record, that he was about to take possession of Sihon's kingdom? No; he acted in perfect sincerity. He required an act of courtesy, of kindness and reciprocal benefit. When churlishly refused, he did not commence hostilities; but when Sihon came to assail him, he assailed him, as an aggressor, and then took possession of the land which God had promised, and which God, as Creator and Lord, had a paramount right to bestow. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—What regard God bears to his faithful children; and what temporal favours he bestows, even on their wicked posterity, for their sake! But he hath appointed times for exercising his people's faith, and permitting his enemies' prosperity. He plants and plucks up nations; keeps them in, or turns them down according as they do not obey him, and the race is not to the swift nor the battle to the strong. Thus the cursed offspring of Ham, after many ages, Seir,<sup>1</sup> and they shall be afraid of you: 'take ye good heed unto yourselves therefore.

5 Meddle<sup>2</sup> not with them; for I will not give you of their land, no, not so much as a footbreadth;<sup>3</sup> because I have given mount Seir unto Esau for a possession.

6 Ye shall buy meat of them for money, that ye may eat; and ye shall also buy water of them for money, that ye may drink.

7 For the LORD thy God hath blessed thee in all the works of thy hand: he knoweth thy walking through this great wilderness: these forty years the LORD thy God hath been with thee; thou hast lacked nothing.

8 And when we passed by from our brethren the children of Esau, which dwelt in Seir, through the way of the plain from Elath, and from Ezion-gaber, we turned and passed by the way of the wilderness of Moab.

9 And the LORD said unto me, 'Distress not the Moabites,<sup>3</sup> neither contend with them in battle: for I will not give thee of their land for a possession; because I have given Ar<sup>4</sup> unto the children of Lot for a possession.

10 The Emims dwelt therein in times past, a people great, and many, and tall as the Anakims;

11 Which also were accounted giants, as the Anakims; but the Moabites call them Emims.<sup>5</sup>

12 The Horims also dwelt in Seir before time; but the children of Esau succeeded them,<sup>6</sup> when they had destroyed them from before them, and dwelt in their stead; as Israel did unto the land of his possession, which the LORD gave unto them.

13 Now rise up, said I, and get you over the brook Zered: and we went over the brook Zered.

14 And the space in which we came from Kadesh-barnea,<sup>7</sup> until we were come over the brook Zered, was thirty and eight years;<sup>9</sup> until all the generation of the men of war were wasted out from among the host, as the LORD swore unto them.

15 For indeed the hand of the LORD was against them, to destroy them from among the host, until they were consumed.

1 'Mount Seir' is not to be taken as a single mountain around which the Israelites continuously moved. It is evidently the name of an extensive mountain range of about 70 miles from south to north, and about 50 from east to west. To 'compass,' in the language of Scripture, signifies either to go round or to be around a place. Jos. 6.4. Jn. 4.20. will furnish an example of each application. In the text it evidently applies to an encampment, of which the occasional movements were southwards towards the Red Sea. Of these movements Moses gives no special record. A melancholy but accurate emblem of human life, of which much is spent in laboriously doing nothing, that is, of thy being rescued from oblivion.—C.

11 The expulsion and succession of these now obscure people, of whom we possess but the name, conveys the same lesson with the rise and fall of the mightiest empires, whose names fill the pages of the most extended history. There is a lesson of mortality upon the gravestone of the unknown stranger, as intelligible to reason as the inscription on the departed friend. The one may awaken more emotion, but gives no louder warning, than the other. But as men read monumental inscriptions for curiosity or amusement, so do nations often study history. They see that others might and renowned have fallen; they have the causes in luxury or effeminacy; but seldom think, and if told, will not readily admit, that the forgetfulness of God are national calamities to be traced, and that, in submission to the Son lies the safety and stability of kingdoms. Ps. 9. 17. 2. 10. While Moses impresses this solemn lesson of instability upon the Israelites, he also encourages them by the example of weaker nations expelling or conquering the mightiest, even as sinners are encouraged to turn to the Lord, by the triumphs of grace in rescuing the chief of sinners from the snare of the devil, 2 Ti. 2. 26.—C.

16 ¶ So it came to pass, when all the men of war were consumed and dead from among the people,

17 That the LORD spake unto me, saying,

18 Thou art to pass over through Ar, the coast of Moab, this day.

19 And when thou comest nigh over against the children of Ammon, distress them not, nor meddle with them; for I will not give thee of the land of the children of Ammon any possession, because I have given it unto the children of Lot for a possession.

24 ¶ Rise ye up, take your journey, and pass over the river Arnon: behold, I have given into thine hand Sihon the Amorite, king of Heshbon, and his land; begin<sup>4</sup> to possess it, and contend with him in battle.

25 This day will I begin to put the dread of thee, and the fear of thee, upon the nations that are under the whole heaven, who shall hear report of thee, and shall tremble, and be in anguish because of thee.

26 ¶ And I sent messengers out of the wilderness of Kedemoth<sup>5</sup> unto Sihon king of Heshbon with words of peace, saying, perish under the patriarch's curse. But the people of God ought to be always generous, forgiving, and disinterested; neither injuring their enemies, nor unnecessarily burdensome to their friends. And the more vain and changeable the possessions of this world are, the more solicitous we ought to be to secure a kingdom which cannot be moved. When nations are ripe for ruin, God permits their proud lusts to plunge them headlong into it: and their barbarous refusals of common kindness issue in their own and their neighbours' destruction. Let me be always content with such things as I have; always tender of dispossessing others of what the Lord has given them. Let my portion be the Lord himself, from which neither hell nor earth can turn me out, or mar my enjoyment, while I live in the hopes of exchanging all my wanderings, fightings, and fears, for that city of God, that house eternal in the heavens.

CHAPTER III. [Ver. 5. Argob is, as its name implies, a wild and rocky province of Bashan—a great natural fortress in fact, with tortuous ravines and jagged cliffs, inaccessible except to those acquainted with its passes. It is about 22 miles long by 14 wide. It is a plain, but its surface is elevated above the surrounding country about 30 feet; and is entirely composed of a stratum of basalt, which appears to have been emitted from pores in the ground. It is surrounded by the great plain or table-land of Bashan, which is famed for its richness. The surface of Argob, and of a rugged district which extends many miles to the south-east, is thickly studded with ancient cities; and it is a remarkable fact that the massive walls and houses in many of them remain standing; the streets, though long silent and deserted, are in some places complete as those of a modern town. The city gates and the doors and roofs of the houses are all of stone, and bear marks of the most remote antiquity. These are doubtless those 'threescore cities, . . . fenced with high walls, gates, and bars,' of which Moses here speaks. P.]

Ver. 11. [Rabbath of the children of Ammon. This statement has been employed by objectors as evidence that this book was not written by Moses; while it is charged with an extravagance that is alleged to render the narrative incredible. For neither allegation is there the least ground: (1) Metallic bedsteads have been common in all ages, and are so till this day: in warm countries they would be a real luxury, as preservatives from the annoyance of vermin. (2) That Moses should record the fact for posterity, though well known to his contemporaries, is a matter exemplified in the historical occurrences of every day; and as comparatively few of the Israelites could have actually seen it, to the rest it was therefore a most interesting description. (3) But as Rabbath was not yet taken,

ANCIENT WALL OF ACROPOLIS—ONE OF THE OLDEST RELICS IN ATHENS. [DEUT., ii: 1-23.]—In the first part of the above chapter we have some account of international relationships. A careful study of the Old Testament Scriptures reveals the truth that while the Hebrews were God's peculiar people they were not His only people. All peoples were His, and every nation contemporary with the Jews was raised up for some specific purpose. Greece was far away over the Mediterranean Sea from Palestine, but with a history contemporaneous with that of the Hebrews after their entrance into the promised land under Joshua. The heroic period of Greek history is said to date from B. C. 1400 to B. C. 1200. We give in the above picture an illustration of an ancient, rugged, and ragged relic of the old wall built on the northern side of the Acropolis in Athens. It is interesting thus to view from the standpoint of Jewish history 1400 B. C. a scene in Greece.

The Ammonites originally possessed the country extending from the Arnon on the south to Gilead on the north, and bounded on the west by the valley of the Jordan. But some time before the advance of the Israelites the warlike Amorites had driven them out from the western part of their territory, and they took refuge along the banks of the river Jabbok, and in the fastnesses on the eastern slopes of the mountains of Gilead. 10 All<sup>k</sup> the cities of the plain, and all Gilead, and all Bashan, unto Salchah and Edrei,<sup>2</sup> cities of the kingdom of Og in Bashan:

11 For only Og king of Bashan remained of the remnant of 'giants;<sup>3</sup> behold, his bedstead was a bedstead of iron: is it not in <sup>m</sup>Rabbath of the children of Ammon? nine cubits was the length thereof, and four cubits the breadth of it, after the cubit of a man.<sup>4</sup>

12 ¶ And<sup>n</sup> this land, which we possessed at that time from Aroer, which is by the river Arnon, and half mount Gilead, and the cities thereof, gave I unto the Reubenites, and to the Gadites.

13 And the rest of Gilead, and all Bashan, being the kingdom of Og, gave I unto the half tribe of Manasseh; all the region of Argob, with all Bashan, which was called the land of giants.

14 Jair<sup>o</sup> the son of Manasseh took all the country of Argob, unto the coasts of Geshur and Maachathi, and called them after his own name; Bashan-havoth-jair, unto this day.<sup>5</sup>

15 And<sup>p</sup> I gave Gilead unto Machir.

16 And<sup>q</sup> unto the Reubenites, and unto the Gadites, I gave from Gilead even unto the river Arnon, half the valley, and the border, how could Moses tell where the bedstead was? Without our referring to the constancy of divine revelation, does the objector seriously mean to insinuate that no man can tell where any article of curiosity is unless he has actually been in the place? No! this would be too much even for infidelity to assert. (4) But then what shall we say to the dimensions of the bedstead? 'the cubit of a man,' about eighteen inches, would give for the bedstead 13½ feet in length and 6 in breadth; and allowing the bedstead to be, according to common computation, one-third longer than the body, Og would be about 9 feet in height. (5) To escape from the apparent difficulties of the narrative, Boothroyd and others pronounce the passage an interpolation; but for the there appears no sufficient authority; nor does the gigantic size of the monarch present any insuperable difficulty; for, remembering the reverence paid by a semi-barbarous people to gigantic height and strength, and allowing that Og might take advantage of this feeling, and do as other unusually tall men have done, elevate himself a few inches on his sandals, and we find a height rarely indeed attained, but still at times actually exemplified in Europe. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Haughty sinners scorn to be warned by their neighbours' fall, and dare to provoke their own judgments, in which they perish. But, amidst the strongest enemies, all slavish fears are altogether groundless when we have the Lord on our side: he kindly proportions his encouragements to his people's fears, and the terrible appearances of 'their enemies. There is no might nor counsel against him. The race is not to the swift nor the battle to the strong. Created force is of little avail when God is the opposer. He can deal with giants as with grasshoppers.—It highly becomes those who by faith have entered into their spiritual rest, to look not on their own things, but every man also on the things of others; and to labour till their brethren, and especially Zion, enjoy rest along with them. Every experience of God's power and kindness ought to be improved as an antidote against slavish fears, and an encouragement to follow God in the hardest service; and every glimpse of God's glory quickens the desires after more abundant displays of it. Thankfulness for former mercies is an excellent mean to obtain what blessings we need: and

ENTRANCE TO TIBERIAS. [Deuteronomy, iii:17.]—"The plain also, and Jordan, and the coast thereof, from Chinnereth even unto the sea of the plain, even the salt sea, under Ashdodh-pisgah eastward." The Chinnereth referred to in the 17th verse of the third chapter of Deuteronomy is Lake Galilee which we see through this gate of entrance into the city of Tiberias. Herod Antipas was the founder of the city of Tiberias. Through him Roman luxury was introduced into the northern part of Palestine, which extends from the sea of Tiberias to the sources of the Jordan near Cæsarea Philippi. He surrounded the palace which he built in Tiberias with the dwellings for his court, with amphitheatres, bath houses, and temples. Josephus says that in order to make room for all his buildings he was under the necessity of removing several graves found upon the site of the city which he wished to build. There is a tradition that Christ refused to enter Tiberias because it was built upon the graves of the dead of his country.

17 The<sup>s</sup> plain also, and Jordan, and the coast thereof, from Chinnereth even unto the sea of the plain, even the salt sea, †under Ashdath-pisgah eastward.<sup>6</sup>

18 ¶ And† I commanded you at that time, saying, The LORD your God hath given you this land to possess it: ye shall pass over armed before your brethren the children of Israel, all that are meet for the war.<sup>7</sup>

19 But your wives, and your little ones, and your cattle, (for I know that ye have much cattle), shall abide in your cities which I have given you,

20 Until the LORD have given rest unto your brethren, as well as unto you, and until they also possess the land which the LORD your God hath given them beyond Jordan: and then shall ye †return every man unto his possession, which I have given you.

21 ¶ And† I commanded Joshua at that time, saying, Thine eyes have seen all that the LORD your God hath done unto these two kings: so shall the LORD do unto all the kingdoms whither thou passest.

22 Ye †shall not fear them: for the LORD your God he shall fight for you.

23 ¶ And I besought the LORD at that time, saying,

24 O Lord God, thou hast begun to show thy servant thy †'greatness, and thy mighty hand: for what God is there in heaven or in earth that can do according to thy works, and according to thy might?

25 I pray thee, let me go over and see †the good land that is beyond Jordan, that goodly mountain, and Lebanon.<sup>8</sup>

26 But the LORD †'was wroth with me for your sakes, and would not hear me: and the LORD said unto me, †'Let it suffice thee; speak no more unto me of this matter.

27 Get †'thee up unto the top of Pisgah,<sup>9</sup> and lift up thine eyes westward, and northward, and southward, and eastward, and behold it with thine eyes: for thou shalt not go over this Jordan.

28 But †'charge Joshua, and encourage him,

CHAPTER IV.

1 An exhortation to obedience. 41 Moses appointeth the three cities of refuge on the east side of Jordan.

NOW therefore †'hearken, O Israel, unto †'the statutes, and unto the judgments, which I teach you, for to do them, that ye may live, and go in and possess †'the land which the LORD God of your fathers giveth you.

2 Ye† shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the †'commandments of the LORD your God which I command you.

3 Your eyes have seen †'what the LORD did because of Baal-peor: for all the men that followed Baal-peor, the LORD thy God hath destroyed them from among you.

4 But ye that †'did cleave unto the LORD your God are alive every one of you this day.

5 Behold, I have taught you statutes and judgments, even as the LORD my God commanded me, that ye should do so in the land whither ye go to possess it.

6 Keep therefore and do them; for †'this is your wisdom and your understanding in the sight of the nations, which shall hear all these statutes, and say, Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people.

7 For what nation †'is there so great, who hath God so nigh<sup>2</sup> unto them, as the LORD our God is in all things that we call upon him for?<sup>3</sup>

8 And what nation †'is there so great, that hath statutes and judgments so righteous as all this law, which I set before you this day?

9 Only take heed to thyself, and †'keep thy soul diligently, lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life; but †'teach them thy sons, and thy sons' sons:

10 Specially the †'day that thou stoodest before the LORD thy God in Horeb, when the LORD said unto me, Gather me the people together, and I will make them hear my words, that they may learn to fear me all the days that contentment under disappointments is a good evidence that our prayers were not rejected, though we obtain not what we ask. One single slip in the conversation of a saint sometimes renders his most earnest supplications unsuccessful; for God makes his own faithful children the most distinguished examples of his righteous judgments. Often, for their own good, as well as for the good of others, he removes them by death in a considerate manner, when the continuance of their life seems to be most necessary; and yet readily he gratifies their innocent desires, as far as his own honour permits, whenever he finds them penitent. What a comfort is it for dying rulers, in church or state, to leave the flock of God in the hands of faithful successors! and it is pleasing to see aged saints on their death-beds encourage their younger brethren.

CHAPTER IV. [Ver. 8. I set before you this day.

The great evidence for the divine origin of the Bible is in the Bible itself, just as the great evidence for the being and perfections of God is in the works that he has made. 'The heavens declare the glory of God.' None but a God of power, and wisdom, and goodness, could frame a world so mightily, so wisely, and so excellently. And just so, none but God could reveal a law so excellent as that of Moses. It stands as much above all other laws, as the works of God in nature do above the works of men in art. The philosophers and legislators of the world, if met in one great conclave, could not if they would, and would not if they could, compose and promulgate the ten commandments. Were the stars extinguished, and did the sun alone remain in heaven, it would evince, in its solitary majesty, the divinity of its Creator; and were the Bible lost in another deluge, and did the ten commandments alone survive, they would manifest, even to the sinner whom they condemned, that they were the work of a God of infinite wisdom and holiness. C.]

Ver. 33. [Hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire. The tribes were numbered from twenty years old and upwards, Nu. 1. 3, and of these none now remained alive save Caleb and Joshua, Nu. 26. 64, 65; but multitudes were still alive who, at nineteen years of age and downwards, had been present at Sinai, and had heard 'the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire.' These now form a host of witnesses to the truth of the Mosaic narrative, to which no event in merely human history can furnish any parallel. Had their parents had the slightest ground of suspicion against the reality of the miracles of Sinai, or the slightest charge against the veracity of Moses, they shall live upon the earth, and that they may teach their children.

11 And ye <sup>came</sup> near, and stood under the mountain; and the mountain burned with fire unto the midst<sup>4</sup> of heaven, with darkness, clouds, and thick darkness.

12 And the LORD <sup>spoke</sup> unto you out of the midst of the fire: ye heard the voice of the words, <sup>but</sup> saw no similitude; only ye heard a voice.<sup>5</sup>

13 And he <sup>declared</sup> unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone.

14 And the LORD commanded me at that time to teach you <sup>statutes</sup> and judgments, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go over to possess it.

16 Lest ye <sup>corrupt</sup> yourselves, and make you a graven image, the similitude of any figure, the likeness of male or female,

17 The likeness of any beast that is on the earth, the likeness of any winged fowl that flieth in the air,

18 The likeness of anything that creepeth on the ground, the likeness of any fish that is in the waters beneath the earth:<sup>6</sup>

19 And lest <sup>thou</sup> lift up thine eyes unto heaven, and when thou seest the sun, and the moon, and the stars, even all the host of heaven, shouldest be driven to worship them, and serve them, which the LORD thy God hath divided<sup>7</sup> unto all nations under the whole heaven.<sup>8</sup>

20 But the LORD hath taken you, and brought you forth out of <sup>the</sup> iron furnace,<sup>9</sup> even out of Egypt, to be unto him a <sup>people</sup> of inheritance, as ye are this day.

21 Furthermore, the LORD <sup>was</sup> angry with me for your sakes, and sware that I should not go over Jordan, and that I should not go in unto that good land <sup>which</sup> the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance;

22 But <sup>I</sup> must die in this land, I must not go over Jordan: but ye shall go over, and possess that good land.

23 Take <sup>heed</sup> unto yourselves, lest ye forget the covenant of the LORD your God, which they would have trained up a generation still more unbelieving, more fickle, more ungrateful, and more rebellious than themselves. But truth and grace have triumphed in the conversion of the children, while appetite and habit have effected the destruction of the parents.—Note, How exactly do these two generations correspond, on the great national scale, with the condition of every descendant of Adam! The 'old man' walks by 'sight,' disbelieves, and dies disinherited; the 'new man' walks by 'faith,' lives, and enters into rest. C.]

are the hearts of men, which need such earnest and repeated inculcation of the plainest duties. And greatly important are the statutes and testimonies of God, which are worthy of all these enforcements. Oh with what solemnity and fervour ought ministers then to preach the truths of God! His glory, and the eternal salvation or ruin of mankind, are deeply concerned in them. Let me receive every article of their divine message with the deepest awe and the most solemn regard: and while I have an ear to hear, let me hear what the Spirit saith to the churches, as said to myself. Let me walk in all the commandments of the Lord blameless. Let every carnal representation of the true God, every deviation to idols, be the detestation of my soul. And, remembering God's tenderness with me, and relation to me, let me exert all my care and skill in raising up men to the honour of Jesus Christ my elder brother. Let every manifestation of God's character or providence encourage and animate me to close walking with him. And if I choose not that sin should become my punishment, let me never make it my pleasure. But let the immutability of God's love, and his readiness to show mercy to returning prodigals, lead me to a speedy and a

In the preface God speaks to them as their Redeemer, and it is only in this view that a sinner can yield it obedience. The mercy of God is here promised to thousands; not only of individuals, or to great multitudes to the third and fourth generation, but to successive generations to the end of time. 1 A commemoration of the covenant in Horeb, 6 the ten commandments. 22 At the people's request Moses receiveth the law from God.

AND Moses called "all Israel,<sup>1</sup> and said unto them, "Hear, O Israel, the statutes and judgments which I speak in your ears this day, that ye may learn them, and keep and do "them.

2 The "LORD our God made a covenant with us in Horeb.

3 The LORD "made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day.<sup>3</sup>

4 The "LORD talked with you face to face in the mount, out of the midst of the fire,

5 (I stood "between the LORD and you at that time, to show you the word of the LORD: for ye were afraid by reason of the fire, and went not up into the mount,) saying,

6 ¶ I<sup>r</sup> am the LORD thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage.<sup>4</sup>

7 Thou<sup>a</sup> shalt have none other gods before me.

8 Thou<sup>i</sup> shalt not make thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the waters beneath the earth:

9 Thou shalt not bow down thyself unto them, nor serve them: "for I the LORD thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me,

10 And<sup>1</sup> showing mercy unto thousands<sup>5</sup> of them that love me, and keep my commandments.

11 Thou<sup>m</sup> shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God in vain: for the LORD will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.

12 Keep<sup>r</sup> "the sabbath-day to sanctify it, as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee.

13 Six days thou shalt labour, and do all thy work;

14 But the seventh day is the "sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, nor thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thine ox, nor thine ass, nor any of thy cattle, nor "thy stranger that is within thy gates; that thy man-servant and thy maid-servant may rest as well as thou.

15 And "remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the LORD thy heartily repentance for sin. And, recollecting the manifold, the distinguishing manifestations of God to me, and to his people, let me never forget my superior obligations; but, while I enjoy his peculiar blessing, return him peculiar honour.

CHAPTER V. [Ver. 21. The varieties of expression used, in relating the same thing, by 'holy men of God,' who spoke as they were moved by 'the Holy Ghost,' is never without some important use, that will sooner or later be found out. A remarkable instance occurs in this verse. In many of the catechisms and other books authorized by Romanists, the second commandment, forbidding image worship, is omitted; but to make up the number ten, the tenth commandment is divided into two. The transposition, however, in the text demonstrates the invalidity of the division, and the folly as well as sin of adding to or diminishing from the words of the Lord. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Sinful men must have God's will declared to them, line upon line, precept upon precept. But the promise of grace, made in Jesus Christ, is the great foundation of all our holy obedience; and there can be no happy promise of

KIRJATH JEARIM—WHERE THE ARK OF THE COVENANT RESTED IN THE HOUSE OF ABINADAB. [DEUT., v: 22.]—"These words the Lord spake unto all your assembly in the mount, out of the midst of the fire, of the cloud, and of the thick darkness, with a great voice; and he added no more; and he wrote them in two tables of stone and delivered them unto me." We give here a picture of Kirjath Jearim because when the ark of the testimony was brought from Bethshemesh it rested in this place in the house of Abinadab. The immeasurable distance of the religion of Israel from that of surrounding nations may be determined from the fact that the Israelite bowed himself before a holy place in which God was represented in His law and as revealing Himself as holy and just and demanding corresponding traits in His people. The Egyptian bowed before a shrine also, but when that which was contained in it was disclosed it was seen to be a cat or a crocodile or some animal lower in nature than man. The Israelite looked above him, the Egyptian looked beneath himself.

MOSQUE OF OMAR AND TURKISH QUARTER, JERUSALEM—IN THE PLACE OF THE TEMPLE WHERE CHRIST TAUGHT. [DEUT., v: 33.]—"Ye shall walk in all the ways which the Lord your God hath commanded you, that ye may live, and that it may be well with you, and that ye may prolong your days in the land which ye shall possess." We give a picture here, as illustrating the results of failing to observe God's law, the Mosque of Omar, a Mohammedan place of worship standing on the very site of the magnificent temple built by the people of God. Every Jew and every Christian who makes a visit to Palestine resents in his own feelings the presence of an alien people in the land of the Hebrews and of Christians. But we are all forced to admit that this land would have belonged to Jews and Christians forever had they been true to the ten commandments and to the Son of God, the embodiment of the ten commandments in living form.

one of the passages the Jews inscribe on their phylacteries, and which they regard as one of the most pregnant with divine truth and instruction. The words are spoken not merely as instructions from Moses to Israel, but as a confession of faith common to Moses and Israel: 'Hear, O Israel, JEHOVAH our Elohim is one JEHOVAH.' The words assert most emphatically the unity of the Godhead in the singular—JEHOVAH; while they equally assert the plurality of the persons by the plural—ELOHIM. The unity of the Godhead is asserted in opposition to 'the gods many and lords many' of the heathen; while the plurality of persons is asserted as the foundation and key to the great mystery of redemption. That the Jews understood ELOHIM to be plural, and that it included the doctrine of the TRINITY,

MOSQUE EL-AKSA, WITH BASIN—WHERE OUR SAVIOR HELD THE CON-VERSATION WITH THE LAWYER. [DEUT., vi: 4-10.]—Upon one occasion Christ was approached by a lawyer tempting him and enquiring of him concerning the law. The language our Savior used in replying to this lawyer is found in this sixth chapter of Deuteronomy between the fourth and tenth verses. We give a picture of the Mosque el-Aksa which stands upon part of the grounds once occupied by the temple, and is doubtless near the spot where our Savior stood when he held the conversation with the lawyer. The language used in this part of Deuteronomy is made more sacred because it was quoted by our Savior during his temptation in the wilderness. The Mosque el-Aksa is not far from the Mosque of Omar. North of the Gothic porch of the mosque is a marble fountain called the cup, and beneath this fountain is a very large reservoir or basin into which it is said the water from the Pools of Solomon were once conveyed.

<sup>6</sup> The Jews in the present day strangely observe this in the letter, but neglect it in the spirit. At their stated hours of prayer they bind upon one arm a little case containing strips of parchment, on which this and other portions of the law are written. They also bind a similar case, containing other texts, on the forehead. It is a universal custom, too, in the East, for Jews to inscribe over their doors, and round the walls of their rooms, long texts of the Pentateuch. Thus do they fulfil the law outwardly; but in thought, word, and act they deliberately and systematically neglect it.—<sup>7</sup> Ge. 12. 7, 17; 26. 3; 28. 13. ## CHAPTER VII.

1 All communion with the seven nations of Canaan is forbidden for fear of idolatry, 6 for the holiness of the people, 9 for the nature of God in his mercy and justice, 17 for the assuredness of victory which God will give over them. 25 Images must be wholly destroyed.

WHEN the LORD thy God shall bring thee into the land whither thou goest to possess it, and hath cast out many nations before thee, the Hittites, and the Girgashites, and the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, seven nations greater and mightier than thou;<sup>1</sup>

2 And when the LORD thy God shall deliver them before thee, and thou shalt smite them, and utterly destroy them; thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor show mercy unto them:

3 Neither shalt thou make marriages<sup>2</sup> with them; thy daughter thou shalt not give unto his son, nor his daughter shalt thou take unto thy son.

4 For they will turn away thy son from following me, that they may serve other gods: so will the anger of the LORD be kindled against you, and destroy thee suddenly.

5 But thus shall ye deal with them; ye shall destroy their altars, and break down their

REFLECTIONS.—Godliness is profitable for all things—it hath the promises of this life and of that which is to come: and unbounded is the happiness of all those who have the one only God for their all and in all. But in the important business of religion, it is necessary to lay a good foundation, by faith in God as our God, and to attend to the various duties thereof according to the degree of their importance. In this respect the word of God is a most precious treasure and useful instructor; and contains the most extensive ground of holy meditation and heavenly discourse. With awful reverence should God be regarded and enjoyed, particularly in swearing of oaths. And it is altogether inconsistent with the truth of religion to entertain sloth and unconcern for the glory of God or the lasting welfare of his church. What an important and laborious work ought we to make of the religious education of our children and servants! It is very necessary to instruct them in the knowledge of God's remarkable appearances for his church, as well as in the doctrinal principles or laws of revelation; and that no obedience can be accepted of God, but what is performed in regard to him as our God in Christ, and is universal respecting all his commandments.

CHAPTER VII. [Ver. 1. The Hittites were descended from Heth, the second son of Canaan; they were located in the time of Abraham in and around Hebron, Ge. 10. 15; 23. 3, sq. The Girgashites were also descended from a son of Canaan, and appear to have settled near the Sea of Galilee, Mat. 8. 28. The Amorites appear also to have been Canaanites, and were the most numerous and powerful tribe in the country. They spread widely, were a warlike race, and occupied large districts of the mountain ranges both east and west of the Jordan. Canaanite is sometimes used as a generic name for the whole descendants of Canaan; sometimes as the special name of the Phœnicians. In the latter sense it is employed here. The Perizzites were not of the same race as the others. They were an aboriginal tribe like the Rephaim, and occupied strongholds among the mountains of Judah and Ephraim. The Hivites, descendants of Canaan, founded Shechem, Gibeon, Beeroth, and a little principality under Mount Hermon, Ge. 34. 2; Jos. 9. 3, &c. The Jebusites had their stronghold on Zion; and they held it and the surrounding territory down to the time of David. P.]

Ver. 2. [Nor show mercy. Was not this prohibition of mercy cruel? No. It is a prohibition enforced upon every judge who tries and condemns a criminal. The judge who shows mercy to the murderer is himself a guilty copartner in the next murder the culprit perpetrates. See Le. xviii. for the fearful counts of the indictment upon which these nations were most right-

6 ¶ For<sup>a</sup> thou art an holy people unto the LORD thy God: the LORD thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth.

7 The LORD<sup>b</sup> did not set his love upon you, nor choose you, because ye were more in number than any people; (for ye were the fewest of all people;)<sup>4</sup>

8 But<sup>c</sup> because the LORD loved you, and because he would<sup>d</sup> keep the oath which he had sworn unto your fathers, hath the LORD brought you out with a mighty hand, and redeemed you out of the house of bond-men, from the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt.

9 ¶ Know therefore that the LORD thy God, he is God, the faithful God, which keepeth covenant<sup>e</sup> and mercy with them that love him and keep his commandments, to a thousand generations;

10 And<sup>f</sup> repayeth them that hate him to their face, to destroy them: he will not be slack to him that hateth him, he will repay him to his face.

11 Thou shalt therefore<sup>g</sup> keep the commandments, and the statutes, and the judgments, which I command thee this day, to do them.

12 ¶ Wherefore it shall come to pass, if<sup>h</sup> ye hearken to these judgments, and keep and do them, that the LORD thy God shall keep unto thee the covenant and the mercy which he swore unto thy fathers:

13 And he<sup>i</sup> will love thee, and bless thee, and multiply thee; he will also bless the fruit of thy womb, and the fruit of thy land, thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep, in the land which he swore unto thy fathers to give thee.

14 Thou shalt be blessed above all people: there shall not be male or female barren among you, or among your cattle.

15 And the LORD<sup>j</sup> will take away from thee all sickness, and will put none of the evil diseases of Egypt, which thou knowest,<sup>k</sup> upon thee; but<sup>l</sup> will lay them upon all them that hate thee.

16 And thou shalt<sup>m</sup> consume all the people which the LORD thy God shall deliver thee; thine eye shall have<sup>n</sup> no pity upon them: neither shalt thou serve their gods; for that will be a snare unto thee.<sup>o</sup> nations are more than I; how can I dispossess them?

18 Thou shalt not be afraid of them; but shalt well remember what the LORD thy God did unto Pharaoh, and unto all Egypt:

19 The great temptations which thine eyes saw, and the signs, and the wonders, and the mighty hand, and the stretched-out arm, whereby the LORD thy God brought thee out; so shall the LORD thy God<sup>a</sup> do unto all the people of whom thou art afraid.

20 Moreover,<sup>a</sup> the LORD thy God will send the hornet<sup>b</sup> among them, until they that are left, and hide themselves from thee, be destroyed.

21 Thou shalt not be affrighted at them: for the LORD thy God is among you, a mighty God and terrible.

22 And the LORD thy God will put<sup>c</sup> out those nations before thee by little and little: thou mayest not consume them at once, lest the beasts of the field increase upon thee.<sup>3</sup>

23 But the LORD thy God shall deliver them unto<sup>d</sup> thee, and shall<sup>e</sup> destroy them with a mighty destruction, until they be destroyed.

24 And he shall deliver their kings into thine hand, and thou shalt destroy their name from under heaven: there shall no man be able to stand before thee, until thou have destroyed them.

25 ¶ The graven images of their gods shall ye burn with fire: thou shalt not desire the silver or gold that is on them, nor take it unto thee, lest thou be snared therein: for it is an abomination to the LORD thy God.

26 Neither shalt thou bring an abomination into thine house, lest thou be a cursed thing like it: but thou shalt utterly detest it, and thou shalt utterly abhor it; for it is a cursed thing.

CHAPTER VIII.

An exhortation to obedience in regard of God's mercy and goodness in his dealings with Israel.

ALL the commandments which I command thee this day shall ye observe to do, that ye may live, and multiply, and go in and possess the land which the LORD swore unto your fathers.

2 And thou shalt remember all the way which the LORD thy God led thee these forty years in the wilderness, to humble thee, and to prove thee, to know what was in thine heart, whether thou wouldst keep his commandments or no.

3 And he humbled thee, and suffered thee to hunger, and fed thee with manna, which thou eously condemned; and let infidels dare to tell what milder sentence they would have passed. C.]

Ver. 6. [Holy people. A special or peculiar people, as quoted from the Septuagint, 1 Pe. 2. 9: the original import of the word is that of a private property fenced around for protection. This protection lies in God's special providence which watches over and guards his people, and in the promises and provisions of the 'everlasting promise, ordered in all things and sure,' 2 Sa. 23. 5. C.]

Ver. 10. [Hate. Thoughtless sinners often imagine or pronounce it impossible to hate God. But did not Ahab hate Michajah because he told him the truth of God; and did not the Jews hate Christ even to death, because he preached mercy to the chief of sinners, while he discovered and rebuked the hypocrisy of the Pharisees, and denounced the immorality of an adulterous generation? To hate God, is not merely to hate him personally—which thoughtless sinners think impossible—but it is to hate the restraint of his commandments, or the holiness of his injunctions, which the feelings and the conduct of sinners do constantly exemplify. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—God in love rules mar

knewest not, neither did thy fathers know; that he might make thee know that man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the LORD doth man live.

4 Thy<sup>a</sup> raiment waxed not<sup>a</sup> old upon thee, neither did thy foot swell, these forty years.

5 Thou shalt also consider in thine heart, that, 'as a man chasteneth his son, so the LORD thy God chasteneth thee.

6 Therefore thou shalt keep the commandments of the LORD thy God, to 'walk in his ways, and to fear him.

7 For the LORD thy God 'bringeth thee into a good land; a land of brooks of water, of fountains and depths that spring out of valleys and hills;

8 A land of wheat, and barley, and vines, and fig-trees, and pomegranates; a land of olive<sup>2</sup> and honey;

9 A land wherein thou shalt eat bread without scarceness, thou shalt not lack any thing in it; a 'land whose stones are iron, and out of whose hills thou mayest dig brass.<sup>3</sup>

10 When<sup>4</sup> thou hast eaten and art full, then thou shalt bless the LORD thy God for the good land which he hath given thee.

11 Beware<sup>5</sup> that thou forget not the LORD thy God, in not keeping his commandments, and his judgments, and his statutes, which I command thee this day:

12 Lest when thou 'hast eaten and art full, and hast built goodly houses, and dwelt therein;

13 And when thy herds and thy flocks multiply, and thy silver and thy gold is multiplied, and all that thou hast is multiplied;

14 Then thine heart be 'lifted up, and thou forget the LORD thy God, which brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage;

15 Who 'led thee through that great and terrible wilderness, wherein were 'fiery serpents, and scorpions, and drought, where there was no water; who brought thee forth water out of the rock of flint;

16 Who<sup>2</sup> fed thee in the wilderness with manna, which thy fathers knew not; that he might humble thee, and that he might prove thee, to do thee good at thy latter end;

17 And thou 'say in thine heart, My power, and the might of mine hand, hath gotten me this wealth.

19 And it shall be, 'if thou do at all forget the LORD thy God, and walk after other gods, and serve them, and worship them, I testify against you this day that ye shall surely perish.

20 As the nations which the LORD destroyeth before your face, so shall ye perish;<sup>4</sup> because ye would not be obedient unto the voice of the LORD your God.

CHAPTER IX.

Moses dissuadeth them from the opinion of their own righteousness, by rehearsing their several rebellions.

HEAR, O Israel; Thou art to pass over Jordan 'this day,'<sup>1</sup> to go in to possess nations greater and mightier than thyself, 'cities great, and fenced up to heaven;

2 A people great and tall, the children of the Anakims, whom thou knowest, and of whom thou hast heard say, Who can stand before the children of Anak?

3 Understand therefore this day, that the LORD thy God is he which 'goeth over before thee; as a consuming fire he 'shall destroy them, and he shall bring them down before thy face: so shalt thou drive them out, and destroy them quickly, as the LORD hath said unto thee.

4 Speak<sup>2</sup> not thou in thine heart, after that kind, even with respect to their life or death; they may submit whatever they have into the hands of his justice. It is dangerous to contract marriage or cultivate intimacy with wicked persons, particularly such as are of a false religion; and absurd is the expectation, that by such means we shall convert them, when God hath warned us that they will corrupt and seduce us. The faith of God's free love and mercy in keeping and redeeming us most graciously constrains to holy obedience; and what profit and pleasure is there in the faithful service of God! the most difficult duties are easily performed when we attempt them in the faith of God's promised presence and assistance. Why should we fear our strongest enemies, though greater and mightier than we are! If God be for us, who or what can be against us! Though our conquest be gradual, it shall be complete at last: and in all our strugglings let us beware of covetousness; for to enrich ourselves, even with the spoils of a false religion, may issue in our ruin; and it is therefore very important to remove and avoid every temptation to sin.

CHAPTER VIII. [Ver. 2. To know. Not as if God sought to make a discovery of something unknown to God in the heart of man; 'for he knew what was in man,' Jn. 2. 25; but that, by showing man to himself, he might humble him, by making him sensible of 'the plague of his own heart.' 1 Ki. 8. 38. C.]

Ver. 3. [By every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doth man live. Our Lord quotes these words in answer to the temptation of Satan, Mat. iv., exciting him to command 'stones to be made bread.' They contain three important facts: (1) That man is naturally supported by food. (2) That the production of food, and the power of digestion and nutrition, greatly and mainly depend upon the 'word of God.' The truth of this statement is evidenced by the productive powers of all countries where the gospel even comparatively prevails, when contrasted with the 'parched land' of the 'rebels' against God, Ps. 68. 6; and still farther, when the power of conscience is taken into account in all its bearings upon guilt, enmity, pardon, or peace with God; the influence of which, upon bodily health, is matter of daily experience. (3) That the real life of man resides not in the body, that bread can sustain, but in the soul; of which 'the word of God,' heard and believed, is the only efficient nutriment, Is. 55. 3. C.]

Ver. 8. [Olive-oil was, and still is, one of the staple products of Palestine. The Hebrew word debash, here translated 'honey,' may signify a conserve or syrup of grapes, which is now largely used in Palestine as an ordinary article of food. Its Arabic name is diab, manifestly identical with the Hebrew. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—With great care and skill should ministers promote holiness among their people; and there is need to turn promises and providences every way, to lead men to Jesus, the tree of life. To mortify our pride—commemorate our peevishness—and render the wisdom, holiness, and mercy of God familiar, let us observe the frowns and smiles of God's providence towards us. Trials are as necessary as deliverances; nor can anything hinder God from supplying us in the greatest straits. If the enjoyment of an earthly Canaan, much more should the faith of the heavenly inheritance, animate to an earnestness in universal holiness and gratitude. But how difficult is it to maintain humility of mind amidst remarkable prosperity! or fellowship with God amidst a flow of earthly enjoyments! for this purpose, let me; I always remember that forgetfulness of God, ingratitude, and pride, bring into the prosperity by which they are occasioned the most fearful curse; and let me wisely observe the providences of God in my lot. To humble me, and discover my own naughtiness, let me remember the wilderness-straits to which I have been reduced. To recommend JEHOVAH to my heart, let me consider what he hath done for me, and promised to me. Let every peculiar excellency in my lot be a mean of elevating my heart to God himself, my goodly inheritance. In the day of my adversity, let me be joyful in him; and in the day of my prosperity, let me consider that all comes from him, and may be withdrawn at his pleasure; and while the loving-kindness of God allures me to holiness, let his terrors awe and deter me from sin.

CROSSING THE JORDAN—THE SACRED RIVER OF CHRISTENDOM. [DEUT., ix: 1.]
 —“Hear, O Israel; Thou art to pass over Jordan this day, to go in to possess nations greater and mightier than thyself, cities great, and fenced up to heaven.”
 We give here a picture of the natives crossing the Jordan in a ferry-boat. The manner of crossing illustrated above, however, was totally different from the way the children of Israel crossed that river under the leadership of Joshua. They forded it. There are a great many fords in the river. Dr. George Adam Smith describes the Jordan as a rapid, muddy water with zigzag curves, and the depth varying from ten to twelve feet in the sixty-five miles of descent. The descent is 610 feet from the sea of Galilee and is sometimes over forty feet a mile. Jordan means down-come.

the LORD thy God hath cast them out from before thee, saying, For my righteousness<sup>2</sup> the LORD hath brought me in to possess this land; but <sup>for</sup> the wickedness of these nations the LORD doth drive them out from before thee.

5 Not for thy righteousness, or for the uprightness of thine heart, dost thou go to possess their land; but for the wickedness of these nations the LORD thy God doth drive them out from before thee, and <sup>that</sup> he may perform the word which the LORD sware unto thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

6 Understand therefore, <sup>that</sup> the LORD thy God giveth thee not this good land to possess it for thy righteousness; for thou art a stiff-necked people.<sup>3</sup>

7 ¶ Remember,<sup>4</sup> and forget not, how thou provokedst the LORD thy God to wrath in the wilderness: from the day that thou didst depart out of the land of Egypt, until ye came unto this place, ye have been rebellious against the LORD.

8 Also<sup>5</sup> in Horeb ye provoked the LORD to wrath, so that the LORD was angry with you, to have destroyed you.

9 When I was <sup>gone</sup> up into the mount, to receive the tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant which the LORD made with you, then I abode in the mount forty days and forty nights; I neither did eat bread<sup>4</sup> nor drink water:

10 And<sup>m</sup> the LORD delivered unto me two tables of stone, written with the finger of God: and on them was written according to all the words which the LORD spake with you in the mount, out of the midst of the fire, in the day of the assembly.

11 And it came to pass, at the end of forty days and forty nights, that the LORD gave me the two tables of stone, even the <sup>two</sup> tables of the covenant.

12 And the LORD said unto me, <sup>Arise</sup>, get thee down quickly from hence; for thy people which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt have corrupted themselves; they are quickly turned aside out of the way which I commanded them; they have made them a molten image.

13 Furthermore the LORD spake unto me, saying, <sup>I</sup> have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiff-necked people.

14 Let<sup>9</sup> me alone, that I may destroy them, and blot out their name from under heaven; and I will make of thee a nation mightier and greater than they.

15 So <sup>I</sup> turned and came down from the mount, and the mount <sup>burned</sup> with fire: and <sup>2</sup> Let us mark with what specialty God dwells upon the fact, that the children of Israel were not installed in Canaan for their righteousness, but that the seven nations were driven out before them for their wickedness. Self-righteousness is the constitutional disease of human nature, a disease ever recurring, even under the regimen of grace. God therefore suits the remedy to the disease; and no less than three times (ver. 4, 5, 6) repeats the solemn denial of Israel's righteousness as the moving cause of his providential decisions. — Note. The abundance of grace is the sole ground of salvation; the wickedness of men the sole ground of judgment. — C.

<sup>17</sup> Unlike most of the miraculous recitals of Moses, for which we have the national attestation; for this we have no direct evidence beyond his own personal testimony, and therefore should in fidelity question, doubt, or deny that testimony? What end of self-interest had Moses to serve by it? — None! Independent of the evidence which his miraculous works and prophetic endowments bear to his divine commission, his character alone is sufficient pledge for the veracity of his statement. Should infidelity deny the truth of the statement on any alleged impossibility of Moses sustaining so long a fast; it must do so, not merely by denying the miraculous power of God, but by forgetting all the laws by which mind operates upon body; and by which <sup>30</sup> The whole object of Moses in recounting the various acts of sin and rebellion on the part of the Israelites is to show them that it never could have been on account of any righteousness on their part that God was pleased to give them Canaan. Instead of reward they richly deserved punishment. That punishment was only averted by the repeated and earnest intercession of Moses. The Canaanites were driven out of their country because of sin; and the Israelites were introduced into it in the richness of divine mercy. — P.

<sup>32</sup> From comparing ver. 9 with ver. 18. 25, some have concluded that Moses fasted at three several times, forty days and forty nights; but a more attentive examination of ver. 25 will show that it is not a third fast, but merely a reference to the second (ver. 16), for it does not say "then," but, "I fell down." — C.

the two tables of the covenant were in my two hands.

16 And <sup>I</sup> looked, and, behold, ye had sinned against the LORD your God, and had made you a molten calf: ye had turned aside quickly out of the way which the LORD had commanded you.

17 And<sup>u</sup> I took the two tables, and cast them out of my two hands, and brake them before your eyes.<sup>5</sup>

18 And <sup>I</sup> fell down before the LORD, as at the first, forty days and forty nights: I did neither eat bread nor drink water, because of all your sins which ye sinned, in doing wickedly in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger. .

19 (For <sup>I</sup> was afraid of the anger and hot displeasure wherewith the LORD was wroth against you to destroy you.) <sup>But</sup> the LORD hearkened unto me at that time also.

20 And the LORD <sup>was</sup> very angry with Aaron to have destroyed him: and I prayed for Aaron also the same time.

21 And <sup>I</sup> took your sin, the calf which ye had made, and burnt it with fire, and stamped it, and ground it very small, even until it was as small as dust; and I cast the dust thereof into the brook that descended out of the mount.

22 And at <sup>Taberah</sup>, and at Massah, and at Kibroth-hattaavah, ye provoked the LORD to wrath.

23 Likewise when the LORD sent you from <sup>Kadesh-barnea</sup>, saying, <sup>Go</sup> up and possess the land which I have given you; then ye rebelled against the commandment of the LORD your God, and ye believed him not, nor hearkened to his voice.

24 Ye have been <sup>rebellious</sup> against the LORD from the day that I knew you.<sup>6</sup>

25 Thus <sup>I</sup> fell down before the LORD forty days and forty nights,<sup>7</sup> as I fell down at the first; because the LORD had said he would destroy you.

26 I <sup>prayed</sup> therefore unto the LORD, and said, O Lord God, destroy not thy people, and thine inheritance, which thou hast redeemed through thy greatness, which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand.

27 Remember<sup>1</sup> thy servants, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: look not unto the stubbornness of this people, nor to their wickedness, nor to their sin;

28 Lest<sup>8</sup> the land whence thou broughtest us out say, Because the LORD was not able to bring them into the land which he promised them, and because he hated them, he hath

CHAPTER IX. REFLECTIONS.—The greater our enemies and impediments in the way of our duty, the more shall the power of God be magnified in our overcoming them. God can easily find instruments to execute his justice upon a people devoted to destruction; and his promises and threatenings are most certainly performed in their due time. Though judgment may be delayed, yet sin will at last make the most fearful havoc in nations and families, however great and powerful; and yet it is hard to keep the very worst of men from trusting and glorying in their own fancied works of righteousness. But to keep us humble amidst many and great mercies, let us search the records which conscience keeps of our sins. Nothing but obstinate blindness can support us in a good opinion of ourselves. But thanks be to God that, where sin abounded, grace doth much more abound; thanks for that infinite mercy, that such a wicked generation have brought them out to slay them in the wilderness.

29 Yet they are thy 'people, and thine inheritance, which thou broughtest out by thy mighty power, and by thy stretched-out arm.

CHAPTER X.

1 God's mercy in restoring the two tables, 6 in continuing the priesthood, 8 in separating the tribe of Levi, 10 in hearkening unto Moses' suit for the people. 12 An exhortation to obedience.

AT that "time the LORD said unto me, Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first, and come up unto me into the mount, and make thee an ark of wood.

2 And I will write on the tables the words that were in the first tables, which thou breakest, and thou shalt put them in the ark.

3 And <sup>1</sup>I made an ark of shittim-wood,<sup>1</sup> and hewed<sup>2</sup> two tables of stone like unto the first, and <sup>3</sup>went up into the mount, having the two tables in mine hand.

4 And he wrote on the tables,<sup>2</sup> according to the first writing, the ten commandments,<sup>3</sup> which the LORD spake unto you in the mount, 'out of the midst of the fire, in the day of the assembly: and the LORD gave them unto me.

5 And <sup>1</sup>I turned myself and came down from the mount, and put the tables in the ark which I had made; and there they be, 'as the LORD commanded me.

6 ¶ And<sup>4</sup> the children of Israel took their journey from Beeroth of the children of Jaakan to Mosera: 'there Aaron died, and there he was buried; and Eleazar his son ministered in the priest's office in his stead.

7 From thence they journeyed unto Gudgodah; and from Gudgodah to Jotbath, a land of rivers of waters.

8 ¶ At that time the LORD 'separated the tribe of Levi, to 'bear the ark of the covenant of the LORD, to stand before the LORD to minister unto him, and to bless in his name, unto this day.

9 Wherefore<sup>1</sup> Levi hath no part nor inheritance with his brethren; the LORD is his inheritance, according as the LORD thy God promised him.<sup>5</sup>

1 ch. 9:25-29. Ex. 34:1, 29:10-16.

2 Ex. 25:10-16; 37:1-9.

3 In Ex. xxxvii. the formation of the ark is ascribed to Bezalel, here to Moses. But this is no contradiction, inasmuch as, in all languages, a man is said to do that which another does under his direction and authority. Thus Solomon is said to have built the temple, not by his own hands, but by the expenditure of his money, and the agency of his servants.—C.

4 Ex. 34:4.

5 Ex. 34:28, ch. 9:10.

6 The stone tablets were hewn by Moses; but the commandments were written upon them by Jehovah himself. This the LORD promised to do, as is stated in Ex. 34:1: 'I will write upon these tables.' &c. From ver. 28 of the same chapter, it might at first sight appear that the words were written by Moses: 'And he wrote.' but a close examination shows that the pronoun refers to JEHOVAH.—P.

4 Why the Holy Ghost hath inserted this and the following verse here; or whether the places here mentioned are the same as Bene-Jaakan, Moseroth, Hor-hagidgad, and Jotbathah, mentioned Nu. 31:33, or rather different, I scarcely dare determine.

9 It seems probable that the reason for the insertion of the note of travel in ver. 6, 7 was the fixing of the exact time and place when the Levites were formally declared to have no allotted portions because they were the LORD's ministers. The journey here noted was part of the final one from Kadesh to the plains of Moab. The route lay down the Arabah, and was consequently in or near the same course which they had taken on a previous occasion (see note on Nu. 33:36). Some of the stations are the same; Gudgodah is doubtless Hor-hagidgad. The whole narrative, however, is very obscure. It ought to be remembered that we have here only an outline of Moses' final address to Israel. Such isolated facts of history are mentioned as bore upon the object he had specially in view—to press upon them the necessity of full obedience to the law.

GREEK CHURCH, NAZARETH—NEAR ST. MARY'S WELL. [DEUT., x : 12-22.]—"And now, Israel, what doth the Lord thy God require of thee, but to fear the Lord thy God, to walk in all his ways and to love him, and to serve the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul," etc. Above we have a picture of the Greek Church in Nazareth, the city of our Savior. This can be very aptly placed in connection with this portion of the Word of God concerning the importance of the Law, for without Jesus Christ the Law cannot be obeyed, for "what the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin condemned sin in the flesh, that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh but after the spirit." The Greek Church in Nazareth is just above St. Mary's Well, where the Mother of Jesus often came to draw water.

DEUTERONOMY XI.

CHAPTER XI.

1 An exhortation to obedience. 2 by their own experience of God's great works, 8 by promise of God's great blessings, 16 and by threatenings. 18 A careful study is required in God's words. 26 The blessing and curse is set before them.

THEREFORE <sup>a</sup>thou shalt love the LORD thy God, and keep his charge, and his statutes, and his judgments, and his commandments, always.

2 <sup>b</sup> And <sup>c</sup> know ye this day: for I speak not with your children which have not known, and which have not seen <sup>d</sup> the chastisement of the LORD your God, his greatness, his mighty hand, and his stretched-out arm,

3 And <sup>e</sup> his miracles, and his acts, which he did in the midst of Egypt unto Pharaoh the king of Egypt, and unto all his land;

4 And what he did unto the army of Egypt, unto their horses, and to their chariots; how he made the water of the Red sea to overflow them as they pursued after you, and how the LORD hath destroyed them unto this day;

5 And <sup>f</sup> what he did unto you in the wilderness, until ye came into this place;

6 And <sup>g</sup> what he did unto Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab, the son of Reuben; how the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their households, and their tents, and all the substance <sup>h</sup> that was in their possession, <sup>i</sup> in the midst of all Israel:

7 But your eyes have seen all the great acts of the LORD which he did <sup>j</sup>:

8 Therefore <sup>k</sup> shall ye keep all the commandments which I command you this day, that ye may be strong, and go in and possess the land whither ye go to possess it;

9 And that ye <sup>l</sup> may prolong your days in the land, which the LORD sware unto your fathers to give unto them, and to their seed, a land that floweth with milk and honey.

10 <sup>m</sup> For the land, whither thou goest in to possess it, is not as the land of Egypt, from whence ye came out, where thou sowedst thy seed, and wateredst it with thy foot, <sup>n</sup> as a garden of herbs:

11 But <sup>o</sup> the land, whither ye go to possess it, is a land of hills and valleys, and drinketh water of the rain of heaven;

12 A <sup>p</sup> land which the LORD thy God careth <sup>q</sup> for: the eyes of the LORD thy God are always upon it, from the beginning of the year, even unto the end of the year. <sup>r</sup>

13 <sup>s</sup> And it shall come to pass, <sup>t</sup> if ye shall harken diligently unto my commandments, which I command you this day, to love the LORD your God, and to serve him with all your heart, and with all your soul, 14 That <sup>a</sup> I will give you the rain of your land in his due season, the first rain, and the latter rain, that thou mayest gather in thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil.

15 And <sup>b</sup> I will send <sup>c</sup> grass in thy fields for thy cattle, that thou mayest eat, and be full.

16 Take <sup>d</sup> heed to yourselves, that your heart be not deceived, and ye turn aside, and serve other gods, and worship them;

17 And <sup>e</sup> then the LORD's wrath be kindled against you, and he <sup>f</sup> shut up the heaven, that there be no rain, and that the land yield not her fruit; and <sup>g</sup> lest ye perish quickly from off the good land which the LORD giveth you.

18 <sup>h</sup> Therefore shall ye <sup>i</sup> lay up these my words in your heart, and in your soul, and bind them for a sign upon your hand, that they may be as frontlets between your eyes.

19 And <sup>j</sup> ye shall teach them your children, speaking of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.

20 And thou <sup>k</sup> shalt write them upon the door-posts of thine house, and upon thy gates:

21 That your <sup>l</sup> days may be multiplied, and the days of your children, in the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers to give them, as the days of heaven upon the earth.

22 <sup>m</sup> For <sup>n</sup> if ye shall diligently keep all these commandments which I command you, to do them, to love the LORD your God, to walk in all his ways, and to cleave unto him;

23 Then <sup>o</sup> will the LORD drive out all these nations from before you, and ye shall possess greater nations and mightier than yourselves.

parched soil, and prepared it for the sowing of the seed. The latter rain of early spring brought the grain crops to maturity. The bright sun of summer ripened the grapes and other fruits. Thus were 'the eyes of the LORD always upon' the land. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Thus let my love to the LORD always work in holy obedience to all his commandments. Let the remembrance of his early kindness to me and mine, and his awful judgments on others around me, stir me up to the utmost circumspection in my conduct. God's mercies should leave an impression on us which neither time nor age should ever efface. And while sins shorten men's days, and cause countries to spue out their inhabitants, yea, often into ruin, let me carefully observe God's kindness, even in outward things. Mercies coming from the immediate hand of God are doubly sweet. Godliness hath the promise of the life that now is, as well as of that which is to come. But if we refuse to be influenced by God's mercies, we must sink under his judgments. When the heart is filled with the knowledge and love of God's word, the tongue will be as the pen of a ready writer in speaking of divine things. Let me, therefore, by all means, labour to fix a deep sense of spiritual things upon my own soul, and be careful to transmit the knowledge of them unto men: for true religion stamps a reverence on its professors, which keeps even their enemies in awe of them; and godliness, transmitted through our possessions, is the surest way to perpetuate them in our families. How plain and evident, in God's word, is the way to happiness and misery! And if men will not see, will not walk aright, their blood must be on their own head. Since, then, the blessings and curses

THE BRIDGE OVER THE JORDAN—NEAR WHERE THE JEWS SET UP IN DAN THE GOLDEN CALF. [DEUT., xi:31.]—"For ye shall pass over Jordan, to go in to possess the land which the Lord your God giveth you, and ye shall possess it, and dwell therein." The particular bridge illustrated in the picture is over the Hasbany prong of the Jordan. It is called the Bridge of Jacob's Daughters. It is three miles from Dan, and on the direct road from Jerusalem to Damascus. The Jordan as we see it in the picture is very wild because of the deep gorge through which it dashes down. The banks on either side are lined with oleanders, willows, honey-suckles and other sweet and flowering shrubs. The noise of the water, and the charming scent of the flowers, together with the natural scene combine to make this place romantic and beautiful. The bridge is very old, and is assigned by tradition to the time of the Romans.

ments of the LORD your God, which I command you this day:

28 And a curse, if ye will not obey the commandments of the LORD your God, but turn aside out of the way which I command you this day, to go after other gods, which ye have not known.

29 And it shall come to pass, when the LORD thy God hath brought thee in unto the land whither thou goest to possess it, that thou shalt put the blessing upon mount Gerizim, and the curse upon mount Ebal.<sup>1</sup>

30 Are they not on the other side Jordan, by the way where the sun goeth down, in the land of the Canaanites, which dwell in the<sup>2</sup> champaign over against Gilgal, beside the plains of Moreh?<sup>3</sup>

32 And ye shall observe to do all the statutes and judgments which I set before you this day.

CHAPTER XII.

THESE are the statutes and judgments which ye shall observe to do in the land which the LORD God of thy fathers giveth thee to possess it, all the days that ye live upon the earth.

2 Ye shall utterly destroy all the places wherein the nations which ye shall possess<sup>1</sup> served their gods, upon the high mountains, and upon the hills, and under every green tree.

3 And ye shall overthrow<sup>2</sup> their altars, and break their pillars, and burn their groves with fire; and ye shall hew down the graven images of their gods, and destroy the names of them out of that place.

4 Ye shall not do so unto the LORD your God.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> These two mountains lie to the westward of Jordan, in the lot of Ephraim. They are in height from 200 to 280 ft. extending from east to west in lines nearly parallel, with the beautiful valley of Shechem or Sychar, now called Nablous, about 200 paces in width, between them. They are about a league in length, and approach in form to a semicircle, Mount Ebal to the north. Travellers have represented Mount Gerizim as more fertile and picturesque than Ebal, so that the two mountains in their natural aspect and condition were, in some degree, emblems of the blessing of fertility and beauty, and the curse of barrenness and deformity.—C.

This verse is obscure, and has been a source of difficulty to commentators. Its full meaning appears to be as follows:—Are they not beyond Jordan, that is, on its western side, in the direction in which the sunsets; are they not in the land of the Canaanites, who live in the Arabah facing Gilgal; are they not beside the terebinths (or plains) of Moreh? The mention of the Arabah and Gilgal is connected with the territory of the Canaanites, and not with the situation of Ebal and Gerizim; while the last clause of the verse refers to the mountains, and has no connection with the Arabah or Gilgal.

tutions of Moses all looked forward to a fixed place of worship, instead of the movable tabernacle constructed in the wilderness; and while they inculcated the worship of God in spirit everywhere, saying, 'Thou shalt love the LORD thy God with all thine heart'—yet certain outward acts of worship were strictly reserved for one place. This precaution was intended to guard against the invention of new worship, and the peril of idolatry, while it also typified the merging of all divine institutions into the one temple of the 'body of Christ,' and the concentration of all worshippers around his one sacrifice, Jn. 2. 21. <sup>2</sup> One great object of the Mosaic ordinances was to associate the idea of God's goodness and presence with food, so that every call of bodily hunger or thirst should be a soul to hunger and thirst after his righteousness, and that every gratification of the appetite might lift up the heart in thankfulness to the Giver of all good.

<sup>6</sup> It seems that when the Israelites were in the wilderness, many of the ceremonial observances enjoined in the law were omitted. It was often matter of necessity to do so. To these violations reference is made here; and it is stated that when settled down in Canaan all such violations and omissions should cease. There would no longer be any excuse or plea for them.

16 Only ye shall not eat the blood; ye shall pour it upon the earth as water.

17 Thou mayest not eat within thy gates the tithe of thy corn, or of thy wine, or of thy oil, or the firstlings of thy herds, or of thy flock, nor any of thy vows which thou vowest, nor thy free-will-offerings, or heave-offering of thine hand:

18 But thou must eat them before the LORD thy God in the place which the LORD thy God

CHAPTER XII. [Ver. 12. Ye shall rejoice. The Mosaic institutions had their days 'to afflict the soul,' because of sin, but their general aspect was joy, because of righteousness. Nor was this joy merely personal, but extended to all the household, embracing in its benevolence the Levite, the widow, the poor, and the stranger.—Note, Family religion is an indispensable

Christian duty, but to be efficient it must be united with that 'charity which is kind,' and instead of being exhibited in moroseness or austerity of aspect, manner, or government, should be conducted with that 'joy in the Holy Ghost' that 'adorns the gospel of God our Saviour,' and governs the household by the authority of love, rather than by the hand of power. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Abominable to God is all worship. And it is impossible to reconcile the worship of God and mammon—of Christ and Belial. But, in the best-ordered churches on earth, something will still be defective. Perfect purity is reserved for the heavenly Canaan: and therefore, in cases of necessity, some ordinances of worship may be omitted, which in other circumstances would render us highly culpable. The excellency of worship lies not in any pompous form, but in its exact correspondence with God's prescriptions. Let me then not merely cease from evil, but learn to do well. Let me attend to, and improve, every instituted ordinance of fellowship with God. Let his institutions, not any custom or law of men, whether under the best or the worst of governments, be the standard shall choose, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy man-servant, and thy maid-servant,<sup>8</sup> and the Levite that is within thy gates: and thou shalt rejoice before the LORD thy God in all that thou puttest thine hands unto.

19 ¶ Take heed to thyself that thou forsake not the Levite<sup>9</sup> as long as thou livest<sup>1</sup> upon the earth.

20 ¶ When the LORD thy God shall enlarge thy border, as he hath promised thee, and thou shalt say, I will eat flesh, (because thy soul longeth to eat flesh,) thou mayest eat flesh, whatsoever thy soul lusteth after.

21 If<sup>2</sup> the place which the LORD thy God hath chosen to put his name there be too far from thee, then thou shalt kill of thy herd and of thy flock, which the LORD hath given thee, as I have commanded thee, and thou shalt eat in thy gates whatsoever thy soul lusteth after.

22 Even<sup>3</sup> as the roe-buck and the hart is eaten, so thou shalt eat them; the unclean and the clean shall eat of them alike.<sup>3</sup>

23 Only be sure<sup>4</sup> that thou eat not the blood: for the blood is the life; and thou mayest not eat the life with the flesh.

8 Thou shalt not consent unto him, nor hearken unto him; neither shalt thine eye pity him, neither shalt thou spare, neither shalt thou conceal him;

9 But thou shalt surely kill him: thine hand shall be first upon him to put him to death,<sup>3</sup> and afterwards the hand of all the people.

10 And thou shalt stone him with stones, that he die; because he hath sought to thrust thee away from the LORD thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage.<sup>4</sup>

11 And all Israel shall hear, and fear, and shall do no more any such wickedness as this is among you.

12 ¶ If thou shalt hear say in one of thy cities, which the LORD thy God hath given thee to dwell there, saying,

13 Certain men, the children of Belial, are gone out from among you, and have withdrawn the inhabitants of their city, saying, Let us go and serve other gods, which ye have not known;

14 Then shalt thou inquire, and make search, and ask diligently: and, behold, if it be truth, and the thing certain, that such abomination is wrought among you;

15 Thou shalt surely smite the inhabitants of that city with the edge of the sword, destroying it utterly, and all that is therein, and the cattle thereof, with the edge of the sword.

16 And thou shalt gather all the spoil of it into the midst of the street thereof, and shalt burn with fire the city, and all the spoil thereof every whit, for the LORD thy God; and it shall be an heap for ever; it shall not be built again.

17 And there shall cleave nought of the cursed thing to thine hand; that the LORD may turn from the fierceness of his anger, and show thee mercy, and have compassion upon thee, and multiply thee, as he hath sworn unto thy fathers;<sup>6</sup>

18 When thou shalt hearken to the voice of the LORD thy God, to keep all his commandments which I command thee this day, to do that which is right in the eyes of the LORD thy God.

temptations be doubly bewitching which come through those whom we love, and hope of secrecy and security in sin is a great snare to lead men into it, yet let us remember, that to conceal or protect such criminals is to render ourselves partakers in their crimes. If they are become obstinate in their evil way, they ought no longer to be reckoned as conscientiously mistaken persons, but as children of Belial, who are perfectly lost to all manner of virtue, and become nuisances and plagues to both church and state. If their quality or multitude protect them from human justice, the justice of God will shortly find them out; for all that depart from him shall surely perish. But in our zeal for the pure worship of God, we must at once testify our detestation of idolatry or superstition, and plainly manifest that in our zeal we have no eye to promote our own carnal advantage. And whatever power magistrates may have from God to punish such evil-doers, for the preservation of the true religion where it is, they can show no warrant for the exertion of force in the propagation of it.

3 There is nothing more remarkable in the Mosaic institutions than the perfect publicity of trial in the court, the accuser and the witnesses. Such publicity is, far above all other devices, the best protection both of private safety and public liberty. Even where the cause is more the cause of God than of man, and where idolatry is the charge, the accuser can whisper nothing in the private ear of jealous and self-interested authority: the accused cannot be charged with a crime unknown to himself, and entrapped by examinations, or forced by torture to bear witness against himself. The accusation must be public; the court must be public; the witnesses must be two or more; they must be confronted with the accused; witnesses must agree; and, finally, the accuser, if the accused be found guilty, must in this case become, in his own person, one of the public executioners, thus committing his character in the open manner to the truth of the charge alleged.—C.

5 Here again the excellence of the divine law is most apparent; nothing is to be taken on vague report, no encouragement is to be given to private spite or public jealousy, no lure is held out to covetousness; but as the whole city can not be sued in court, and are perhaps too strong for the law, so long as the guilt is unproved; the authorities must (1) inquire; (2) make search; (3) ask diligently; and, if there remain the height of a doubt, the city must receive it, and until the report be proved certain, no proceedings can be taken against them.—C.

3 There is nothing more remarkable in the Mosaic institutions than the perfect publicity of trial in the court, the accuser and the witnesses. Such publicity is, far above all other devices, the best protection both of private safety and public liberty. Even where the cause is more the cause of God than of man, and where idolatry is the charge, the accuser can whisper nothing in the private ear of jealous and self-interested authority: the accused cannot be charged with a crime unknown to himself, and entrapped by examinations, or forced by torture to bear witness against himself. The accusation must be public; the court must be public; the witnesses must be two or more; they must be confronted with the accused; witnesses must agree; and, finally, the accuser, if the accused be found guilty, must in this case become, in his own person, one of the public executioners, thus committing his character in the open manner to the truth of the charge alleged.—C.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 God's children are not to disfigure themselves in mourning. 3 What may, and what may not be eaten, 4 of beasts, 9 of fishes, 11 of fowls. 21 That which dieth of itself must not be eaten. 22 Tithes of divine services. 23 Tithes and firstlings of cattle to be eaten before the Lord. 28 The third year's tithe of alms and charity.

YE are the children of the LORD your God. Ye shall not cut yourselves, nor make any baldness between your eyes for the dead:

2 For thou art an holy people unto the LORD thy God; and the LORD hath chosen thee to be a peculiar people unto himself, above all the nations that are upon the earth.

3 ¶ Thou shalt not eat any abominable thing.

4 These are the beasts which ye shall eat: The ox, the sheep, and the goat,

5 The hart, and the roe-buck, and the fallow-deer, and the wild goat, and the pygarg,<sup>2</sup> and the wild ox, and the chamois.<sup>3</sup>

6 And every beast that parteth the hoof, and cleaveth the cleft into two claws, and cheweth the cud among the beasts, that ye shall eat.

7 Nevertheless these ye shall not eat of them that chew the cud, or of them that divide the cloven hoof; as the camel, and the hare, and the coney: for they chew the cud, but divide not the hoof; therefore they are unclean unto you.

8 And the swine, because it divideth the hoof, yet cheweth not the cud, it is unclean unto you: ye shall not eat of their flesh, nor touch their dead carcass.

9 ¶ These ye shall eat of all that are in the waters; all that have fins and scales shall ye eat:

10 And whatsoever hath not fins and scales ye may not eat; it is unclean unto you.

11 ¶ Of all clean birds ye shall eat.

12 But these are they of which ye shall not eat: the eagle, and the ossifrage, and the osprey, 13 And the glede, and the kite, and the vulture after his kind,

14 And every raven after his kind,

15 And the owl, and the night-hawk, and the cuckoo, and the hawk after his kind,

If I live on meat which cometh down from heaven, let me never dishonour my Provider and Portion by a base lusting after, or catching at, anything earthly and vile. Such as are not satisfied with the lawful gratifications which God allows them, will never be satisfied in the gratification of their lawless lusts. And though, under the gospel, I am not so restricted from the flesh of animals, yet I am no less restricted from intimacy and fellowship with unclean sinners, and their works of darkness and death. Here likewise I may learn, that there is need of frequent and diligent

CHAPTER XV. [Ver. 1. Release. The intelligent Brown Patterson, in his note on this passage in the commentary of his revered relative, understands by release, a mere suspension of the demand for the current year. Le Clerc and Michaelis are of the same opinion, and Josephus must be understood as agreeing with them, as he mentions the extinction of debts every fiftieth year, and is silent about it on the seventh. From considering the whole passage to ver. 12, we are nevertheless convinced that this was another specimen of the Mosaic poor-laws, and that it required the entire extinction of all the money debts (but no others) of the year of release, is at hand; and thine eye be evil against thy poor brother, and thou givest him nought, and he cry unto the LORD against thee, and it be sin unto thee.

REFLECTIONS.—In this year of release I behold the acceptable, the evangelical, and the eternal year of God's redeemed; in which we, infinite debtors to the law and justice of God, are justified from all things and we, bond-sinners of mankind, are restored to our liberty, and enriched by his grace with blessings innumerable and everlasting. But let me think also how irreligious and inhumane is severity towards poor but honest debtors; it entails a curse upon our property. And it is base to make God's kindness to the poor an occasion of your unkindness to them. To refuse lending to them, if industrious, when we have God to be their surety, who will repay us with usury, is absurd: but especially it is dangerous to have their cry ascending to heaven against us. And often will it be found, what we call prudence, in withholding from them, is held extremely sinful and criminal before God. He knows and remarks every thought of our hearts:

10 Thou shalt surely give him, and thine heart shall not be grieved when thou givest unto him: because that for this thing the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all thy works, and in all that thou puttest thine hand unto.<sup>7</sup>

11 For the poor shall never cease out of the land: therefore I command thee, saying, <sup>m</sup>Thou shalt open thine hand wide unto thy brother, to thy poor, and to thy needy, in thy land.

12 ¶ And if thy brother, an Hebrew man, or an Hebrew woman, be sold unto thee, and serve thee six years, then in the seventh year thou shalt let him go free from thee.

13 And when thou sendest him out free from thee, thou shalt not let him go away empty:

14 Thou shalt furnish him liberally out of thy flock, and out of thy floor, and out of thy wine-press: of that wherewith the LORD thy God hath blessed thee thou shalt give unto him.

15 And thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in the land of Egypt, and the LORD thy God redeemed thee: therefore I command thee this thing to-day.

16 And it shall be, if he say unto thee, I will not go away from thee; (because he loveth thee and thine house, because he is well with thee;)

17 Then thou shalt take an awl, and thrust it through his ear unto the door, and he shall be thy servant for ever:<sup>8</sup> and also unto thy maid-servant thou shalt do likewise.<sup>9</sup>

18 It shall not seem hard unto thee when thou sendest him away free from thee; for he hath been worth a double hired servant to thee, in serving thee six years: and the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all that thou doest.

19 ¶ All the firstling males that come of thy herd, and of thy flock, thou shalt sanctify unto the LORD thy God: thou shalt do no work with the firstling of thy bullock, nor shear the firstling of thy sheep:

20 Thou shalt eat it before the LORD thy God year by year, in the place which the LORD shall choose, thou and thy household.

21 And if there be any blemish therein, as if it be lame, or blind, or have any ill blemish, thou shalt not sacrifice it unto the LORD thy God:

9 This form of procedure was gone through under the cognizance of the magistrate, Ex. 21. 5. 6. Whatever was the meaning or origin of this practice, it was one common in the East, and is very frequently alluded to by ancient heathen writers. Some such regulations were of great importance both to the slave, to show that there was on the one hand no claim to detain him beyond the period of release if he did not desire it; and on the other no pretence for turning him off when old or enfeebled, or unable to provide for himself. It appears from the passage that female servants were purchased for labour only as well as males, and that they were under the same regulation.—P.

¶ When the pass-over was first instituted, the lambs were ordered to be killed in each house, the blood sprinkled on the door-posts, and the flesh roasted and eaten within. Here a great change is made. They were expressly forbidden to kill the paschal lamb in their houses; the lambs were all to be taken to the tabernacle or temple, and killed there by the priests alone. It will be observed, too, that the killing of the lamb is here called a sacrifice, i.e. an animal slain and offered to God as an expiation for sin. So the apostle says, 'Christ, our passover, is sacrificed for us.' The passover was one of the three great feasts which it was necessary for all adult males to observe in Jerusalem.—P.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 The feast of the passover, 9 of weeks, 13 of tabernacles. 16 Every male must offer, as he is able, at these three feasts. 18 Of judges and justice. 21 Groves and images are forbidden.

OBSERVE the month of Abib, and keep the passover unto the LORD thy God: for in the month of Abib the LORD thy God brought thee forth out of Egypt by night.

2 Thou shalt therefore sacrifice the passover unto the LORD thy God, of the flock and the herd, in the place which the LORD shall choose to place his name there.

3 Thou shalt eat no leavened bread with it; seven days shalt thou eat unleavened bread therewith, even the bread of affliction; (for thou camest forth out of the land of Egypt in haste;) that thou mayest remember the day when thou camest forth out of the land of Egypt all the days of thy life.

4 And there shall be no leavened bread seen with thee in all thy coast seven days; neither shall there any thing of the flesh, which thou sacrificedst the first day at even, remain all night until the morning.

5 Thou mayest not sacrifice the passover within any of thy gates, which the LORD thy God giveth thee:

6 But at the place which the LORD thy God shall choose to place his name in, there thou shalt sacrifice the passover at even, at the going down of the sun, at the season that thou camest forth out of Egypt.

7 And thou shalt roast and eat it in the place which the LORD thy God shall choose; and thou shalt turn in the morning, and go unto thy tents.<sup>1</sup>

8 Six days<sup>2</sup> thou shalt eat unleavened bread, and on the seventh day shall be a solemn assembly<sup>3</sup> to the LORD thy God; thou shalt do no work therein.

9 ¶ Seven weeks shalt thou number unto thee: begin to number the seven weeks from such time as thou beginnest to put the sickle to the corn.

10 And thou shalt keep the feast of weeks unto the LORD thy God with<sup>4</sup> a tribute<sup>5</sup> of a free-will-offering of thine hand, which thou shalt give unto the LORD thy God, according as the LORD thy God hath blessed thee:

11 And thou shalt rejoice before the LORD and it is not so much the gift as the temper of the giver that he regards. Servants likewise ought to be treated with tenderness and kindness, especially if found faithful.—It is important to watch against every suggestion which may divert us from our duty, or discourage us in it.—But while in these firstlings I see Jesus, and all his redeemed, devoted to the honour of God, according to their respective purity and stations, let me think with what exactness everything belonging to the Lord ought to be used in his service in the very manner prescribed by himself.

CHAPTER XVI. [Ver. 21. Trees near unto the altar of the Lord. The famous Roman law of the twelve tables enjoined the planting and preservation of sacred groves—the law of God expressly and repeatedly denounces them, De. 12. 3. The reason of the difference is plain; heathenism sanctioned a system that not only legalized but attempted to sanctify impurity, by the character of its deities and the nature of their worship; nay, according to the testimony of Pliny (b. xii. c. 1), the heathen not only adored the images glittering with gold and silver, but the groves themselves, and their solemn silence. In a warm climate, the temptation to retire to shady groves being great, God proportions to that circumstance the frequency and speciality of their prohibition. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Is it not shameful, that even the most solemn ordinances of our fellowship with God should need to be so frequently inculcated upon us? But since Jesus, our passover, hath been sacrificed for us, and our pentecost, the effusion of the Holy Ghost by an ascended Saviour, is fully come, and the tabernacle of God is in manhood, and is with men upon earth; with holy joy and gladness let us, and others instigated by us, observe our solemn feasts, and keep our eyes always fixed upon the Lamb of God. And while we ourselves are comforted of Christ, let us remember that it is both honourable and godlike to s This prohibition is founded upon principles natural and moral. (1) Canaan was a land of mountains and defiles, and unfit either for the rearing of horses or the use of cavalry. (2) God seeks to prevent intercourse with Egypt, which was anciently famous for horses. (3) He would restrain the spirit of conquest, which, in eastern countries, has been chiefly fostered by the possession of a numerous cavalry. (4) He would repress that spirit of extravagance and gambling—though the world calls them by gentler names—which is generated, especially among the rich, by the competition of horses; and which, in all countries where it has been fostered, has resulted in the dissipation of the manners of all ranks.—C.

7 The law here referred to, which the king was to copy, or have copied, for his private use and guidance, unquestionably signifies the Pentateuch—the whole of it as it was preserved in the keeping of the priests. What a noble lesson this is for the kings and rulers of the earth! The law of God should be their constant study; their guide in the management of public affairs; their rule of life in private.—P.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 The Lord is the priests' and Levites' inheritance. 3 The priest's due. 6 The Levite's portion. 9 The abominations of the nations are to be avoided. 15 Christ the prophet is to be heard. 20 The presumptuous prophet is to die.

THE priests the Levites, and all the tribe of Levi, shall have no part nor inheritance with Israel: they shall eat the offerings of the LORD made by fire, and his inheritance.

2 Therefore shall they have no inheritance among their brethren; the LORD is their inheritance, as he hath said unto them.

3 ¶ And this shall be the priest's due from the people, from them that offer a sacrifice, whether it be ox or sheep; and they shall give unto the priest the shoulder, and the two cheeks, and the maw.

4 The first-fruit also of thy corn, of thy wine, and of thine oil, and the first of the fleece of thy sheep, shalt thou give him.

5 For the LORD thy God hath chosen him out of all thy tribes, to stand to minister in the name of the LORD, him and his sons for ever.

6 ¶ And if a Levite come from any of thy gates out of all Israel, where he sojourned, and come with all the desire of his mind unto the place which the LORD shall choose;

7 Then he shall minister in the name of the LORD his God, as all his brethren the Levites do, which stand there before the LORD.

8 They shall have like portions to eat, besides that which cometh of the sale of his patrimony.

and remarkable integrity. But dangerous is it, in the worship of God, to copy after the example of wicked and idolatrous men; his worship is pure and spiritual; he regards not the external appearance; but they who worship him, must worship him in spirit and in truth.

CHAPTER XVII. [Ver. 12. At first sight this seems a hard law, and even cruel, that the person who should object to or fail to carry out the sentence of priest or judge in any civil case should be put to death. It would have been both unjust and cruel had the priest been a mere temporal ruler; but he was the commissioned minister of God, and it is implied here that in cases of great difficulty and delicacy, such as those referred to, he should ask counsel of God. God, therefore, was the real judge in the case; and a refusal to submit to his judgment was treason against heaven. P.]

Ver. 14. [I will set a king over me, like as all the nations that are about me. Moses, foreseeing by the prophetic spirit that the tide in popular opinion would one day turn in favour of monarchy, so far from pronouncing any authoritative opinion concerning the theoretical forms of government, addresses himself, by divine direction, to propound the true maxims and principles of all government. And when the period foreseen by Moses arrived, and the people demanded a king, 1 Sa. viii., the displeasure of Samuel neither arose from any sense of wounded pride or disappointed ambition, nor from any abstract objection to the kingly form of government, but from the self-will and practical atheism of the people, who never thought of consulting God upon so great an organic change, though Samuel was with them with Urim and Thummim. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—We ought to honour the Lord with the best that we have—the best of our time and abilities, the best of our age and strength. But apostasy from the true religion to the worship of idols is extremely wicked and ruinous. It is necessary that the execution of malefactors be as public and solemn as possible, that others may hear and fear. But, in matters of life and death, nothing less than the clearest evidence should be admitted. Great care must be taken at once to maintain the just rights of subjects and the lawful authority of magistrates: and we must obey, not only for wrath, but also for conscience' sake. To rebel against the lawful orders of government is to commit treason against the majesty of heaven. But, in order to secure respect to their government, magistrates ought to be deliberately set up: they ought to avoid whatever gratifies their lust or tends to corrupt them. God's word should be the supreme standard of their determinations. Piety, prudence, humble condescension, and equity should run through the whole of their conduct. No day should pass without reading of God's word. The fear of God powerfully induces to an obedience to his commands. And the higher our station is, the more exemplary and humble our conversation ought to be. Religion is the best security of thrones, and every other honour: and even in this world there is a great reward in keeping God's commandments.

CHAPTER XVIII. [Ver. 3. And the two cheeks and the maw. There is a difference between the Levitical portion here described, and that in Le. 7. 3. The reason of the difference seems to be, that the direction in Leviticus referred to the temporary allowance in the wilderness, that of the text to the permanent provision in Canaan; see De. 12. 1. C.—Delitzsch says, 'That this arrangement was not at variance with the command in Le. 7. 32, sq., but simply enjoins a further gift to the priests on the part of the people, in addition to those portions which were to be given to the Lord for his servants, is sufficiently evident from the context, since the heave-leg and wave-breast belonged to the offerings of Jehovah mentioned in ver. 1, which the priests had received as an inheritance from the Lord; . . . and also from the words of the present command, viz. that the portions mentioned were to be a right on the part of the people, on the part of those who slaughtered slain-offerings. P.]

Ver. 10. [Divination. This appears to be a general name for all the particular forms that follow, viz.—Observer of times. Some derive it from a word signifying a cloud; others, amongst whom is Gesenius, from a word signifying an eye. This is the most probable meaning, and includes every form of threatened injury to person or property from what is called an evil eye.—An enchanter. A pretended diviner by serpents, or the positions and movements of other animals.—A witch. One who resorts to charms, &c., for the injury of another.—A charmer. Most probably those who pretended to charm serpents, and produce strange effects by rhymes and incantations.—Consulter with familiar spirits. According to the Hebrew, a consulter with Ob. Thus, the Pythonesse at Delphi, in Greece, pretended to be inspired by Apollo.—Wizard. 'A cunning man,' one who pretended to know secret things, past, present, or future.—Necromancer. One who pretended to consult or raise the dead, as the word signifies.—All these pretended arts are the products of ignorance, the nurses of superstition, and the forerunners and abettors of idolatry, and therefore most righteously condemned of God. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Since God hath provided subsistence for ministers, they ought never willingly to entangle themselves in worldly business—farming, merchandise, or the like: for those who love God's ordinances as they ought, will not grudge to contribute to their support. None ought to supplant another with respect to what the Lord hath allotted him. But a worldly-minded minister is a SCANDAL to his profession—a LIVING LIE! God, indeed, most highly regards such ministers as leave their worldly all, and follow him, and do more in the church than men could desire of them. But it is shocking to find in countries privileged with gospel light, affectors of fellowship with devils, in charms, fortune-telling, witchcraft, and the like! and what a mercy it is if God has preserved us

INSCRPTION ON BRIDGE, GRAND MOSQUE, DAMASCUS—WHERE ST. PAUL WAS CONVERTED. [DEUT., xviii: 15-19.]—"The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken." The prophet referred to in this verse is the Lord Jesus Christ. He was the one who was to come in the fullness of time, who, according to Isaiah, was to be called the Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace, and who was to sit upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom to order it, and to establish it with judgment, and with justice from henceforth even forever. How strange that upon the Grand Mosque in Damascus we should find written in Greek on the bridge: "Thy kingdom, O Christ, is an everlasting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations." The Grand Mosque, an illustration of which we give above, is the most famous place of Mahommedan worship in Damascus.

9 ¶ When thou art come into the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not learn to do after the abominations of those nations.

10 There shall not be found among you any one that maketh his son or his daughter to pass through the fire, or that useth divination, or an observer of times, or an enchanter, or a witch, 11 Or a charmer, or a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer.

12 For<sup>a</sup> all that do these things are an abomination unto the LORD: and because of these abominations the LORD thy God doth drive them out from before thee.

13 Thou shalt be perfect with the LORD thy God.

14 For these nations, which thou shalt possess,<sup>2</sup> hearkened unto observers of times, and unto diviners: but as for thee, the LORD thy God hath not suffered thee so to do.

15 ¶ The LORD thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken;

16 According to all that thou desiredst of the LORD thy God in Horeb, in the day of the assembly, saying, Let me not hear again the voice of the LORD my God, neither let me see this great fire any more, that I die not.

17 And the LORD said unto me, They have well spoken that which they have spoken.

18 I will raise them up a Prophet<sup>3</sup> from among thy brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth; and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him.<sup>4</sup>

19 And it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words, which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him.

20 ¶ But the prophet which shall presume to speak a word in my name, which I have not commanded him to speak, or that shall speak in the name of other gods, even that prophet shall die.

21 ¶ And if thou say in thine heart, How shall we know the word which the LORD hath not spoken?

22 When a prophet speaketh in the name of the LORD, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the LORD hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously: thou shalt not be afraid of him.

giveth thee, and thou succeedest<sup>1</sup> them, and dwellest in their cities, and in their houses;

2 Thou<sup>b</sup> shalt separate three cities for thee in the midst of thy land,<sup>2</sup> which the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it.

3 Thou shalt prepare thee a way,<sup>3</sup> and divide the coasts of thy land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee to inherit, into three parts, that every slayer may flee thither.

4 ¶ And this is the case of the slayer which shall flee thither, that he may live: Whoso killeth his neighbour ignorantly, whom he hated not in time past;<sup>4</sup>

5 As when a man goeth into the wood with his neighbour to hew wood, and his hand fetcheth a stroke with the axe to cut down the tree, and the head<sup>5</sup> slippeth from the helve, and lighteth<sup>7</sup> upon his neighbour, that he die; he shall flee unto one of those cities, and live:

6 Lest the avenger of the blood pursue the slayer, while his heart is hot, and overtake him, because the way is long, and slay him;<sup>8</sup> whereas he was not worthy of death, inasmuch as he hated him not in time past.<sup>9</sup>

7 Wherefore I command thee, saying, Thou shalt separate three cities for thee.

8 And if the LORD thy God enlarge thy coast, as he hath sworn unto thy fathers, and give thee all the land which he promised to give unto thy fathers:

9 If<sup>a</sup> thou shalt keep all these commandments to do them, which I command thee this day, to love the LORD thy God, and to walk ever in his ways; then shalt thou add<sup>1</sup> three cities more for thee, besides these three.<sup>2</sup>

10 That innocent blood be not shed in thy land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance, and so blood be upon thee.

11 ¶ But if any man hate his neighbour, and lie in wait for him, and rise up against him, and smite him<sup>3</sup> mortally that he die, and fleeth into one of these cities;

12 Then the elders of his city shall send and fetch him thence, and deliver him into the hand of the avenger of blood, that he may die.

13 Thine<sup>m</sup> eye shall not pity him; but thou shalt put away the guilt of innocent blood from Israel, that it may go well with thee.

14 ¶ Thou<sup>n</sup> shalt not remove thy neighbour's land-mark,<sup>4</sup> which they of old time have set in thine inheritance, which thou shalt inherit in the land that the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it.

SIDE ALTAR, LATIN CHURCH, NAZARETH—SUPPOSED TO STAND OVER THE SITE OF JOSEPH'S HOME, IN WHICH JESUS GREW UP. [DEUT., xix.]—The 19th chapter of Deuteronomy speaks of the laws concerning the cities of refuge. We give as an illustration of this portion of Deuteronomy the side altar of the Latin church at Nazareth. This church stands in the city of our Savior's boyhood, and is said to be built on the site of the house in which with His parents He lived. The cities of refuge in a very important sense were all types of Christ. Christ is the great city of refuge and all are safe who flee from their sins to Him, and none are safe who are away from Him. The penitent one who has fled to Christ refuge may sing:

"Should storms of seven-fold thunder roll,
And shake the globe from pole to pole,
No flaming bolt shall daunt my face,
For Jesus is my hiding place."

sin that he sinneth: at the mouth of two witnesses, or at the mouth of three witnesses, shall the matter be established.

16 ¶ If a false witness rise up against any man, to testify against him that which is wrong;

17 Then both the men, between whom the controversy is, shall stand <sup>2</sup>before the LORD,<sup>6</sup> before the priests and the judges which shall be in those days:

18 And the judges shall <sup>4</sup>make diligent inquisition: and, behold, if the witness be a false witness,<sup>7</sup> and hath testified falsely against his brother;

19 Then* shall ye do unto him as he had thought to have done unto his brother: so shalt thou put the evil away from among you.

20 And those which remain shall <sup>4</sup>hear, and fear, and shall henceforth commit no more any such evil among you.

21 And thine eye shall not pity; but <sup>4</sup>life shall go for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot.

WHEN thou <sup>4</sup>goest out to battle against thine enemies, and seest horses and chariots, and a people more than thou, <sup>4</sup>be not afraid of them; for the LORD thy God is with thee, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

2 And it shall be, when ye are come nigh unto the battle, that the <sup>4</sup>priest shall approach and speak unto the people,

3 And shall say unto them, Hear, O Israel; Ye approach this day unto battle against your enemies: let not your hearts faint;<sup>1</sup> fear not, and do not <sup>2</sup>tremble, <sup>4</sup>neither be ye terrified because of them:

4 For the LORD your God is he that goeth with you, to fight for you against your enemies, to save you.

5 ¶ And the <sup>4</sup>officers shall speak unto the people, saying, What man is there that hath built a new house, and hath not <sup>4</sup>dedicated it? <sup>3</sup>let him go and return to his house, lest he <sup>4</sup>die in the battle, and another man dedicate it.

6 And what man is he that hath planted a vineyard, and hath not yet <sup>4</sup>heaten of it? let him

6 Suits at law frequently originate from dishonesty, from covetousness, or from a contentious and revengeful spirit. But such is the obscurity of rights, and the uncertainty of evidence, that they may originate where both parties are honest, disinterested, and peaceable. The only case in which a Christian may go to law in defence of his rights is when he can stand before the Lord, and refer to his examination and decision both the justice of his cause and the purity of his motives.—C.

these cities of refuge I again view a crucified Redeemer, as my near and all-sufficient protection, and his ministers as assisting and directing me in my flight to it, plain and open is my way to it, and my warrant to enter. Yet so great is our ignorance, our unconcern, our unbelief, that we need many and repeated descriptions of him, and encouragements to flee to him; and God graciously affords them in his word. Happy are they who embrace the promise! But desperate is their case who sin presumptuously, and refuse this great salvation! Nay, how criminal, in God's sight, must wilful murder be, when nothing less than the blood of the offender can be admitted as the punishment of it! Everything that marks out and ascertains men's property should be exactly preserved, that so disputes and unjust evasions may be prevented: and witnesses should be examined in the courts of judicature with accuracy and care, that none may suffer unjustly through false witnessing, and none that dare to bear false witness may escape condign punishment.

CHAPTER XX. REFLECTIONS.—While we remark how carefully piety towards God, tenderness towards others, and prudence towards ourselves, should be carried into war itself, let us ponder how necessary it is that armies and churches should be furnished with faithful ministers to encourage them in the Lord their God! Hopeful is the most difficult work when we are assured of God's presence in it, and encouraged with the former experience of what he hath done for us! Then we can triumph, in hopes of being more than conquerors through him that loved us. But there is little hope of men's prospering in their duty when their affections are engaged elsewhere: and therefore carnal worldlings, who are intoxicated with pleasure in temporal enjoyments, or the fearful and unbelieving, are

In warm climates, fresh or preserved fruits constitute a principal article of food: a law for the preservation of fruit-trees was therefore an ordinance of equal wisdom and humanity. But this law, like other of the divine institutions, was still further intended to check and restrain the spirit of aggressive war, which, like the wolf in the fold, destroys what it can neither retain nor carry away.—Note, The distinguishing humanity of the Mosaic laws stands prominent among the evidences of their divine origin.—C.

This follows very properly after the law he had delivered about making war; because then the bodies of dead men were most frequently found; about which the wise lawyers took the greatest care that inquisition should be made how and by whom they were slain. This appears by Plato, who in his ninth book, De Legibus, hath a law something like to this, though far short of the solemnity that is here required to be used.—Patrick.

The institution of the coroner's inquest in British legislation is the nearest approach in modern times to this ancient and divine ordinance. This ordinance answers all the ends of the inquest, and with circumstances of more search and solemnity, while the religious aspect and management of the whole process gives evidence of an appointment from God, and not from man.—C.

9 So shalt thou put away the guilt of innocent blood from among you, when thou shalt do that which is right in the sight of the LORD.

10 ¶ When thou goest forth to war against thine enemies, and the LORD thy God hath delivered them into thine hands, and thou hast taken them captive,

11 And seest among the captives a beautiful woman, and hast a desire unto her, that thou wouldest have her to thy wife;

12 Then thou shalt bring her home to thine house, and she shall shave her head, and pare her nails;

13 And she shall put the raiment of her captivity from off her, and shall remain in thine house, and bewail her father and her mother a full month: and after that thou shalt go in unto her, and be her husband, and she shall be thy wife.<sup>6</sup>

14 And it shall be, if thou have no delight in her, then thou shalt let her go whither she will; but thou shalt not sell her at all for money, thou shalt not make merchandise<sup>7</sup> of her, because thou hast humbled her.

15 ¶ If a man have two wives,<sup>8</sup> one beloved, and another hated, and they have born him children, both the beloved and the hated; and if the first-born son be her's that was hated:

16 Then it shall be, when he maketh his sons to inherit that which he hath, that he may not make the son of the beloved first-born before the son of the hated, which is indeed the first-born:

17 But he shall acknowledge the son of the hated for the first-born, by giving him a double portion of all that<sup>9</sup> he hath: for he is the beginning of his strength; the right of the first-born is his.<sup>1</sup>

18 ¶ If a man have a stubborn and rebellious son, which will not obey the voice of his father, or the voice of his mother, and that, when they unfit to fight with principalities and powers. God must be served heartily and willingly, or not at all. And though every saint ought to be courageous, yet ministers, who go before the host in fighting the Lord's battles, need distinguished boldness. Amazing is the mercy and long-suffering of God; he is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance! And surely then we ought to be forward in accepting, or even offering, terms of peace to such as have offended us! But dreadful is the case if men will not hear the calls of God's mercy, or if the preservation of his people make it necessary to ruin them: for infallibly certain is the success of those enterprises in which God is the director! It is necessary to remove all occasions and temptations to idolatry, or other wickedness, and to preserve every means of comfort, as God pleases to direct us.

CHAPTER XXI. [Ver. 18. A stubborn and rebellious son. This provides for an extreme case of filial rebellion; for nothing but an extreme case could ever induce both a father and mother deliberately to accuse and witness against their own child. The sentence of death against drunkenness and gluttony, ver. 20, 21, may, to the modern inventors of fine and imprisonment, appear unreasonable, or even inhumanly severe. But, let it be remembered, the sentence could not be inflicted, unless in the scarcely supposable case in which a father and mother were the hapless accusers; and then let it be remembered, that this was the sentence of him 'who knew what was in man,' and who never applied the judgment of severity till the remedies of mercy had been found unavailing; and whose judgments of severity were, in the end, the most merciful to the individual whom they sought to intimidate and deter from sin; and to society, whom they relieved from a nuisance, an infection, and a curse. O! that drunkards and gluttons would read first this sentence, and then sentences ten thousand times more awful, 1 Co. 6:10 and Phil. 3:19, C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Murder ought by all means to be rendered as horrible and detested as possible: and every mean should be used to discover and bring murderers to condign punishment, and to avoid being partakers with other men in their sins; but, at the same time, do selfish affection ought to be regarded either in the giving or executing justice. However secretly sin be committed, God will discover and punish it at last: and if we cannot put away sin from our land, let us labour to pray it away.—Converts from idolatry ought not too rashly to be admitted into close connection with us: and before we take a partner for life, it is of infinite moment that we agree in religion.—Sudden passions ought to be restrained, till grace be given, and time taken for reflection: and we should labour to wean our affections from that which we inordinately love.—Kindness ought to be shown to such as God has mercifully reduced to misery and trouble; and indulgence be allowed to sorrows which flow from natural affection.—Our engagements ought never to be rashly formed, lest our honour or conscience be afterwards wounded by them; and such as have been always wronged by us are entitled to all possible satisfaction. But surely still greater regard ought to be shown to human souls, and care taken to prevent men's everlasting infamy and woe. But in these figures let me behold Jesus, the seed of the woman, brought down to our world, and slain by the rulers of Israel as a sacrifice for our awful crimes!—Jesus reserving

PLOWING ON SCOPUS—IN SIGHT OF THE PLACE WHERE CHRIST WAS CRUCIFIED.
 [DEUT., xxi: 22.]—"And if a man have committed a sin worthy of death, and he be to be put to death, and thou hang him on a tree." We give this view of plowing on Scopus because it is in sight of the Mount Calvary, outside of the walls of Jerusalem, where the leading authorities now believe Christ was crucified. Scopus is a hill to the north of Jerusalem, and in reaching it from the Damascus gate we go directly by the Place of a Skull, where in all probability Christ was crucified. To be put to death on a tree was the most ignominious manner of death known among the Jews. None but the vilest criminals were subjected to such disgrace. So Peter knew how the Jews would regard his words when he said: "The God of our fathers raised up Jesus whom ye slew and hanged on a tree."

20 And they shall say unto the elders of his city, This our son is stubborn and rebellious, he will not obey our voice; he is a glutton and a drunkard.

21 And <sup>all</sup> the men of his city shall stone him with stones, that he die: so <sup>shalt</sup> thou put evil away from among you; and all Israel shall hear, and fear.

22 ¶ And if a man have committed a sin worthy<sup>a</sup> of death, and he be to be put to death, and thou <sup>hang</sup> him on a tree,

23 His body shall not <sup>remain</sup> all night upon the tree, but thou shalt in any wise bury him that day; (for <sup>he</sup> that is hanged is accursed<sup>2</sup> of God;) that <sup>thy</sup> land be not defiled, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance.

1 This law, so benevolent in every state of society, was peculiarly important in a country uninclosed, and where the straying of animals would be proportionately frequent and dangerous. The laws of man devising, in case of straying animals, bind to restitution or justice: human laws, in some other instances, reward humanity with honour or emolument; the divine laws alone bind to humanity and benevolence on the ground of principle, and that without fee or reward beyond the approbation of conscience and the will of our God.—C.

3 Minute legislation, when confined to detail, is always, in the end, perplexing and inefficient, and is the chief both of the vexatious and miseries of human laws—ever generating doubtful definitions, opening new doors for evasion, and ministering to the spirit of litigiousness. When, as in the text, the laws of Moses descend to minuteness, it is the minuteness of principle, and not of detail; and in this they manifest a legislative wisdom which should prove to every jurist that their origin was from God. This law provided for propriety and modesty, in a climate where male and female dresses approached near to each other in character, and guarded against the licentiousness of idolatry to which the interchange of male and female attire greatly contributed.—C.

5 Eastern roofs are generally flat, and in common houses, merely clay smoothed with a roller—a battlement was therefore a necessary defence against falling, the more requisite because the climate frequently invited to sit, eat, and even sleep, on the roof, and in the open air.

6 During my residence in the East I knew several cases of serious and fatal accidents by falling from the roofs of houses. Not less than one-half of the inhabitants of Palestine sleep on the flat roofs during the warm summer nights. To have them without battlements or railings would expose the children especially to constant danger.—P.

The dread of a future discovery, productive of such tremendous consequences, could not fail to increase the natural barriers of chastity, and counteract the effects of sinful passions and strong temptations among the young women of Israel. And it would also prevent the hard-hearted husband from robbing his injured wife of her reputation, when his attractions were transferred to another object.—Scott.

3 Divorce is not here commanded, but permitted, and the manner of it prescribed; and to prevent rashness, it was to be transacted very solemnly.—[This is to be understood as part of the judicial law, and to be carried into effect under the eye of the civil magistrate. The moral law of the seventh commandment, and all that is implied in it, as illustrated and enforced by our Lord, still remained the same. And the permission of separation on the terms here specified was not a relaxation of the moral law, but an accommodation of the judicial to the existing habits and circumstances of the people of Israel, with a view to prevent cruelty to those wives who might be some bodily defect, disease, or ceremonial defilement. But to prevent rash and capricious divorces, the husband in such a case must have a regularly prepared and authenticated legal instrument; and the parties can never come together again. Our Lord tells us the reason of this permission of the judicial law: 'because of the hardness of their hearts'—but from the beginning it was not so. In the moral law, as interpreted by him, it is expressly prohibited.—C.]

glory has been the excitement of the brave; plunder of the mercenary; licentiousness of the profligate: but of the Jewish soldier it is required that 'when the host goeth forth against enemies, he keep himself from every wicked thing.' Translate this ancient ordinance into modern words, and it will form 'an order of the day' unparalleled in the annals of nations. C.]

Ver. 18. [Abomination unto the Lord thy God. Impurity constituted a part of heathen worship, and a dedicated prostitution was employed to support some of their temples. The Egyptians worshipped Anubis under the form of a dog; and hence such unhallowed gains are specifically rejected from the house of the Lord.—Note, God abominates the principle that makes the price of sin the purchase of pardon. C.]

Ver. 19. [Thou shalt not lend upon usury to thy brother. The former laws of loan, Ex. 22. 25; Le. 25. 36, forbade the exaction of usury from the poor only. Here there is a total prohibition of usury for money lent by one Jew to another, whether rich or poor. Why this addition? why this prohibition? and why especially when the Jew is freely permitted to lend on usury to a stranger? (1) This addition, like several others, is now made to the law, with a view to the state of society in Canaan, into which the people were about to enter, De. 12. 1. While they were in the wilderness, without any fixed residence, there could be little if any occasion for the rich to borrow, and as little apparent security for any to lend. The poor only required protection.

(2) The prohibition of usury between Jew and Jew rests first, upon the implied principle of brotherhood in the whole nation; secondly, upon the fact, that God did not intend them for a commercial but for an agricultural people, as all their institutions testify. (3) The permission, and implied encouragement, of lending on usury to a stranger, founded upon the general principle that a fair profit on the loan of money is in itself as just as profit upon any other property, was a wise speciality; as, by bringing commercial men, the great political peace-bonds of the world, into contact with the Jews, some knowledge of the true religion would be diffused in the nations; and, when prospectively considered, it was mercifully calculated to accustom the Jews to such foreign management of money, as would prepare them either for the disasters of threatened exile, or for the period of their promised return to their own land. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is unseemly for saints to connect themselves in intimacy or marriage with profane persons: but whoremongers unnaturally mark their innocent posterity with shame and disgrace. God severely resents the injury done to his people in the day of their distress. But we ought quickly to forget the evil done to us by our relations or others; and carefully to remember the favours which we have received. Purity and cleanliness should be studied together with godliness, as they are both healthful and honourable, especially that of the heart and life, before God. How becoming is a tender compassion towards the afflicted, especially young converts to Christ! For great is the mercy of God to such—he will never deliver up a poor fugitive, that flees to him from the servitude of sin or of the broken law. Let me admire his grace, and imitate his goodness—let me carefully abstain from fleshly lusts, which provoke God and war against my soul. In all my dealings, let brotherly love continue. And if I have vowed unto the Lord, let me in no wise go back. Let me be kind to strangers, ready to dis- tribute, and never insist upon trifling rights and claims.

CHAPTER XXIV. REFLECTIONS.—Harmony in sin often issues in mutual hatred and angry separation. And it is mournful to observe, that, for the cruelty and hatred of husbands to wives, or other injurious effects of sin, God should see it necessary to permit the divorcement of them. But such a separation ought to be taken with great deliberation, as there is such hardship connected with it, and no recalling of ture of St. Mary's Well, or the Fountain of the Virgin, in Nazareth. Through all the precepts of this 24th chapter there are to be seen intimations and suggestions of the charity and humanity and good will that Christ came into the world to teach and to express through his own life. So this picture of the Virgin's Fountain in Nazareth, where Christ grew up, is a good illustration of that spirit of humanity and good will and blessing we see emphasized in Christ.

The dealer having a stone of different weights, one light to sell with, and another heavier to buy with, even when the apparent size was the same, could not be so easily detected. Murderers who had escaped punishment long have been condemned to death by the most civilized modern nations after a lapse of half a century. Why should the infidel censure Moses for what all just laws enforce?—C.

it. Happy is it when the mutual affection of married persons is fixed at first, and remains with prudent tenderness. How necessary is it to observe God's ordinances, however shameful they may be to us! It is better now to confess our sin and be pardoned, than to conceal it and be lost. Superiors, and especially judges, who are the substitutes of God, ought to conduct themselves in every case with equity and truth. And with great compassion ought we to treat our neighbours, especially the poor, as their circumstances may require: though they cannot recompense us with their wealth or labour, they may do it with their prayers. And let us consider the great compassion God has towards them. But how great his kindness in leaving to us, sinners of the Gentiles, in his word, such plentiful gleanings of divine truth!

cruelty, even towards evil-doers, nay, towards brute beasts, especially when serviceable to us, is very unbecoming the professors of Christianity. It is impossible to force affection, or to render a marriage happy without it. But the Christian in every situation must attend to the path of duty: and they deserve reproach themselves who give occasion to cast reproach on others. Wilt thou fearful shame and dishonour must then await those ministers and Christians who reproach, and attempt to

GARDEN IN SECOND STORY OF MUSEUM—PALACE OF A MODERN PHARAOH OF EGYPT. [DEUT, xxvi: 6.]—"And the Egyptians evil entreated us, and afflicted us, and laid upon us hard bondage." The disposition of the reigning classes in Egypt to oppress the toiling masses and to afflict them with hard bondage continues unto this day to be a characteristic of the rulers here. This great palace of Gizeh, built by Ismail-Pasha at a cost of about $25,000,000, literally represents so much wealth extracted from the poor laboring people of Egypt. Ismail-Pasha put upon the Egyptian government the enormous debt of $500,000,000. The people so groaned under the burden of debt that the powers at Constantinople were forced to depose him, and to confiscate his landed properties and residences. The view above given represents a scene in the garden of the second story of this palace known as the Harem Garden.

AND it shall be, when <sup>a</sup>thou art come in unto <sup>b</sup>the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance, and possessest it, and dwellest therein,<sup>1</sup>

2 That thou shalt take of the first of all the fruit of the earth, which thou shalt bring of thy land that the LORD thy God giveth thee, and shalt put it in a basket, and shalt go unto the place which the LORD thy God shall choose to place his name there.

3 And thou shalt go unto the priest that shall be in those days, and say unto him, I profess this day unto the LORD thy God, that I am come unto the country which the LORD sware unto our fathers for to give us.

4 And the priest shall take the basket out of thine hand, and set it down before the altar of the LORD thy God.

5 And thou shalt speak and say before the LORD thy God, A Syrian<sup>2</sup> ready to perish<sup>3</sup> was my father; and he went down into Egypt, and sojourned there with a few, and became there a nation, great, mighty, and populous:

6 And the Egyptians evil-entreated us, and afflicted us, and laid upon us hard bondage:

7 And when we cried unto the LORD God of our fathers, the LORD heard our voice, and looked on our affliction, and our labour, and our oppression:

8 And the LORD brought us forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand, and with an outstretched arm, and with great terribleness, and with signs, and with wonders:

9 And he hath brought us into this place, and hath given us this land, even a land that floweth with milk and honey.

10 And now, behold, I have brought the first-fruits of the land which thou, O LORD, hast given me. And thou shalt set it before the LORD thy God, and worship before the LORD thy God.

11 And thou shalt rejoice in every good thing which the LORD thy God hath given unto thee, and unto thine house, thou, and the Levite, and the stranger that is among you.

ruin Christ and his church, by refusing to exert themselves in winning souls to them! Nothing is more shocking in a woman than immodesty, whether it be in the outrage of passion or in wanton lewdness. When once the hedge of modesty is broken through, the grossest unchastity may soon follow. Detestable to God, and hurtful to the user at last, is every act of fraud and dishonesty: and terrible and lasting, though often slow in the execution, is God's justice against the unprovoked injurers of his people.

CHAPTER XXVI. REFLECTIONS. — God faithfully and exactly fulfils his promises, even to the most unworthy. And a grateful acknowledgment thereof, and of our own meanness and guilt, is but a just tribute to him for his goodness. Past deliverances, granted to ourselves or others, ought never to be forgotten: and all our gifts of providence, as well as of redemption, must be acknowledged as coming from God's hand. The first and best thereof of all that we have ought to be offered up to his service: and our earthly blessings will then be doubly sweet to us when we receive them as coming to us from God's mercy and love. Let our distributions to the Lord's ministers and poor be such as we can answer for at the judgment-seat of God. Faithfulness in these will draw his blessing on our enjoyments; but if we rob him in them, we may expect his curse on our basket and on our

14 I have not eaten thereof in my mourning, neither have I taken away ought thereof for any unclean use, nor given ought thereof for the dead:<sup>5</sup> but I have hearkened to the voice of the LORD my God, and have done according to all that thou hast commanded me:

15 Look down from thy holy habitation, from heaven, and bless thy people Israel, and the land which thou hast given us, as thou swarest unto our fathers, a land that floweth with milk and honey.<sup>6</sup>

16 ¶ This day the LORD thy God hath commanded thee to do these statutes and judgments: thou shalt therefore keep and do them with all thine heart, and with all thy soul.

17 Thou hast avouched<sup>7</sup> the LORD this day to be thy God, and to walk in his ways, and to keep his statutes, and his commandments, and his judgments, and to hearken unto his voice:

18 And the LORD hath avouched thee this day to be his peculiar people, as he hath promised thee, and that thou shouldst keep all his commandments;

19 And to make thee high above all nations which he hath made, in praise, and in name, and in honour; and that thou mayest be an holy people unto the LORD thy God, as he hath spoken.

2 An Aramean. Jacob is so called not only because of his long residence in Aram, but also because his a were Aramean, his children with one exception were born there, and the foundation of his fortune was laid there.

3 Some translate the words, A Syrian persecuted my father—alluding to Laban's persecution of Jacob; others translate them, a wandering Syrian—alluding to the unsettled life of Abraham and his posterity. It is evidently intended as a corrective of the undue pride of ancestry, in to which the Jews subsequently fell. See Jn. 8. 33.—C.

8 This related to the second tithe before considered, ch. 14. 22-29. Two years together, they paid the Levites' tithe, and the festival tithe; but in the third year, they paid the Levites' tithe, and the poor man's tithe; that is, who was wont in other years to be spent in feasting, was wholly spent every third year upon the poor.—M. Quoted by Patrick.

9 Once in three years this solemn protestation was required from every proprietor of land in Canaan, probably in the presence of the priests at the tabernacle. They all declared that the whole of this second tithe had been employed to those purposes for which it was appropriated, and that no part had been used for any other purpose, or at funerals, which rendered them unlawful, or in any superstitious ceremony, in imitation of idolaters around them. As the matter lay very much between God and their conscience, this protestation was the more suitable, and would tend both to remind them of their duty, and render them afraid of neglecting it. ch. 12. 5-7; 18. 6.—C.

ARCHES, HAREM ESH-SHERIF—ON THE GROUND ONCE OCCUPIED BY SOLOMON'S TEMPLE. [DEUT., xxvi: 19.]—"And to make thee high above all nations which he hath made, in praise, and in name, and in honor; and that thou mayest be an holy people unto the Lord thy God, as he hath spoken." We give a view above of the arches found on the area once occupied by Solomon's Temple in Jerusalem. The temple as it stood upon this same spot was the center of the Jewish race, and to-day the Mosque of Omar that stands in its place is the pride and ornament of the city of Jerusalem. As God promised he did make of the Hebrews the highest of the nations of ancient times, and the city of Jerusalem the capital of the religion of humanity. And though the Holy City has been subjected to reverses one after another for thousands of years, it continues to be the most interesting city as far as its historic associations go to be found on the face of the globe.

EXTERIOR OF AMPHITHEATRE, PUTEOLI—THE PLACE OF NERO'S GREAT CRIMES.
 [DEUT., xxvii: 1.]—"And Moses with the elders of Israel commanded the people, saying, Keep all the commandments which I command you this day." The commandments which the Israelites were to keep were not arbitrary enactments imposed by the God of Moses and their God upon them alone. They were really the laws ordained for the government of the human race. The God of the Jew is the God of all mankind, and the God of the human conscience. And as cog corresponds with cog in the mechanical wheel, so the Mosaic law corresponds to the conscience of mankind. The Jews suffered national weakness and lost the high place intended for them in the mind of God because they violated these plain laws, revealed through Moses and affirmed by the very structure of human nature. We give a picture of the exterior of the Amphitheatre at Puteoli which serves to illustrate the fact that not only among the Jews, but among the Gentiles also, degradation and ruin come to the people who dare to transgress the simple laws of God.

LORD thy God, to observe, and to do all his commandments which I command thee this day, that the LORD thy God will set thee <sup>on</sup> high above all nations of the earth.<sup>1</sup>

2 And all these blessings shall <sup>come</sup> on thee, and overtake thee, if thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God.

3 Blessed<sup>a</sup> shalt thou be in the city, and blessed shalt thou be in the field.

4 Blessed shall be the fruit of thy body, and the fruit of thy ground, and the fruit of thy cattle, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep.

5 Blessed<sup>d</sup> shall be thy basket and thy store.<sup>2</sup>

6 Blessed shalt thou be when thou comest in, and blessed shalt thou be when thou goest out.

7 The LORD shall cause thine enemies that rise up against thee to be <sup>smitten</sup> before thy face: they shall come out against thee one way, and flee before thee seven ways.

8 The LORD shall command the blessing upon thee in thy storehouses,<sup>3</sup> and in all that thou settest thine hand unto; and he shall bless thee in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.<sup>4</sup>

9 The LORD shall <sup>establish</sup> thee an holy people unto himself, as he hath sworn unto thee, <sup>if</sup> thou shalt keep the commandments of the LORD thy God, and walk in his ways.

10 And all people of the earth shall <sup>see</sup> that thou art called by the name of the LORD; and they shall be afraid of thee.

11 And <sup>the</sup> LORD shall make thee plenteous in goods,<sup>5</sup> in the fruit of thy body,<sup>6</sup> and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy ground, in<sup>7</sup> the land which the LORD sware unto thy fathers to give thee.

12 The LORD shall open unto thee his good treasure, the heaven to give the rain unto thy land in his season, and to bless all the work of thine hand: and thou shalt lend unto many nations, and thou shalt not borrow.

13 And the LORD shall make thee the head, and not the tail; and thou shalt be above only,

1 Whether this promise include political, commercial, literary,

however highly esti-

Real superiority lies not in these things, but in the knowledge of God, in the possession of his oracles, ordinances, grace,

and promises—in all these, and now withstanding their sins,

the Jews are 'high

History extending that so long as the Jews were obedient they were blessed and own land by order from Cyrus, Ezr. i., were not only harassed by the neighbouring nations of Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites, Arabians, Philistines, and others, but also by the Persian and Grecian emperors; but most terribly by Ochus the Persian, about 350; and Antiochus Epiphanes, Da. 8. 23–25; 11. 28–35, about 160 years before Christ. But their most fearful calamities began to come upon them from the Romans, about sixty-five years after Christ. They invaded their country; and after manifold calamities, about A.D. 70, rendered it a desolate wilderness, burning their cities, slaying the inhabitants, it is probable to the number of some millions, and selling such as remained to the Egyptians and others for slaves. About A.D. 136 the Romans repeated their terrible slaughter of such Jews as they found in Canaan, and even in other places of their empire; and annual fairs were held for the sale of the captives. Since which, hated of all nations in Europe, Asia, or Africa, among which they have been dispersed, and often deluded by pretenders to Messiahship, they have, for these seventeen hundred years, been distressed with the most fearful calamities, persecutions, and massacres, from the Persians, Saracens, Turks, and Christians; but chiefly the Greeks, Spaniards, French, English, and Germans. Thus every promise or threatening respecting the Jewish nation is but a repetition or enlargement of what we have in this chapter and the first part of ch. 30. 1–9; and every event of Providence respecting that nation, from their entrance into Canaan till the end of time, is the accomplishment thereof.—See Introduction.

Ver. 9. [The Lord shall establish thee.] The general character of these blessings has led some Christian divines to conclude and admit that Moses employed none but temporal promises and threatenings as incentives to obedience, omitting altogether the mention of immortality. That he employed temporal promises is certain; for 'godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.' But that he likewise employed spiritual promises, even immortality and glory, this verse testifies; for he promises to establish them, not their posterity, 'a holy people,' 'unto himself,' implies and promises life coeval with his own. C.]

Ver. 24. [My experience of a simoom in southern Palestine will best illustrate these verses. 'As the day advanced the sircco came upon us, blowing across the great "Wilderness of Wandering." At first it was but a faint breath, hot and parching as if coming from a furnace. It increased slowly and steadily. Then a thick haze, of a dull yellow or brass colour, spread along the southern horizon, and advanced, rising and expanding, until it covered the whole face of the sky, leaving the sun, a red globe of fire, in the midst. We now knew and felt that it was the fierce simoom. In a few moments fine impalpable sand began to drift in our faces, entering every pore. Nothing could exclude it. It blew into our eyes, mouths, and nostrils, and penetrated our very clothes, causing the skin to contract, the lips to crack, and the eyes to burn. Respiration became difficult. We sometimes gasped for breath; and then the hot wind and hotter sand rushed into our mouths like a stream of liquid fire. We tried to urge on our horses; but though chafing against curb and rein only an hour before, they were now almost insensible to whip and spur. We looked and longed for shelter from that pitiless storm, and for water to slake our burning thirst; but there was none. No friendly house was there; no rock or bank, no murmur-

GENERAL VIEW OF THE FORUM—WHERE ST. PAUL WAS IMPRISONED. [DEUT., xxviii:20.]—"The Lord shall send upon thee cursing, vexation, and rebuke in all that thou settest thy hand unto to do, until thou be destroyed, and until thou perish quickly; because of the wickedness of thy doings, whereby thou hast forsaken me." Perhaps a general view of the Forum in Rome could not more fitly represent any portion of Scripture than that part contained in the verse above quoted. The cursing, vexation, and rebuke referred to above were to come upon the Jews, but wickedness brings cursing and destruction no less upon the other nations. There is no better place on the face of the earth to study the relation of penalty to violated law than the Roman Forum. It is the very heart and center of that mighty empire that came to a terrible ending because of its sins against the laws of God and of itself.

25 The LORD <sup>a</sup>shall cause thee to be smitten before thine enemies: thou shalt go out one way against them, and flee seven ways before them; and shalt be <sup>b</sup>removed into all the kingdoms of the earth.<sup>5</sup>

26 And thy <sup>c</sup>carcass shall be meat unto all fowls of the air, and unto the beasts of the earth, and no man shall fray them away.

27 The LORD will <sup>d</sup>smite thee with the botch of Egypt, and with the emerods, and with the scab, and with the itch, whereof thou canst not be healed.<sup>6</sup>

28 The LORD shall <sup>e</sup>smite thee with madness, and blindness, and astonishment of heart:

29 And thou shalt <sup>f</sup>grope at noon-day, as the blind gropeth in darkness, and thou shalt not prosper in thy ways; and thou shalt be only oppressed and spoiled evermore, and no man shall save thee.<sup>7</sup>

30 Thou shalt <sup>g</sup>betroth a wife, and another man shall lie with her: thou shalt build an house, and thou shalt not dwell therein: thou shalt plant a vineyard, and shalt not gather<sup>8</sup> the grapes thereof.

31 Thine ox shall be slain before thine eyes, and thou shalt not eat thereof: thine ass shall be violently taken away from before thy face, and shall not be restored to thee.<sup>9</sup> thy sheep shall be given unto thine enemies, and thou shalt have none to rescue them.

32 Thy <sup>h</sup>sons and thy daughters shall be given unto another people, and thine eyes shall look, and fail with longing for them all the day long: and there shall be no might<sup>i</sup> in thine hand.

33 The <sup>j</sup>fruit of thy land, and all thy labours, shall a nation which thou knowest not eat up; and thou shalt be only oppressed and crushed always:

34 So that thou shalt <sup>k</sup>be mad for the sight of thine eyes which thou shalt see.

35 The LORD shall <sup>l</sup>smite thee in the knees, and in the legs, with a sore botch that cannot be healed, from the sole of thy foot unto the top of thy head.

36 The LORD shall <sup>m</sup>bring thee, and thy king which thou shalt set over thee, unto a nation which neither thou nor thy fathers have known; and there shalt thou serve other gods, wood and stone.

37 And thou shalt become <sup>n</sup>an astonishment, a proverb, and a by-word, among all nations whither the LORD shall lead thee.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>c</sup> The Jews are the standing and prophetic miracle of the Scriptures. Other nations have no doubt, been dispersed; but they have been absorbed into or amalgamated with the people amongst whom they have been scattered. But the Jews, removed into all kingdoms, retain their national identity—witnesses against themselves that they have forsaken the Lord: witnesses against infidels who despise these prophecies which they see fulfilled before their eyes; and witnesses to the Gentile churches to beware of falling by seeking to establish their own righteousness, and refusing to submit to the righteousness of God.—C.

After the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, some of the worst of the Jews took refuge in the castle of Massada, where, being closely besieged by the Romans, they at the persuasion of Eleazar their leader, first murdered their wives and children; then ten men were chosen by lot to slay the rest; this being done, one of the ten was chosen in like manner to kill the others, which having done, he set fire to the place, and then stabbed himself. There were nine hundred and sixty who perished in this miserable manner; and only two women and five boys escaped, by hiding themselves in the aqueducts underground.—Newton.

ing stream or solitary well. It seemed to us as if the prophetic curse pronounced by the Almighty on a sinful and apostate nation was now being literally fulfilled. We could see, at least in the whole face of nature, in earth, and sky, and storm, how terrible and how graphic that curse was:—"Thy heaven that is over thee shall be brass." &c. P.]

the world to himself, can heap on sinful men!—What blessings on soul and body!—what blessings, in time and in eternity, his love can bestow! Let us therefore be steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. In keeping his commandments there is a great and gracious reward. But who can stand before this holy, this jealous, this great and dreadful Lord God, if once <sup>he</sup> be angry? Deep and large is the cup of indignation that is in his right hand;

the dregs of which the wicked must wring out and drink. Let the sinners in Zion be afraid. Let fearfulness surprise the hypocrites. Who among us shall dwell with devouring fire? who shall dwell with everlasting burnings? In this dreadful cluster of threatenings, let us observe that sin is the only deserving cause of trouble; and that God, in innumerable forms, can execute his justice on the bodies, the minds, the families, the nations, the property, of his opposers.

55 So that he will not give to any of them of the flesh of his children, whom he shall eat: because he hath nothing left him in <sup>4</sup>the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee in all thy gates.

But the amount is uncertain—still, when compared with their ancient numbers, they are reduced to few. <sup>9</sup> The full meaning of these several clauses of this verse it is difficult to determine. The idea embodied in it is, that the Israelites would be taken back to Egypt in ships; that those taken should never return; that they would be reduced to slavery; that even when offered for sale in the slave-market none would buy them. This was fulfilled after the capture of Jerusalem under Titus. Multitudes of young Jews were then shipped off from Joppa to Alexandria. The slave-market became glutted, so that no purchasers could be found.—P.

growth therein. Canaan has continued since the Christian era to be a land of much attraction to travelers, and all, as with one common consent, have expressed their astonishment at the general aspect of barrenness and desolation in a country once so fertile and populous. So evident is this judgment, and so palpable the fulfilment of this prophecy, that infidels have affected to question the scriptural account of its population and fertility. But, independent of the Scripture testimony, which is always sufficient to establish the truth of its own narratives, it is well known that at least large portions of the Chinese empire are as populous, and by extreme industry rendered as productive, as Palestine, even in its best days. And if God permit his blessings to a land of heathenism, why <sup>33</sup> This appears to me to be a philosophical reflection of Moses springing from the remarkable prophetic judgments to which he had just given utterance.

<sup>34</sup> Looking back at God's mysterious dealings with the Israelites—his miracles of mercy, of judgment, of deliverance—his promises, and his awful threatenings—what more natural than for the thoughtful lawgiver to exclaim: "Secret things—the great mysteries of Providence—are a secret only to God, but the things which are revealed by him are revealed for our sakes and for the sake of our children, that we may obey him."—P.

20 The LORD will <sup>not</sup> spare him; but then the anger of the LORD and his jealousy shall smoke against that man, and all the <sup>curses</sup> that are written in this book shall lie upon him, and the LORD <sup>shall blot out</sup> his name from under heaven.

21 And the LORD shall <sup>separate</sup> him unto evil out of all the tribes of Israel, according to all the curses of the covenant that are<sup>4</sup> written in this book of the law:

22 So that the generation to come of your children that shall rise up after you, and the stranger that shall come from a far land, shall say, when they see the plagues of that land, and the sicknesses which the LORD hath laid upon it;<sup>5</sup>

23 And that the whole land thereof is <sup>brimstone</sup>, and salt, and burning, that it is not sown, nor beareth, nor any grass groweth therein, like the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah, Admah and Zeboiim, which the LORD overthrew in his anger, and in his wrath;

24 Even all nations shall say, <sup>Wherefore</sup> hath the LORD done thus unto this land? wha <sup>meaneth</sup> the heat of this great anger?<sup>6</sup>

25 Then men shall say, <sup>Because</sup> they have forsaken the covenant of the LORD God of their fathers, which he made with them when he brought them forth out of the land of Egypt:

26 For<sup>a</sup> they went and served other gods, and worshipped them, gods whom they knew not, and whom he had not given<sup>7</sup> unto them.<sup>8</sup>

27 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against this land, to bring upon it all the <sup>curses</sup> that are written in this book:

ments foretold; so that men may desire the one, and flee from the other. (2) The duties of God's people while in possession of his blessings, or when lying under his wrath.—Note, The secret and the revealed departments of the divine government are not to be practically dis severed; for they are not separate things, but merely distinct parts of the same government. It were vain to apply ourselves to discover the secret things, but it were impious to neglect the revealed duties connected with them. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Unbelief and unconcern are so deep-rooted within us, that, till God himself enlighten and renew our heart, we can never know, love, or serve him. Many of the most affecting providences pass unheeded by ignorant and unbelieving men: and yet a right observation of providence would powerfully induce us to a solemn surrendering of ourselves to God, and a careful fulfilment of our vows. Holy obedience is so contrary to the heart of man, that, notwithstanding we are already bound by the infinite authority of God's law, we need to be also bound by solemn vows and covenants, and these again and again repeated. But everything in public covenanting with God ought to be made with great plainness and solemnity; that every one concerned, whether present or absent, may understand, and be duly affected with it: and especially must all our covenanting with him be founded on his grant of himself to us as our God, and his claim of us for his people. How ready are men to copy after bad examples, and to defile themselves with idols! And who knows what indwelling lusts may lead us to in our practice: for followers of iniquity often become presumptuous at last, and bless themselves, while the curse of God hangs over their heads, and his wrath abideth on them! and to what terrible and shameful judgments are such presumptuous sinners exposed! The greater the mercies we sin against, the greater judgments we may expect. The obstinate abuse of God's mercies will at length deprive men of them. And heathen beholders are sometimes sooner awakened by God's judgments than the hardened professors who endure them. Men's inquiries into religious concerns

ON THE QUAY, SMYRNA—A CITY WHERE GOD'S ANCIENT PEOPLE HAVE GREAT INFLUENCE AND WHERE THEY LIVE IN GREAT NUMBERS. [Deut., xxix:28.]—"And the Lord rooted them out of their land in anger, and in wrath, and in great indignation, and cast them into another land, as it is this day." We give a picture of the quay at Smyrna because it serves to illustrate the declaration in this verse of Deuteronomy. Perhaps there is no city in the world of the same number of inhabitants where the Jews, rooted out of their own land and cast into another, have come to greater positions of influence, at least in a mercantile way, than in Smyrna. The great carpet houses here, which supply the world's market with Turkish rugs and other fine carpet fabrics, are owned by Jews. Smyrna is a city of over 200,000 inhabitants, and the quay of Smyrna is the street that extends for a mile or more along the harbor, and is the most important in the city.

GREEK CHURCH OF ANNUNCIATION, NAZARETH—IN THE CITY OF MARY, THE MOTHER OF JESUS. [DEUT., xxx: 1-10.]—"And it shall come to pass, when all things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations whither the Lord thy God hath driven thee, and shalt return unto the Lord thy God * * * that then the Lord thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return and gather thee from all the nations, whither the Lord thy God hath scattered thee." We give above a picture of the Greek Church of Annunciation because the Scripture quoted above was not fulfilled until the coming of Christ. The angel said to Mary, as recorded in the first chapter of St. Luke, speaking of Jesus, He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

CHAPTER XXX.

1 Great mercies promised unto the penitent. 11 The commandment is of obvious interpretation. 15 Death and life are set before the people.

AND it shall come to pass, when all these things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations whither the LORD thy God hath driven thee,

2 And thou shalt return unto the LORD thy God, and shalt obey his voice, according to all that I command thee this day, thou, and thy children, with all thine heart, and with all thy soul;

3 That then the LORD thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return, and gather thee from all the nations whither the LORD thy God hath scattered thee.

4 If any of thine be driven out unto the outmost parts of heaven, from thence will the LORD thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee.

5 And the LORD thy God will bring thee into the land which thy fathers possessed, and thou shalt possess it; and he will do thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers.

6 And the LORD thy God will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live.

7 And the LORD thy God will put all these curses upon thine enemies, and on them that hate thee, which persecuted thee.

8 And thou shalt return, and obey the voice of the LORD, and do all his commandments, which I command thee this day.

9 And the LORD thy God will make thee plenteous in every work of thine hand, in the fruit of thy body, and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy land, for good: for the LORD will again rejoice over thee for good, as he rejoiced over thy fathers;

10 If thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to keep his commandments and his statutes, which are written in this book of the law, and if thou turn unto the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul.

are frequently rather curious than practical; and many sinfully pry into futures, and things which he hath concealed, rather than search and practise what he hath revealed in his word, and manifested in his providence. But may I and my children always search and practise the Scriptures, as the only effectual means of averting the plagues appointed for the ungodly.

CHAPTER XXX. REFLECTIONS.—In returning to the Lord, and resting in him, men must be saved. Our gracious God is always ready, not only to receive repenting prodigals, but to graciously forgive their sins. And great is the happiness and honour that is to be found in fellowship with a reconciled God. The future return of the Jewish nation to the Lord shall be a delightful and glorious season to them; and even to us Gentiles it will be as life from the dead; we shall share and rejoice in their mercies. God's manifestation of his special love, and his renovation of our heart, shall qualify and induce us to all holy obedience. We shall run in the way of his commandments when he shall enlarge our heart. But now let us consider how great a mercy it is that the laws and the gospel of Christ are set before us in so plain, affecting, and applicable a manner. And since eternal life is so exhibited, so offered to, so urged upon us, God forbid that we should entail redoubled loss on ourselves by a contemptuous rejection of it. Not Moses, but Jesus, sets before us life and good.—Let us see that we refuse not him that speaketh from heaven.

1 The curses of exile and distress have been inflicted literally and fully; the promises of restoration and prosperity have therefore been as literal and complete.—C.

2 If the blessings and the curses of the preceding chapters be interpreted literally, so must the remarkable promise contained in this chapter. The time referred to is yet to come. The curses are not yet exhausted. Palestine is still desolate; the Jews are still scattered among the nations; they are still a by-word in the earth. Just as surely as the curse was fulfilled which pronounced their dispersion, so surely will the promise be fulfilled which predicts their ingathering. A spiritual ingathering to the kingdom of Christ would not be such a fulfilment as the sound laws of exegesis demand; it must be a literal and national return to the country of their fathers.—P.

a ch. 34, 7. Ac. 7, 23, 30, 36. Nu. 27, 17; ver. 11.

11 ¶ For this commandment, which I command thee this day, it is not hidden from thee, neither is it far off:

12 It is not in heaven, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it?

13 Neither is it beyond the sea, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go over the sea for us, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it?

14 But the word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that thou mayest do it.

15 ¶ See, I have set before thee this day life and good, and death and evil;

16 In that I command thee this day to love the LORD thy God, to walk in his ways, and to keep his commandments, and his statutes, and his judgments, that thou mayest live and multiply: and the LORD thy God shall bless thee in the land whither thou goest to possess it.

17 But if thine heart turn away, so that thou wilt not hear, but shalt be drawn away, and worship other gods, and serve them;

18 I denounce unto you this day, that ye shall surely perish, and that ye shall not prolong your days upon the land whither thou passest over Jordan to go to possess it.

19 I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing: therefore choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live;

20 That thou mayest love the LORD thy God, and that thou mayest obey his voice, and that thou mayest cleave unto him; (for he is thy life, and the length of thy days;) that thou mayest dwell in the land which the LORD swore unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give them.

CHAPTER XXXI.

1 Moses encourageth the people. 7 He encourageth Joshua. 9 He delivereth the law unto the priests to read it in the seventh year to the people. 14 God giveth a charge to Joshua, 19 and a song to testify against the people. 24 Moses delivereth the book of the law to the Levites to keep. 28 He maketh a protestation to the elders.

It was not merely under the guardianship of the priests, but of God himself, who dwelt in the sanctuary, and who would not permit a stranger's hand to touch it. That very book—the autograph of Moses—may have been preserved down to the close of the Jewish polity and the destruction of the temple. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—It highly becomes ministers, or others, to exert themselves to their utmost, that their church and nation may be happy after their death: and, when they become more active in the Lord's work as their end approaches, and wish others the happy enjoyment of that comfort and honour which God hath denied to themselves, it is both honourable to the cause of God and strengthening to his people. Great pains ought to be taken to make those of the present or rising generation to understand, believe and obey

5 And the LORD shall give them up before your face, that ye <sup>g</sup>may do unto them according unto all the commandments which I have commanded you.

6 Be <sup>h</sup>strong, and of a good courage, fear not, nor be afraid of them: for the LORD thy God, <sup>i</sup>he it is that doth go with thee; he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee.

1 During an equal period of one hundred and twenty years did Noah preach righteousness to the antediluvian world. The life of Moses divides itself into three remarkable periods: (1) Forty years of education in the literature and sciences of Egypt, Ac. 7. 20, 23. (2) Forty years in the management of a flock and the cares of a family. (3) Forty years in instructing and governing an ignorant and unmanageable generation, a chequered, an eventful, a toilsome, a glorious life—culminating especially in the triumphs of grace in the temper, and shadowing out to the church in the wilderness the patience and meekness of Jesus.—C.

<sup>az</sup> Let Moses be tried by the popular literature he furnished and employed to influence the masses of society; and here, as in all other respects, he stands immeasurably above all other popular leaders: as a prophet, a practical evidence of a divine commission by the continuity of his efforts to the people's hearts to God. An impostor may invent and inculcate a religion; but it cannot, like that of Moses, be a holy and a godly religion. presented themselves in the tabernacle of the congregation.

15 And the LORD appeared in the tabernacle in a pillar of a cloud: and the pillar of the cloud stood over the door of the tabernacle.

16 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Behold, thou shalt <sup>a</sup>sleep<sup>5</sup> with thy fathers; and this people will rise up, and <sup>b</sup>go a whoring after the gods of the strangers of the land whither they go to <sup>c</sup>be among them, and will forsake me, and break my covenant which I have made with them.

17 Then <sup>d</sup>my anger shall be kindled against them in that day, and I will forsake them, and I will <sup>e</sup>hide my face from them, and they shall be devoured, and many evils and troubles shall befall<sup>6</sup> them; so that they will say in that day, <sup>f</sup>Are not these evils come upon us because our God <sup>g</sup>is not among us?<sup>7</sup>

18 And <sup>h</sup>I will surely hide my face in that day, for all the evils which they shall have wrought, in that they are turned unto other gods.

19 Now therefore write ye <sup>i</sup>this song for you, and teach it the children of Israel: <sup>j</sup>put it in their mouths, that this song may be a witness for me against the children of Israel.<sup>8</sup>

20 For when I shall have brought them into the land which I swear unto their fathers, that floweth with milk and honey, and they shall <sup>k</sup>have eaten, and filled themselves, and waxen fat; then will they turn unto other gods, and serve them, and provoke me, and break my covenant.

22 Moses therefore <sup>n</sup>wrote this song the same day, and taught it the children of Israel.<sup>2</sup>

23 ¶ And he gave Joshua the son of Nun a charge, and said, <sup>o</sup>Be strong, and of a good courage: for <sup>p</sup>thou shalt bring the children of Israel into the land which I swear unto them; and I will be with thee.<sup>3</sup>

24 ¶ And it came to pass, when Moses had made an end of writing the words of this law in a book, until they were finished,

25 That Moses commanded the Levites, <sup>q</sup>which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, saying, 26 Take this book of the law, and put it <sup>r</sup>in the side of the ark of the covenant of the LORD your God, that it may be there for a witness against thee.

God's word: and certain is our success when God is our assistant, and we do nothing but what he has commanded. And the more experience we have of gospel liberty, the more shall we delight to hear and obey him. God graciously warns men of their sin and danger before it come upon them: yet so desperate is the wickedness of men, that they ruin themselves by their apostasy from God, after their own vows, and the most solemn and often-repeated warnings of God and his faithful ministers. These exactly correspond together in discovering the sure consequences of sin, and leave the blame of their ruin entirely upon themselves.

24 They shall be <sup>m</sup>burnt with hunger, and voured with burning heat,<sup>5</sup> and with bitter struction: I will <sup>a</sup>also send the teeth of beasts

He made Israel subdue all nations that ventured to oppose their progress in the wilderness, or on the borders of Canaan in Moab, Gilead, and Bashan. P.

Ver. 21. [Every idolatrous nation is foolish. The only true wisdom is the wisdom of God. Everything is folly which does not lead to God. The heathen nations therefore which were raised up to vex, harass, and conquer Israel are here called 'foolish nations.' P.]

Ver. 29. [Latter end. Not their death, which is commonly called the latter end, but their latter end in dispersion and restoration, in judgment and in mercy.

WALLS OF AKRO-CORINTH—WHERE ST. PAUL LIVED AND PREACHED. [Deut., xxxii:24-25.]—"They shall be burnt with hunger, and devoured with burning heat, and with bitter destruction; I will also send the teeth of beasts upon them, with the poison of the dust. The sword without, and terror within, shall destroy both the young man and the virgin, the suckling also with the man of gray hairs." Corinth is another striking illustration of the ruin that comes to cities and peoples who violate the laws of God first given to the Jews, but really as applicable to other nations as to the people whom God raised up to teach these laws. Corinth was once a splendid and wealthy city, the center of art and luxury. But upon the top of this very mountain, enclosed by the wall as shown above, there was a temple of Venus dedicated to licentiousness. So nothing is left of this city to-day except moldering ruins. In reading the Old Testament Scriptures it will be well to remember that God's laws operate universally.

25 The sword without, and terror within,<sup>7</sup> shall destroy<sup>8</sup> both the young man and the virgin, the suckling also, with the man of gray hairs.

26 I said, <sup>9</sup>I would scatter them into corners, I would make the remembrance of them to cease from among men;

27 Were it not <sup>10</sup>that I feared the wrath of the enemy, lest their adversaries should behave themselves strangely, and lest they should say, Our hand is high, and the LORD hath not done all this.<sup>9</sup>

28 For they are <sup>11</sup>a nation void of counsel, neither is there any understanding in them.

29 Oh! that they were wise, that they understood this, that they would consider their latter end!

30 How should <sup>12</sup>one chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight, except their Rock <sup>13</sup>had sold them, and the LORD had shut them up?

31 For <sup>14</sup>their rock is not as our Rock, even our enemies themselves being judges.

32 For their vine <sup>15</sup>is of the vine of Sodom, and of the fields of Gomorrah: their grapes are grapes of gall, their clusters are bitter.<sup>1</sup>

33 Their wine <sup>16</sup>is the poison of dragons,<sup>2</sup> and the cruel venom of asps.

34 Is <sup>17</sup>not this laid up in store with me, and sealed up among my treasures?

35 To <sup>18</sup>me belongeth vengeance and recompense; their foot shall slide in due time: for the day of their calamity is at hand, and the things that shall come upon them <sup>19</sup>make haste.

36 For <sup>20</sup>the LORD shall judge his people, and repent himself for his servants, when he seeth that <sup>21</sup>their power<sup>3</sup> is gone, and there is none shut up, or left.

37 And he shall say, <sup>22</sup>Where are their gods, their rock in whom they trusted;

C.]

REFLECTIONS.—In the most serious and solemn manner ought ministers to deliver the truths of God to their people; and terrible will be the judgment of despisers of them, when both heaven and earth shall witness against them. How great, how unalterable, how faithful, holy, and just is God! and how perfect, wise, and righteous are all his works! But how ungrateful, disobedient, and apostatizing are many of his professed children! It is necessary, therefore, to ponder both the character of God and our own, to prevent our sinning, to draw instructions from ancient records, and that children should receive information from their fathers, who are more acquainted with them. But while I behold God preparing a country for the Israelites, as his peculiar people, marvellously conducting them to it through the Arabian deserts, subduing the land before them, and enriching them with the product of it, let me think of the great wonder of redemption, of God's preparing it for men, and bringing them now to the begun, and hereafter to the full enjoyment of it. But surely most vile is the ingratitude of men, who render him hatred for his love, cursing for his blessing! Yet much more aggravated is the wickedness of professors, and especially saints, than that of mere heathens. The Lord highly abominates all sin; and righteous are all his judgments of desertion, sword, famine, or pestilence, nay, of utter and everlasting destruction. But his mercy waits long: he is unwilling to inflict judgments on his people, and to give his enemies any cause of triumph over them, even when they have provoked him to the most shocking degree; and earnestly he wills that their serious consideration should prevent their ruin. Seasonable, gracious, and wonderful have, and shall be, God's deliverances of his ancient people from the nations which harassed, murdered, or carried them captive; and terrible his judgments on their destroyers, particularly the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Greeks, Romans, Antichristians, and others. But how much more remarkable the spiritual deliverances of the saints, and terrible the destruction of their implacable enemies! How remarkable the joy of their souls, whether they be Jews or Gentiles, when they behold it! Happy is it when ministers, young and old, fully harmonize in the work of the Lord; and when they are so intent upon commending Jesus and his ways, that they must be, as it were, half forced from it, even into the joy of their Lord! But God finds it frequently necessary to remind his people of their sins, and likewise to warn them of their death, while he assures them of his reconciliation to their souls.

50 And die in the mount whither thou goest up, and be gathered unto thy people; as Aaron thy brother died in mount Hor, and was gathered unto his people.<sup>9</sup>

52 Yet thou shalt see the land before thee; but thou shalt not go thither unto the land which I give the children of Israel.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

1 The majesty of God. 6 The blessings of the twelve tribes. 26 The excellency of Israel.

AND this is the blessing wherewith Moses the man of God blessed the children of Israel before his death.

2 And he said, The LORD came from Sinai, and rose up from Seir unto them; he shined forth from mount Paran,<sup>1</sup> and he came with ten thousands of saints: from his right hand went a fiery law<sup>2</sup> for them.

3 Yea, he loved the people; all his saints are<sup>3</sup> in thy hand: and they sat down at thy feet; every one shall receive of thy words.

4 Moses commanded us a law, even the inheritance of the congregation of Jacob.

5 And he was king in Jeshurun when the heads of the people and the tribes of Israel were gathered together.

6 ¶ Let<sup>m</sup> Reuben live, and not die; and let not his men be few.

7 ¶ And this is the blessing of Judah: and he said, Hear, LORD, the voice of Judah, and bring him unto his people: let his hands be sufficient for him; and be thou an help to him from his enemies.

8 ¶ And of Levi he said, Let thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy holy one, whom thou didst prove at Massah, and with whom thou didst strive at the waters of Meribah;

1 The honesty of the Bible in revealing and condemning the faults of its most distinguished characters is a peculiarity in which it stands apart from all mere human compositions—a proof of its divine origin to which the infidel can produce no refutation. If we admit with the poet, and the words being rightly understood, we do and must admit that 'an honest man's the noblest work of God.' would we demand of the infidel what is an honest book? It cannot be less noble.

In Le. xxvi. 4, 25-31; xxviii. 29. 18-28; xxx. 31. 16-21, 29; xxxii. the general fate of the Israelites has been predicted; here that of the particular tribes is foretold in a manner answerable to the blessings of the patriarch Jacob, Ge. xlix. viz. that notwithstanding internal weakness, and much harassment from enemies, the Reubenites should be preserved; that the descendants of Judah should have their prayers heard, their warfare successful, their labours prosperous, and should enjoy peace and safety; that the Levites, who had acted so disinterestedly in punishing the principal worshippers of the golden calf, should be the honoured ministers of God, and useful instructors and judges of the people; that the Benjamites should enjoy much divine protection, and live near to the temple of God; that the descendants of Joseph should enjoy great favour from God, noted plenty from their fields, and great power and authority among their brethren; that the men of Zebulun in their seafaring trade, and those of Issachar in their husbandry, should enjoy much comfort to themselves, and be remarkable promoters of a religious attendance on God's solemn feasts; that the Gadites should enlarge their territory, punish their enemies, and faithfully assist their brethren in conquering Canaan; that the Danites should unexpectedly seize on Laish, near the springs of Jordan, and, under Samson, molest the Philistines; that the Naphtalites, when stationed on the west of the Sea of Tiberias, should have most fertile fields, and their country be peculiarly blessed with the ministrations of Christ; and that the Asherites should mightily increase, live in noted friendship with their brethren, and have valuable mines of iron and brass in their territory.—[Ver. 6. Let not his men be few. Two copies of the Septuagint, and some valuable MSS. adopted by Houbigant and other learned authorities insert here, 'and Simeon, let his men be few;' and as this is the only tribe omitted in the authorized version, this variation being so supported, is worthy of attention.—Ver. 7. Hear, LORD, the voice of Judah. Judah signifies praise the Lord, therefore this prayer. It includes a petition likewise for Messiah, who was to come of Judah, Ge. 49. 10, and whom God the Father 'heareth always.'—Ver. 10. They shall teach Jacob thy judgments, and Israel thy law. There is a remarkable difference between the blessings of the tribes as delivered by Jacob, Ge. xlix., and Moses in this chapter. But the blessings of Jacob were principally temporal, those of Moses chiefly spiritual. Those of Jacob to members of the nation, those of Moses to members of the church. The one chiefly to Israel 'according to the flesh,' the other to Israel 'according to the spirit.' The two lines of prophecy sometimes diverging, sometimes coincident; yet always equally true.—Ver. 12. Dwell in safety by him. Near the place where God shall choose for his temple; and in point of fact, Jerusalem was a joint property of Judah and Benjamin, and the two tribes dwelt together. Between his shoulders, some translate 'on his sides or borders,' but it seems rather to refer to a parent tenderly covering a child and carrying it upon his shoulders.—Ver. 14. Precious things put forth by the moon. That, even in latitudes distant from the equator, the moon has a ripening power, can scarcely be doubted. In the central lands of the earth, where the moon is described as astonishingly bright, the ripening power must be proportionably increased. It describes a land of great fertility, in which every month produced a new succession of fruits. See Re. 22. 2. C.—Ver. 17. There is here delineated briefly, but with wondrous graphic power, both the character of Ephraim's allotted territory and the future greatness of the tribe. He was to inherit a mountain stronghold;

"And the south, and the plain of the valley of Jericho, the city of palm trees unto Zoar." We give a view of the plains of Sodom and Gomorrah taken from the site of ancient Jericho, with a perspective of 25 miles looking towards the east. We have here a view of the city of palm trees, plain of the Jordan, and one of the highest peaks of the Moab mountains, Nebo, where Moses stood and looked over the promised land. There is not a view in the world so capable of awakening tender and great memories as this. In the world's civilization Moses, without a doubt, has been the most conspicuous leader. And here is the plain over which he looked before he went to his reward.

REFLECTIONS.—The people of God are a peculiar and great generation; safe in the hand of their God, from everything but unbelief; taught of God, and sweetly constrained to receive and obey his instructions; and privileged with the law of God, sounded in their ears, and written on their hearts. Unbounded blessings are with God for them; blessings suited to every tribe, every station in life, whether warriors, ministers, sailors, husbandmen, miners; blessings suited to every relation, and to every change of circumstance. And who can express their blessedness who have God's law for their rule, God's land for their residence, and God himself for their helper, refuge, armour, shield, portion, and infinite ALL! It is happy

CHAPTER XXXIV. [Ver. 1. And Moses went up, &c. Most commentators consider this whole chapter an addition by Joshua, Phinehas, Ezra, or some other prophet; others consider it as the ancient commencement of the book of Joshua, which, by the act of some transcriber, was subjoined as a conclusion to Deuteronomy; whilst others would terminate Deuteronomy with ver. 4, and commence Joshua at ver. 5. But all this is mere conjecture, and, unless aided by an additional conjecture, part must be self-evidently wrong. For unless it be conjectured that Joshua went with Moses, who could tell what Moses saw; or know, or say anything of his death, and the manner or place of burial? But why all this profusion, this waste of unsupported conjecture? especially why such conjecture, seeing a simpler solution lies at the very threshold? Could not the Spirit of the Lord which enabled Moses to summon up and record the past events of the world from the morning of creation, and to foretell the future fates and character of a whole nation, up till this day, enable him also to describe the circumstances that preceded his own death but a few hours, and to foretell

REFLECTIONS.—Happy and honoured is the last end of such as have been active and faithful for God in their generation; and their death would be an irremediable loss to churches and nations, if the all-sufficient Jesus did not supply their room. But precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints; and he makes it pleasant and joyful to them, when ushered in with views of the King in his beauty, and of the land that is afar off. But let me not dismiss this wonderful man of God—this deliverer and leader of his people—this mediator between God and Israel—this extraordinary prophet, occasional priest—this lawgiver and king in Jeshurun—till I consider him as a noted figure of my infinitely more glorious and useful Redeemer. He was a proper, a divine child, early and often exposed to danger. O the exile, the reproach, the contradiction of sinners, the persecution even unto death, which he endured! and how divine his support under his unnumbered trials! How amiable his qualities!—his contempt of the world, in its pleasures, honours, or riches—his compassion and tender regard to his injurious brethren—his amazing meekness—his distinguished fidelity—his prudence, boldness, and holy zeal! Solemn and express was his call to his work; and, by a multitude of miracles in favour of his people, and with the most tremendous destruction of his Jewish, heathen, Antichristian, and other enemies, has that call been confirmed. Extensive is the office to which God has appointed him. He is the Almighty Deliverer, who rescues us from the worse than Egyptian slavery of sin, Satan, and the world; and of heathenism and error. He is the all-sufficient Provider, who bestows upon us spiritual entertainment, hidden manna, living water, and unchanging robes of righteousness. He is the Leader given to the people, who opens a safe passage through every Red Sea of difficulty; and by power and prayer subdues every opposer, and brings us not merely to the borders, but to the full enjoyment of our promised, evangelical, spiritual, and eternal rest. Nor can their murmuring unbelief or rebellion ever provoke him to forsake those who have been given to him by his Father. He is the Mediator between God and men, with whom the promise of grace is made; and who confirms it with all by the shedding and sprinkling of his blood. He had his Father's law in his heart, fulfilled it for us, and gives it to us as our rule. He not only fasted and prayed, but died for a stiff-necked and rebellious people. He infallibly prevents our utter rejection. He is the incomparable Prophet, who knows the full mind of God, and can teach us by the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, and make us wise unto salvation. He speaks as never man did. He is the brightness of his Father's glory, and the express image of his person, which we can behold, and be familiar with, only as veiled with our nature. He is our glorious Priest, who shed his blood, and sprinkled it on the altar, to fulfill JEHOVAH's justice; and on the book of the law as a command, fulfilling it in our stead; and he sprinkles it on the people's conscience, to purge them from dead works to serve the living God. He authorizes all the true ministers of the church, and consecrates the saints as spiritual priests, and all the ordinances thereof, unto the service of God. He is King and Lawgiver to his Israel indeed, appointing the whole form and ordinances of his church; and to him is the whole government thereof committed by God. His whole life was remarkable for fidelity in the service of God, and his death was marvellous and voluntary. His grave was appointed of God; but in it he saw no corruption; and with him were buried all the ancient ceremonies, the law as a covenant, and the sins of all who believe.

THE BOOK OF JOSHUA.

This book represents God's fulfilment of his promises to the patriarchs and their descendants, in giving them the land of Canaan; and the fulfilment of Noah's curse upon Canaan, in the destruction and slavery of his descendants. It relates what was transacted by Joshua as governor of Israel; particularly how God confirmed his call and encouraged him to his work; his sending spies to view Jericho; the miraculous passage through Jordan, and erecting memorials of it; his sanctification of the people by their circumcision and eating the passover, i.-v.; his miraculous conquest of Jericho, and severe punishment of Achan's theft of the spoil, vi. vii.; his conquest of Bethel and Ai, and league with the Gibeonites, viii. ix.; his conquest of the south part of Canaan, and causing the sun to stand still, x.; his conquest of the northern parts of that country, xi.; an account of Canaan, xii.-xiv.; his division of it to the nine tribes and a half; his appointment of cities of refuge and of cities to the Levites, xv.-xxi.; his kind dismission of the Reubenites and Gadites, xxii.; his solemn admonitions to the people, and renewal of their covenant with God; and, in fine, his death and burial, xxiii. xxiv.

[In addition to its sacred interest, the book of Joshua is one of the most ancient and important geographical and ethnological treatises extant. In giving an account of Joshua's conquests the historian sketches briefly, but with a master's hand, the leading physical features of the country, its topography, and the characteristics of the principal tribes by which it was then held. The licentious inhabitants of Jericho, the hardy mountaineers of Ai, the wily Gibeonites, the warlike Jebusites, the trained hosts of Jabin and his allies who swept the northern plains in chariots of iron, are all passed in rapid review before the eye of the reader. Then with a geographical accuracy and minuteness of detail altogether unparalleled in ancient literature, the boundaries of the allotted territories of the twelve tribes are defined, and their principal towns enumerated. Most of the boundary lines can still be traced, and many of the old cities identified. The book of Joshua thus forms an invaluable hand-book to the ancient topography of Palestine. The list of kings or chiefs, whose cities and territories were conquered by Moses and Joshua, is also of very great importance; and there are several episodes in the book which throw light upon certain remarkable localities and peoples: such as the story of the conquest of Hebron and its giant inhabitants of the race of Anak by Caleb; the capture of Kirjath-sepher, 'the town of books,' by Othniel; and the petition of Ahsah, Caleb's daughter, 'Give me also springs of water.' These, with others of a similar character, tend to give a primeval history something of the vivid colouring of a life-picture. P.]

CHAPTER I. [Ver. 7. Be thou strong and very courageous. The greatest instance of courage, is moral courage in reproving what is wrong and teaching and enforcing what is right. Therefore the Lord admonishes Joshua to be very courageous, not against enemies, but to observe all the law which Moses had commanded.

Many who would dare to hazard death, would not dare to encounter the coldness or alienation of friends, the laugh of ridicule, the brow of scorn, the voice of reproach, the turmoil of argument, the jealousy of opposition, or the obloquy of detraction. Sensitive minds shrink from these petty annoyances as unworthy of their energies, and consequently suffer the imputation and the evils of the worst species of cowardice. In this moral courage Moses, Joshua, Jeremiah, and Paul are pre-eminent—Christ perfect. C.—Joshua's strength and courage would be tested in attempting, in the face of the opposition and rebellion of the Israelites to keep

HILL OF SARIS—IN SIGHT OF THE MEDITERRANEAN SEA. [JOSHUA, i: 4.]—"From the wilderness and this Lebanon, even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and unto the great sea toward the going down of the sun, shall be your coast." The Hill of Saris is at the upper head of the pass or glen which is called Wady 'Ali. From its top we have a fine view of the Great or Mediterranean Sea that the Lord promised Joshua, as we learn from the fourth verse of the first chapter, should be the western boundary of the country promised to the children of Israel. The land which the children of Israel actually occupied was very small, but the boundaries which are given in this fourth verse as the promised land include an immense territory. Nations are like individuals: they rarely occupy all that belongs to them.

7 Only be thou strong,<sup>3</sup> and very courageous, that thou mayest observe to do according to all the law, which Moses my servant commanded thee: 'turn not from it to the right hand or to the left, that thou mayest 'prosper whithersoever thou goest.

8 This<sup>m</sup> book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but thou shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein: for then thou shalt make thy way prosperous, and then thou shalt have good success.<sup>4</sup>

9 Have<sup>n</sup> not I commanded thee? Be strong, and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for 'the LORD thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest.

13 Remember 'the word which Moses, the servant of the LORD, commanded you, saying, The LORD your God hath given you rest, and hath given you this land.

14 Your wives, your little ones, and your cattle, shall remain in the land which Moses gave you on this side Jordan;<sup>6</sup> but ye shall pass before your brethren 'armed, all 'the mighty men of valour, and help them,

Ja. 2. 25, and as it appears from Mat. 15: that she was married to Samson, and so was ingrafted into the genealogical tree of our Lord, every effort has been made to rescue her character from the reproach of the word harlot. According to the Hebrew word has been derived not from a root implying sin, but from a root implying mourish, and has been translated hostess, and female tower-keeper.

But the word in the Hebrew does not elsewhere occur in a context that will allow it to be translated hostess. See Le. 21. 7. 14. De. 19. 18. And besides, there were not of old, nor are there now, any governor hostesses in the East; the zanusera furnishing nothing but bare walls, where the traveller must provide for himself. Rahab was therefore what she is represented, and equally what is implied, a believer, a reformed penitent—such an emblem of the triumph of grace as Paul recounts, saying, 'And such were some of you, but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God,' 1 Co. 6. 11.—C.

CHAPTER II.

1 Rahab receiveth and concealeth the two spies sent from Shittim. 8 The covenant between her and them. 23 Their return and report.

AND Joshua the son of Nun sent out of 'Shittim two men to 'spy secretly, saying, Go view the land, even Jericho. And they went, and 'came into a harlot's<sup>1</sup> house, named Rahab, and lodged there.

2 And it was <sup>a</sup>told the king of Jericho, saying, Behold there came men in hither to-night of the children of Israel to search out the country.

3 And the king of Jericho sent unto Rahab, saying, Bring forth the men that are come to thee, which are entered into thine house: for they be come to search out all the country.

4 And the 'woman took the two men, and hid them, and said thus, There came men unto me, but <sup>i</sup>I wist not whence they were:

5 And it came to pass, about the time of shutting of the gate, when it was dark, that the men went out: whither the men went, I wot not: pursue after them quickly; for ye shall overtake them.

6 But she had brought them up to 'the roof of the house, and hid them with the stalks of flax, which she had laid in order upon the roof.

7 And the men pursued after them the way to Jordan, unto the fords:<sup>2</sup> and as soon as they which pursued after them were gone out, they <sup>b</sup>shut the gate.

8 ¶ And, before they were laid down,<sup>3</sup> she came up unto them upon the roof;

all the requirements of the law. The keeping of the law also was the condition on which God was to enable the Israelites to conquer and retain Canaan. P.

REFLECTIONS.—God keeps up an honourable remembrance of his faithful servants. And it is a comfort to the church that, although her ministers die, Jesus her Redeemer lives to provide others in their room. But those who have behaved well in an inferior station, will, in general, and ought to be advanced to a higher. Certainly and seasonably, however slowly, the promises of God are fulfilled at last, with respect to everything temporal or eternal: nor need we fear to proceed in the most difficult work if God promise to us his presence and assistance. When he is pleased to work, none can let it. But as we must live by the word of God, so we must work and war by it; and, being once called and encouraged of God, we ought with the utmost readiness to set about our work. God can quickly bow the hearts of all such as are necessary to assist us therein. And it is delightful when magistrates, ministers, and people concur in their regard to and dependence on God, and when subjects are no less cheerful in their obedience, and doing their duty as good citizens, to themselves and one another, than rulers are exact in commanding what is lawful.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 1. Jericho was the most important city in the Jordan valley at the time of the exodus. It appears, however, that its site was changed, though at what time, or for what reason, is unknown. The city destroyed by Joshua and rebuilt by Hiel stood beside Elisha's fountain, about a mile and a half north-west of the village of Riha. But the Jericho which our Lord visited stood two miles farther south, at the base of the mountains where the road from Jerusalem descends into the plain. The ruins of both cities I have surveyed with care. They are most distinctly marked. The plain around them is rich and beautiful, and though the palm-trees that once gave the city a distinguishing name are now nearly gone, there is still abundance of foliage. P.

Ver. 5. [Whither the men went I wot not. The first part of the statement, ver. 4, may have been true, the second was certainly false. How can this untruth be justified? How had this woman faith? We answer to the first question—it cannot be justified at all, it is utterly condemned. To the second—does the infidel objector mean to affirm, what his question implies, that he who commits any single immoral act can have no moral principle? What havoc amongst infidels would this decision effect! Rahab did possess faith as a 9 And she said unto the men, I know that the LORD hath given you the land, and that your terror is fallen upon us, and that all the inhabitants of the land faint<sup>4</sup> because of you.

10 For we have heard how the LORD dried up the water of the Red sea for you, when ye came out of Egypt; and what ye did unto the two kings of the Amorites that were on the other side Jordan, Sihon and Og, whom ye utterly destroyed.

11 And as soon as we had heard these things, our hearts did melt, neither did there remain any more courage in any man because of you; for the LORD your God, he is God in heaven above, and in earth beneath.<sup>6</sup>

12 Now therefore, I pray you, swear unto me by the LORD, since I have showed you kindness, that ye will also show kindness unto my father's house, and give me a true token:

13 And that ye will save alive my father, and my mother, and my brethren, and my sisters, and all that they have, and deliver our lives from death.

14 And the men answered her, Our life for yours,<sup>7</sup> if ye utter not this our business. And it shall be, when the LORD hath given us the land, that we will deal kindly and truly with thee.

15 Then she let them down by a cord through the window: for her house was upon the town-wall, and she dwelt upon the wall.<sup>8</sup>

16 And she said unto them, Get you to the mountain,<sup>9</sup> lest the pursuers meet you; and hide yourselves there three days, until the pursuers be returned: and afterward may ye go your way.

17 And the men said unto her, We will be blameless of this thine oath which thou hast made us swear:

18 Behold, when we come into the land, thou shalt bind this line of scarlet thread<sup>1</sup> in the window which thou didst let us down by: and thou shalt bring thy father, and thy mother, and thy brethren, and all thy father's household, home unto thee.

19 And it shall be, that whosoever shall go out of the doors of thy house into the street,

1 Joshua cometh to Jordan. 2 The officers instruct the people concerning their passage. 7 The Lord encourageth Joshua. 9 Joshua encourageth the people. 14 The waters of Jordan are divided.

AND Joshua rose early in the morning; and they removed from Shittim, and came to Jordan, he and all the children of Israel, and lodged there before they passed over.

principle, for she believed the threatened judgments of God against her wicked countrymen, ver. 9, 10; but as fear overcame Peter, and betrayed him to deny his Lord, so fear overcame Rahab, and betrayed her to utter an untruth. Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief; and let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Proper means and prudent caution must never be neglected when we trust God with the success of our enterprises. Even the best and greatest rulers must see with other people's eyes: and it is a great mercy to a nation when those to whom interesting affairs are committed are persons of fidelity and diligence. The grace of God can easily change the most vile sinner into a choice saint: and true believers will risk their all for God. Nor must we reject them as reprobates who are guilty of some very condemnable actions; there may be true and justifying faith where much sinfulness still works. But it is hard to get rid of a bad character when once fixed, even by repentance and amendment: and that remaining badge of our shame ought to excite us to frequent and bitter sorrow for the sin which occasioned it. God can easily send his terrors to the hearts of his enemies, so that the boldest shall tremble: and often sinners' frights are presages of their fall. But the faith of God's promises will powerfully influence a person to a regard for the people of God, even at the expense of natural affections. And when we cannot prevent the ruin of our city or nation, we ought cautiously to provide for the safety of ourselves and kindred. And all agreements, especially such as concern life and death, ought to be made with the greatest exactness. We must never mingle with the world which lieth in wickedness, if we would not be condemned with it. Faith, which foresees the ruin of the ungodly, will urge us to save ourselves from among them: and the lives that are jeopardized for Christ's service shall be secured by his mercy. But the most prudent means ought to be used for our safety, even while we trust our all to God and his redeeming grace. And God can easily make such as are weak encouragers of his strongest saints.

CHAPTER III. [Ver. 1. Came to Jordan. The snows that cover Hermon are the real sources of the river Jordan. It has two historical sources:—one at the base of a rounded hill in the midst of a marshy plain. On the hill once stood the border city of Dan. The other is four miles eastward, on a terrace on the southern declivity of Hermon, beside the ruins of Banias or Caesarea-Philippi. The highest perennial source of the Jordan is not named in history; it is in the bottom of a valley at the western base of Hermon, near the town of Hasbeiya, and 12 miles north of Dan.

6 And Joshua spake unto the priests, saying, Take<sup>a</sup> up the ark of the covenant, and pass over before the people. And they took up the ark of the covenant, and went before the people.

8 And thou shalt command the priests that bear the ark of the covenant, saying, When ye are come to the brink of the water of Jordan, ye shall <sup>stand still</sup> in Jordan.<sup>3</sup>

10 And Joshua said, <sup>Hereby</sup> ye shall know that <sup>the living God is</sup> among you, and that he will without fail <sup>drive out from before you</sup> the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Hivites, and the Perizzites, and the Girgashites, and the Amorites, and the Jebusites.

The moment they did so the water was to fall away before them—that coming from above was to be stopped by divine power, and to rise on an heap, while that in the channel was to flow off into the Dead Sea. it is greater still than the passing of the Red Sea: that was instrumentally effected by a mighty wind, this by the ark and the feet of the priests. ## CHAPTER IV.

1 Twelve men are appointed to take twelve stones for a memorial out of Jordan. 9 Twelve other stones are set up in the midst of Jordan. 10, 19 The people pass over. 14 God magnifieth Joshua. 20 The twelve stones are pitched in Gilgal.

AND it came to pass, when all the people were clean passed <sup>over</sup> Jordan, that the LORD spake unto Joshua, saying,

2 Take<sup>b</sup> you twelve men out of the people, out of every tribe a man;

3 And command ye them, saying, Take you hence out of the midst of Jordan, out of the place where the priests' feet stood firm, <sup>twelve</sup> stones; and ye shall carry them over with you, and leave them <sup>in</sup> the lodging-place where ye shall lodge this night.

4 Then Joshua called the twelve men, whom he had <sup>prepared</sup> of the children of Israel, out of every tribe a man;

5 And Joshua said unto them, Pass over before the ark of the LORD your God <sup>into</sup> the midst of Jordan, and take you up every man of you a stone upon his shoulder, according unto the number of the tribes of the children of Israel;

About 5 miles south of Dan the three unite, and after a course of 6 miles more the Jordan expands into the Lake Merom, and in about 28 miles farther it enters the Lake or Sea of Gennesareth or Tiberias. From this lake it pursues its course, still southerly, through a dreary valley till it empties itself into the Dead Sea. The whole course, computing the windings of the stream, is about 160 miles. Travellers differ greatly as to its width; but from the average it may be estimated at about 90 feet. That it formerly overflowed its banks the Scriptures assert, ver. 15; 1 Ch. 12. 15; this some travellers deny. No rational man can doubt the Scripture statement, and recent researches prove it to be strictly accurate. That it rises an average of about 9 feet, by the melting of the snow upon Lebanon and Hermon, is agreed upon all hands. This passage took place in April, when the river is broadest and deepest; a fact so far important as it stultifies the infidel conjecture of some German neologists, who pretend that a rock having fallen stopped the stream, and that Joshua, taking advantage of the circumstance, affirmed that it was a miracle, and so encouraged the people to follow. Surely these are the men who, 'counting themselves wise, become fools!' C. and P.]

Ver. 15. [Hebrew: 'For the Jordan was full up to all its banks all the days of harvest.' This clause is explanatory of the statement that the priests dipped their feet in the brim of the river. Under ordinary circumstances this would be impossible, for the real channel of the river has perpendicular banks from 6 to 8 feet deep, always swept by the torrent. In early spring, however—the time of harvest in the valley of Jericho—the river rises over these banks and floods the flat bottom of the narrow ravine through which the channel flows. The priests bearing the ark could, without any danger, dip their feet in the water which overflowed the banks. The opening of a passage through the river at such a season was the greater miracle. Had it been late in the summer it might have been thought that natural causes operated; but in harvest—the time of the overflow—the finger of God must have been manifest to all. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Let us always press forward in the way of our duty, notwithstanding foreseen difficulties attending it. And when we have done our utmost, the Lord can step in and clear our passage. Let us follow his word as our guide, and our way will be right. But let us always set Jesus, the Ark of the covenant, before us, by faith depend on him, and with due reverence follow his example; and if we cannot get rid of faults, let us detest them. Let ministers go before others, as he-goats before the flock; and though they should be more exposed than others, that Christ, whose name they bear in their ministrations, shall be their protection; for God highly honours those that honour him; and those who are comforted and encouraged of God should encourage and strengthen their brethren. In the moment of difficulty the Lord will be seen. The greatness of the difficulty shall but the more magnify the power of God in overcoming it. And Christ will be the protection of his people in trouble or death, till they be all clean passed over into Canaan above. If then I expect a noted appearance of God for my relief, let me make solemn preparation for it, separating myself from every sinful lust and carnal care. Always seeking the honour which cometh from above, let me improve God's present manifestations of power and love as pledges of more, nay, of eternal and immediate enjoyment of him. Let no occasional advantage, gained by the opposition made to my happiness, or to the church of God, dismay me; for the Lord sits King upon the floods, and is mightier than the noise of many waters.

CHAPTER IV. [Ver. 4. Twelve men whom he had prepared. By instructing them to come without any other burden, and informing them of their specific duty; and, as is not improbable, by exercising them to lift and carry such stones as would give to future times a remarkable specimen of their strength, as well as a memorial of the miracle the Lord had wrought for the passage of his people—a lively emblem of every one who would, in any office, minister to God and his church. He must be prepared, he must bear upon his shoulder his appointed burden; and when laid down, it is to form a memorial of the grace and power of God. C.]

ANCIENT JERICO—WHERE THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL FIRST CAMPED. [Joshua, iv:19.]—"And the people came up out of Jordan on the tenth day of the first month and encamped in Gilgal, in the east border of Jericho." Jericho is a city of great antiquity. It is situated in what is called the plain of the Jordan, and is consequently over against the ford of the river where, under the leadership of Joshua, the Israelites crossed. It is about 6 miles west of the Jordan and about 8 miles northwest of the Dead Sea. It once had a king, and its walls were so wide that houses were built upon them. Here the sons of the prophet sought retirement from the world. The city rose to great influence during the reign of Herod, who had his residence here. He fortified it and built many palaces, which he named after his friends. Here he died, and it was in the amphitheater of Jericho that the news of his death was announced to the assembled soldiers and people by Salome.

6 That this may be <sup>a</sup> a sign among you, that when your children ask their fathers in time to come,<sup>1</sup> saying, What mean ye by these stones?

7 Then ye shall answer them, That the waters of Jordan were <sup>b</sup> cut off before the ark of the covenant of the LORD; when it passed over Jordan, the waters of Jordan were cut off: and <sup>c</sup> these stones shall be for a memorial unto the children of Israel for ever.

8 And the children of Israel did so as Joshua commanded, and took up twelve stones<sup>2</sup> out of the midst of Jordan, as the LORD spake unto Joshua, according to the number of the tribes of the children of Israel, and carried them over with them unto the place where they lodged, and laid them down there.

9 ¶ And Joshua set up twelve stones in <sup>d</sup> the midst of Jordan,<sup>3</sup> in the place where the feet of the priests which bare the ark of the covenant stood: and they are there unto this day.<sup>4</sup>

10 ¶ For the priests which bare the ark stood in the midst of Jordan, <sup>e</sup> until everything was finished that the LORD commanded Joshua to speak unto the people, according to all that Moses <sup>f</sup> commanded Joshua: and the people <sup>g</sup> hastened<sup>5</sup> and passed over.

11 And it came to pass, when all the people were clean passed over, that the ark of the LORD passed over, and the priests, in the presence of the people.

12 And <sup>h</sup> the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and half the tribe of Manasseh, passed over armed before the children of Israel, as Moses spake unto them.<sup>6</sup>

13 About forty thousand prepared for war<sup>7</sup> passed over before the LORD unto battle, to the plains of Jericho.

14 ¶ On that day the LORD <sup>i</sup> magnified Joshua in the sight of all Israel; and they feared him, as they feared Moses, all the days of his life.

15 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Joshua, saying,

16 Command the priests that bear <sup>j</sup> the ark of the testimony, that they come up out of Jordan.

17 Joshua therefore commanded the priests, saying, <sup>k</sup> Come ye up out of Jordan.

1 The Canaanites are afraid. 2 Joshua reneweth circumcision. 10 The passover is kept at Gilgal. 12 Manna ceaseth. 13 An angel appeareth to Joshua.

AND it came to pass, when <sup>a</sup> all the kings of the Amorites, which were on the side of Jordan westward, and all the kings of the Canaanites, which were by the sea, <sup>b</sup> heard that the LORD had dried up the waters of Jordan from before the children of Israel, until we were passed over, that their heart melted; neither was there spirit in them any more, because of the children of Israel.

3 And Joshua made him sharp knives, and circumcised the children of Israel at the hill of the foreskins.<sup>2</sup>

gious instruction founded upon the original document, and perpetuating the history. A system which embodies, vitalizes, and perpetuates tradition, but a system as different from mere tradition as a house built upon a rock differs from a house built upon sand. As an example of tradition without scriptural authority take Mat. 15. 3, 6; Col. 2. 8. For the authority of traditions, that is, records delivered on scriptural warrant, see 2 Th. 3. 6; 1 Co. 11. 2, in which last-cited passage the ordinances, or traditions, evidently comprehend the Lord's supper. To traditions so embodied the infidel can produce no rational objection. Read ver. 20-23. See Leslie's Short Way with the Deists, and Dwight on the Lord's Supper. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—No care or labour of our own should ever hinder us from that which tends to the immediate honour of God, and the commemoration of his wonderful works. And if not one Israelite, however feeble, perish in trouble or in death, surely it becomes all to keep his mighty works in everlasting remembrance. Never let us hunt after pomp or finery in our memorials; for God has chosen the weak and foolish things of this world to confound all earthly glory. Let every accommodation, even in outward things, render us forward and exemplary in duty. If we be called forth to God's work, we may cheerfully leave all our worldly concerns behind us: and if we have God's presence with us, we need not be weary, nor doubt but we shall safely land at last: for though the years of our pilgrimage should be many and sorrowful, they have an appointed end: let us therefore never hurry out of danger till our work in it be finished. But whatever perilous work God allots to us, let us go through it with proper despatch, never with unbelieving haste:

and let us always honour those whom God honours by his providence. The religious inquiries of young people should be encouraged and gratified to the uttermost. If we wish them wise when they are old, they ought to be inquisitive when they are young. But if we wish our present mercies to be doubly sweetened, let us compare them with our former ones.

CHAPTER V. [Ver. 2. Sharp knives. Knives of flint, as in the marginal translation. The use of flint for knives, arrows, spear-heads, chisels, and hatchets has been common in many nations. Specimens of some, or all of them, are occasionally found in almost every country of Europe, as well as of Asia. The Egyptians, according to Herodotus (b. ii.), used them in opening bodies for embalming, and some of the judaizing Abyssinian Christians use them still in

THE CHURCH AT GILGAL—WHERE THE ISRAELITES KEPT THE FIRST PASSOVER IN THE PROMISED LAND. [Joshua, v:10.]—"And the children of Israel encamped in Gilgal, and kept the passover on the fourteenth day of the month at even in the plains of Jericho." This was the site of the first camp of the Israelites after they crossed over the river Jordan, the place at which they passed the first night in the Promised Land, and where the 12 stones were set up which had been taken from the bed of the stream. In the above view we have a picture of a church built by the Greek Christians. This is perhaps the most interesting building between the Judean mountains and the River Jordan. This is about 20 miles from Jerusalem, and to reach it one makes a descent of 3800 feet over the rockiest and roughest road perhaps in Christendom. There are many ruins found in this plain, but the Judean hills overlooking it are the same that they were when Joshua encamped here with the children of Israel.

that were males, even <sup>all</sup> the men of war, died in the wilderness by the way, after they came out of Egypt.

5 Now all the people that came out were circumcised; but <sup>all</sup> the people that were born in the wilderness by the way as they came forth out of Egypt, <sup>them</sup> they had not circumcised.

6 For the children of Israel walked <sup>forty</sup> years in the wilderness, till all the people that were men of war, which came out of Egypt, were consumed, because they obeyed not the voice of the LORD: unto whom the LORD sware that he would not show them the land which the LORD <sup>sware</sup> unto their fathers that he would give us, a land that floweth with milk and honey.

7 And their children, <sup>whom</sup> he raised up in their stead, them Joshua circumcised: for they were uncircumcised, because they had not circumcised them by the way.

8 And it came to pass, when they had done circumcising all the people,<sup>3</sup> that they abode in their places in the camp till they were whole.

9 And the LORD said unto Joshua, This day have I rolled away the <sup>reproach</sup> of Egypt from off you: wherefore the name of the place is called <sup>Gilgal</sup> unto this day.<sup>4</sup>

10 ¶ And the children of Israel encamped in Gilgal, and <sup>kept</sup> the passover on the fourteenth day of the month at even, in the plains of Jericho.

11 And they did eat of the old corn of the land on the morrow after the passover, <sup>unleavened</sup> cakes and parched <sup>corn</sup> in the self-same day.

12 ¶ And the manna <sup>ceased</sup> on the morrow after they had eaten of the old corn of the land; neither had the children of Israel manna any more; <sup>but</sup> they did eat of the fruit of the land of Canaan that year.<sup>5</sup>

13 ¶ And it came to pass, when Joshua was by Jericho, that he <sup>lifted</sup> up his eyes and looked, and, behold, there stood <sup>a</sup> man over against him, with his sword drawn in his hand:

¶ It would appear that Gilgal was the name of the place before the exodus.

¶ For Moses describes the Canaanites as dwelling over against Gilgal, De. 11. 30.

¶ The meaning in this passage does not appear to be that a new name was given to the place, but rather that the name of the place was changed.

¶ The word Gilgal means 'a circle,' and also 'a rolling away.' A similar play upon the meaning of a word occurs in the case of Gilead; and Bethel is an example of an old name having attached to it a new significance.

¶ This explanation—simple, natural, and in full accordance with the genius of oriental languages—removes at once the objections which have been brought against the passage.—P.

1 Jericho is shut up. 2 God instructeth Joshua how to besiege it. 12 The city is compassed. 17 It is accursed. 20 The walls fall down. 22 Rahab is saved. 26 The man that buildeth Jericho again is laid under a curse.

2 ¶ And the <sup>LORD</sup> said unto Joshua, See, I have given into thine hand Jericho, and the king thereof, <sup>and</sup> the mighty men of valour.

3 And ye shall <sup>compass</sup> the city, all <sup>ye</sup> men of war, <sup>and</sup> go round about the city once. Thus shalt thou do six days.

4 And seven priests shall bear before the ark <sup>seven</sup> trumpets of rams' horns;<sup>3</sup> and the seventh day ye shall compass the city seven times, and the priests shall blow with the trumpets.

5 And it shall come to pass, that <sup>when</sup> they make a long <sup>blast</sup> with the ram's horn, <sup>and</sup> when ye hear the sound of the trumpet, <sup>all</sup> the people shall shout with a great shout; and the wall of the city shall fall <sup>down</sup> flat,<sup>5</sup> and the people shall ascend up, every man straight before him.

6 ¶ And Joshua the son of Nun called the priests, and said unto them, <sup>Take</sup> up the ark of the covenant, and let seven<sup>6</sup> priests bear seven trumpets of rams' horns before the ark of the LORD.

7 And he said unto <sup>the</sup> people, Pass on, and compass the city, and let him that is armed pass on before the ark of the LORD.

the rite of circumcision (Ludolph, Hist. of Ethiopia, b. iii. c. 1).—Circumcise again. Not in allusion to any general act of circumcision at, or soon after, the exodus; but as the first time, at eight days old, Ge. 17. 12, had been neglected, God now allows and commands a second opportunity of sealing and ratifying the national covenant; just as the people were allowed to celebrate the passover in the days of Hezekiah, contrary to the letter of the law, in the second instead of the first month, 2 Ch. 30. 2; 3. 15. Ver. 9. [Reproach of Egypt. The reproach of Egypt seems to mean the reproach of having been slaves and without a country. Now, by the sign of the covenant they become God's freedmen, and have taken possession of the land which he sware to give their fathers.—Note, There is no real reproach but the slavery of sin; but 'if the Son make us free,' by circumcising our hearts, and admitting us into his covenant of promise, Jn. 5. 36; Ep. 2. 12, 19, then is our reproach rolled away, and then 'are we free indeed.' C.]

Ver. 11. [Parched corn. That is, the ears of the growing crop, a common and favourite food in eastern countries till this day. The old and the new are mentioned together to indicate the abundance of the former and present harvest.—Note, 'Every scribe instructed unto the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is a householder, who bringeth forth out of his treasure things new and old,' Mat. 13. 52. And so the Lord equally satisfies his people with the old doctrines, and new discoveries of truth, with old faith and new experience. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Sad is the case of those against whom the Lord is come up as an enemy. How can their hearts be courageous or their hands be strong? Even his secret terrors can bring them into the agonies of death. The sins of parents often, in a fearful manner, bereave their children of the seals of God's covenant, or their happy virtue: but his mercy can remove the reproach and plague in his time. And by circumcision of their hearts, by feasting them on the flesh and blood of his Son, by giving them foretastes of the heavenly joys, and manifestations of himself as their leader and protector, he must prepare his people for their spiritual warfare. Such then as would courageously fight his battles should first solemnly devote themselves to him, and act faith upon him. In the use of his sacraments. But let us use the gospel manna while we have it; the time is at hand when it shall be no more offered: and let us never expect extraordinary supplies when ordinary can be had. But if Jesus appear for our direction or encouragement in doubtful or perilous circumstances, let us entertain his visits with the utmost reverence, purity, and the readiest obedience.

CHAPTER VI. [Ver. 26. Cursed be the man before the Lord that riseth up and buildeth this city Jericho. A new city called Jericho appears to have been built at no great distance from the site of the old, Ju. 1. 16; 3. 13. But this curse of Joshua prevented the rebuilding of the original Jericho till the time of Ahab, about 530 years after the anathema was pronounced. Hid of Bethel, at that time, dared to rebuild it; but, according to the threatening, his eldest son was taken away when the foundations were laid, and when he set up the gates he was left childless, 1 Ki. 16. 34. C.—The reason of this remarkable curse is not stated. We can scarcely suppose that it is a mere arbitrary anathema. The licentiousness of Sodom probably clung to the whole valley, owing perhaps in some degree to the

There is need, therefore, of patient perseverance in using the means of grace, though we see not their immediate good effect: for if we follow God's ark, we shall speed at last, and see his salvation, and he can accomplish the most remarkable events by the weakest of instruments. By the bearing of Jesus' name, and proclaiming his gospel before sinful men, particularly on his Sabbaths, what destruction is made of strongholds of inward corruptions and high imaginations, deep-rooted customs and laws of iniquity; of heathen and Popish errors, idolatries, and superstitions, supported by all the principalities and powers of hell and earth! What in us is natural he purifies for his service; and what is sinful he devotes to irreparable ruin. Nor must we murmur at the severity wherewith God executes his judgments: he is just and righteous

23 And the young men that were spies went in, and brought out Rahab, and her father, and her mother, and her brethren, and all that she had; and they brought out all her <sup>7</sup>kindred, and left them <sup>a</sup>without the camp of Israel.<sup>8</sup>

25 And Joshua <sup>3</sup>saved Rahab the harlot alive, and her father's household, and all that she had; and she dwelleth in Israel even unto this <sup>3</sup>day; because she hid the messengers which Joshua sent to spy out Jericho.

unto him, <sup>1</sup>Let not all the people go up; but let about two or three thousand men<sup>4</sup> go up and smite Ai, and make not all the people to labour thither; for they are but few.<sup>5</sup>

4 So there went up thither of the people about three thousand men; and they <sup>6</sup>fled before the men of Ai.

5 And the men of Ai smote of them about thirty and six men: for they chased them from before the gate even unto Shebarim, and smote them in the going down;<sup>6</sup> wherefore <sup>7</sup>the hearts of the people melted,<sup>7</sup> and became as water.

6 ¶ And Joshua <sup>8</sup>rent his clothes, and fell to the earth upon his face before the ark of the LORD until the even-tide, he and the elders of Israel, and <sup>9</sup>put dust upon their heads.

7 And Joshua said, Alas, O Lord God, wherefore<sup>m</sup> hast thou at all brought this people over Jordan, to deliver us into the hand of the Amorites, to destroy us? <sup>n</sup>Would to God we had been content, and dwelt on the other side Jordan!

8 O LORD, <sup>o</sup>what shall I say, when Israel turneth their backs<sup>8</sup> before their enemies!

9 For the Canaanites, and all the inhabitants of the land, shall hear of it, and <sup>p</sup>shall environ us round, and cut off our name from the earth: and <sup>q</sup>what wilt thou do unto thy great name?

10 ¶ And the LORD said unto Joshua, Get thee up; <sup>r</sup>wherefore liest<sup>9</sup> thou thus upon thy face?

11 Israel <sup>s</sup>hath sinned, and they have also transgressed my covenant which I commanded them: for they have even taken of the accursed thing, and have also stolen, and dissembled also, and they have put it even among their own stuff.

12 Therefore<sup>t</sup> the children of Israel could not stand before their enemies, but turned their backs before their enemies, because they were accursed; neither will I be with you any more, except ye destroy the accursed from among you.

13 Up, <sup>u</sup>sanctify the people, and say, Sanctify yourselves against to-morrow; for thus saith the LORD God of Israel, <sup>v</sup>There is an accursed thing in the midst of thee, O Israel: thou canst not stand before thine enemies, until ye take away the accursed thing from among you.

14 In <sup>w</sup>the morning therefore ye shall be brought according to your tribes: and it shall be, that the tribe which the LORD <sup>x</sup>taketh<sup>1</sup> shall come according to the families thereof: and the family which the LORD shall take shall come by households; and the household which the LORD shall take shall come man by man.

15 And it shall be, that he that is taken with the accursed thing <sup>a</sup>shall be burnt with fire, he and all<sup>2</sup> that he hath; because he hath transgressed the covenant of the LORD, and because he hath <sup>b</sup>wrought folly<sup>3</sup> in Israel.

16 ¶ So Joshua <sup>c</sup>rose up early in the morning, and brought Israel by their tribes; and the tribe of <sup>d</sup>Judah was taken:

17 And he brought the family of Judah; and he took the family of the Zarhites;<sup>4</sup> and he brought the family of the Zarhites man by man; and Zabdi was taken:

18 And he brought his household man by man; and <sup>e</sup>Achan, the son of Carmi, the son of Zabdi, the son of Zerah, of the tribe of Judah, was taken.

19 ¶ And Joshua said unto Achan, <sup>f</sup>My son, give, I pray thee, glory to the LORD God of Israel,<sup>5</sup> and make confession unto him; and tell me now what thou hast done; hid it not from me.

20 And Achan answered Joshua, and said, <sup>g</sup>Indeed I have sinned<sup>6</sup> against the LORD God of Israel, and thus and thus have I done:

21 When <sup>h</sup>I saw among the spoils a goodly Babylonish garment,<sup>7</sup> and two hundred shekels of silver,<sup>8</sup> and a wedge<sup>9</sup> of gold of fifty <sup>i</sup>shekels weight, then I coveted them, and took them; and, behold, they are hid in the earth in the midst of my tent, and the silver under it.

22 ¶ So Joshua sent messengers, and they ran unto the tent;<sup>2</sup> and, behold, it was hid in his tent, and the silver under it.

23 And they took them out of the midst of the tent, and brought them unto Joshua, and unto all the children of Israel, and laid<sup>3</sup> them out before the LORD.

24 ¶ And Joshua, and all Israel with him, took Achan the son of Zerah, and the silver, and the garment, and the wedge of gold, and his <sup>j</sup>sons, and his daughters, and his oxen, and his asses, and his sheep, and his tent, and all that he had; and they brought them unto the valley of Achor.

25 And Joshua said, Why hast thou <sup>k</sup>troubled us? the LORD shall trouble thee this day. And all Israel <sup>l</sup>stoned him with stones, and burned them with fire, after they had stoned them with stones.<sup>4</sup>

26 And they <sup>m</sup>raised over him a great heap in all his works. They that will harden their heart against him must, when too late, find their ruin inevitable. But certain and extensive is that salvation which is marked with the blood of the Son of God! In virtue hereof, such as were once infamous in wickedness become as noted in gifts and grace. Such as in this time of his grace submit to his terms of peace he will in no wise cast out; and their relations shall share of manifold mercies on their account. But dreadful and inevitable is the ruin of such as attempt to rear up what God in anger hath cast down.

CHAPTER VII. REFLECTIONS.—How terrible a sin is sacrilege, especially when it is presumptuously committed! It brings the most tremendous plagues upon persons and nations. One sinner often destroys much good; and becomes a plague to himself and to the societies with which he is connected. But terrors of conscience will at last most surely attend indulged wickedness: and the attempts begun in sloth or self-confidence, often issue in shame and despair. It is becoming, therefore, for the most courageous and intrepid to humble themselves under the mighty hand of God, and to tremble for fear of his displeasure. The choicest saints are too ready to be overmuch discouraged by the alarming frowns of God's providence, and in their anguish to utter words unadvised! and yet, of stones unto this day. So the LORD <sup>a</sup>turned from the fierceness of his anger: wherefore the name of that place was called The valley of Achor,<sup>b</sup> unto this day.

CHAPTER VIII.

AND the LORD said unto Joshua, <sup>a</sup>Fear not, neither be thou dismayed; take all the people of war with thee, and arise, go up to Ai: see, <sup>b</sup>I have given into thy hand the king of Ai, and his people, and his city, and his land.

2 And thou <sup>c</sup>shalt do to Ai and her king as thou didst unto Jericho and her king: only the<sup>d</sup> spoil thereof, and the cattle thereof, shall ye take for a prey unto yourselves. Lay thee an<sup>e</sup> ambush for the city behind it.

3 ¶ So Joshua arose, and <sup>f</sup>all the people of war, to go up against Ai: and Joshua chose out thirty thousand mighty<sup>1</sup> men of valour, and sent them away <sup>g</sup>by night.

4 And he commanded them, saying, Behold, ye shall lie <sup>h</sup>in wait against the city, even behind the city; go not very far from the city, but be ye all ready:

5 And I, and all the people that are with me, will approach unto the city; and it shall come to pass, when they come out against us, as at the first, <sup>i</sup>that we will flee before them,

6 (For they will come out after us,) till we have drawn<sup>2</sup> them from the city; for <sup>j</sup>they will say, They flee before us, as at the first: therefore we will flee before them.

7 Then <sup>k</sup>ye shall rise up from the ambush, and seize upon the city: for the LORD your God will deliver it into your hand.

8 And it shall be, when ye have taken the city, <sup>l</sup>that ye shall <sup>m</sup>set the city on fire:<sup>3</sup> according to the commandment of the LORD shall ye do. <sup>n</sup>See, I have commanded you.

9 ¶ Joshua therefore sent them forth: and they went to lie in ambush, and abode between Beth-el<sup>o</sup> and Ai, on the west side of Ai: but Joshua lodged that night among the people.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>ab</sup> From the conduct of the king of Ai, and from other circumstances, we may infer that the Canaanites were but imperfectly versant in the art of war. Moreover they were, for their wickedness, visited with the spirit of infatuation. It was not Joshua's skill and courage, but Jehovah's guidance and aid, which gave to the Israelites their conquests. <sup>af</sup> It is probable that this was the preconcerted signal, at the sight of which the men in ambush knew they were to arise. The Lord himself intimated to Joshua the proper time to make the movement. A flag might be attached to the top of the spear, (as the rabbins, with great probability, suppose) which would make it conspicuous at a considerable distance. Some have said, that the word from the statement in ver. 26, that this action of Joshua was figurative, and is to be like the lifting up of Moses' hand in the battle with Amalek, it was a token of the divine presence and pledge of God's assistance, and they would, in the one case, as in the other, connect the victory with the action; but we should be cautious of searching for figurative meanings when not led to them by the word of God itself. The indulging of this spirit has, in many instances, opened the flood-gates of error. — I.

nigh, and came before the city, and pitched on the north side of Ai: now there was a valley between them and Ai.

12 And he took about <sup>a</sup>five thousand men, and set them to lie in ambush between Beth-el and Ai, on the west side of the city.<sup>5</sup>

13 And when they had set the people, even all the host that was on the north of the city, and <sup>b</sup>their liers in wait on the west of the city, Joshua went that night into the midst of the valley.<sup>6</sup>

14 ¶ And it came to pass, when the king of Ai saw it, that they hasted, and rose up early; and <sup>c</sup>the men of the city went out against Israel to battle, he and all his people, at a time appointed, before the plain: but he <sup>d</sup>wist not<sup>7</sup> that there were liers in ambush against him behind the city.

15 And Joshua and all Israel made as if they were beaten before them, and fled <sup>e</sup>by the way of the wilderness.

16 And all the people that were in Ai were called together to pursue after them; and they pursued after Joshua, and were <sup>f</sup>drawn away from the city.

17 And there was not a <sup>g</sup>man left in Ai or Beth-el that went not out after Israel: and they left the city open,<sup>8</sup> and pursued after Israel.

18 And the LORD said unto Joshua, <sup>h</sup>Stretch out the spear that<sup>1</sup> is in thy hand toward Ai; for I will give it into thine hand. And Joshua <sup>i</sup>stretched out the spear that he had in his hand toward the city.

19 And the ambush arose quickly out of their place, and they ran as soon as he had stretched out his hand: and they entered into the city, and took it, and hasted and set the city on fire.

20 And when the men of Ai looked behind them, they saw, and, behold, the <sup>j</sup>smoke of the city ascended up to heaven; and they had no <sup>k</sup>power to flee this way or that way: and the <sup>l</sup>people that fled to the wilderness turned back upon the pursuers.

21 And when Joshua and all Israel saw that the ambush had taken the city, and that the smoke of the city ascended, then they turned again, and slew the men of Ai.

22 And the other issued out of the city against them; so they were in the midst of Israel, some on this side, and some on that when the honour of God and the safety of his people lie nearest their heart, a proper sorrow, in such a state, is highly becoming. With impartial care, and proper expedition, should ruinous scandals and crimes be inquired into, and animadverted upon, for the preservation of churches and nations. If we do not destroy sin it will destroy us. And it is mad to indulge ourselves in secret wickedness, when God can so easily bring it to light in the most public and shameful manner. It is desirable, yea, even hopeful, when criminals are brought to a candid and kindly confession of their sin: and yet it is necessary to have their punishment as certain and striking as possible, that others may see, and hear, and fear to do such things; yea, in some cases, to keep up the standing memorials of it.

CHAPTER VIII. REFLECTIONS.—Learn, my soul, that whenever I put away the accursed thing I may expect comfort from God: and that such as honour God with the first-fruits of their substance are gainers at last; while those who greedily grasp the Lord's share become inconceivable losers: that all the people of God ought to strive together in their spiritual warfare: that prudence and caution are as necessary as strength to insure success: that well-timed yielding procures victory as well as pacifies great offences: and that divine assurances of success inspire men with courage and boldness, notwithstanding former disappointments. Let me here behold how God qualifies his armies and infatuates his enemies. Short is the rejoicing of the wicked! and the prosperity of fools will destroy them. But they who fight the Lord's battles receive their glorious reward, when the end of ringleaders in presumptuous rebellion against the Lord is in shame and confusion. Whatever then God requires me to do, let me do it with all my might. Never

MOUNT EBAL—WHERE JOSHUA BUILT AN ALTAR. [Joshua, viii: 30.]— “Then Joshua built an altar unto the Lord God of Israel in Mount Ebal.”
 The traveler in passing from Jerusalem northward to Nazareth comes to the entrance of the valley between Mount Gerizim and Mount Ebal at Jacob's well. These mountains so come together as to form a natural amphitheater. Mount Ebal forms the northern side of the fertile valley in which ancient Shechem was situated. It rises to a height of 2986 feet. Upon this mountain the curse for disobedience to the law was pronounced, while the blessing for obedience was given from Mount Gerizim. Its modern Arabic name is Jebel Eslamiyah. This is from a female saint whose tomb is standing on the eastern part of the ridge a little before the highest point is reached. The acoustic properties of the valley between the two mountains have been tested, and it is said that a man's voice uttered in the valley can be distinctly heard across the amphitheater formed here by the two mountains side: and they smote them, so that they <sup>1</sup>let none of them remain or escape.

23 ¶ And<sup>2</sup> the king of Ai they took alive, and brought him to Joshua.

24 And it came to pass, when Israel had made an end of slaying all the inhabitants of Ai in the field, in the wilderness wherein they chased them, and when they were all fallen on the edge of the sword, until they were consumed, that all the Israelites <sup>3</sup>returned unto Ai, and smote it with the edge of the sword.

25 And so it was, that all that fell that day, both of men and women, were twelve thousand, even all the men of <sup>4</sup>Ai.

26 For Joshua <sup>5</sup>drew not his hand back, wherewith he stretched out the spear, until he had utterly destroyed all the inhabitants of Ai.

27 Only<sup>6</sup> the cattle, and the spoil of that city, Israel took for a prey unto themselves, according unto the word of the LORD which he commanded Joshua.

28 And Joshua burnt Ai, and made it an heap <sup>7</sup>for ever, even a desolation unto this day.

29 And the king of Ai he <sup>8</sup>hanged<sup>2</sup> on a tree until even-tide: and as soon as the sun was down, Joshua commanded that they should take his carcass down from the tree, and cast it at the entering of the gate of the city, and raise<sup>m</sup> thereon a great heap of stones,<sup>3</sup> that remaineth unto this day.

30 ¶ Then Joshua <sup>9</sup>built an altar unto the LORD God of Israel in mount Ebal;<sup>4</sup>

31 As Moses, the servant of the LORD, commanded the children of Israel, as it is written in the book of the law of Moses, An altar of whole stones, over which no man hath lift up any iron; and they <sup>10</sup>offered thereon burnt-offerings unto the LORD, and sacrificed peace-offerings.

32 And he <sup>11</sup>wrote there upon the stones a copy of the law of Moses, which he<sup>5</sup> wrote in the presence of the children of Israel.

33 And <sup>12</sup>all Israel, and their elders, and officers, and their judges, stood on this side the ark, and on that side, before the priests the Levites, which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, as well <sup>13</sup>the stranger, as he that was born among them; half of them over against mount Gerizim, and half of them over against mount<sup>6</sup> Ebal; as Moses, the servant of the LORD, had commanded before, that they should bless the people of Israel.

o Joshua celebrates his first victories not by unmeaning rejoicings, but by a visible acknowledgment of God; and thus, at a time when gratified ambition leads many to forget him, and ascribe the glory to themselves, Joshua remembers him, and renders him all the praise. C.—It will be observed that there is no note of time here. The event recorded may have occurred immediately after the capture of Ai, or it may have taken place at a later period, for it is clear that all the events in the book are not given in strict chronological order. There is nothing, however, either impossible or incredible in the supposition that Josh. marched direct from Ai. The way was open. No fortress or strong city lay between Bethel and Shechem; and the fear of the Lord, as we are elsewhere told, had paralyzed the whole inhabitants of the country.—P.

CHAPTER IX.

1 The kings combine against Israel. 3 The Gibeonites by craft obtain a league. 16 For which they are condemned to perpetual bondage.

AND it came to pass, when all the kings which were <sup>1</sup>'on this side Jordan, in the hills, and in the valleys, and in all the coasts of the great sea<sup>1</sup> over against <sup>2</sup>'Lebanon, <sup>3</sup>'the Hittite, and the Amorite, the Canaanite, the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite, heard thereof.

2 That they <sup>4</sup>'gathered themselves together, to fight with Joshua and with Israel, with one accord.<sup>3</sup>

3 ¶ And when the inhabitants of <sup>5</sup>'Gibeon heard what Joshua had done unto Jericho and to Ai,

4 They did work <sup>6</sup>'wilyly, and went and made as if they had been ambassadors,<sup>4</sup> and took old sacks<sup>5</sup> upon their asses, and wine bottles, old, and rent, and bound up;<sup>6</sup>

5 And old shoes and clouted<sup>7</sup> upon their feet, and old garments upon them; and all the bread of their provision was dry and mouldy.

6 And they went to Joshua unto the camp, at Gilgal, and said unto him, and to the men of Israel, We be come <sup>8</sup>'from a far country; now therefore make ye a league with us.

7 And the men of Israel said unto the <sup>9</sup>'Hivites, Peradventure ye dwell among us; and <sup>10</sup>'how shall we make a league with you?

8 And they said unto Joshua, <sup>11</sup>'We are thy servants. And Joshua said unto them, Who are ye? and from whence come ye?

9 And they said unto him, From <sup>12</sup>'a very far country thy servants are come because of the name of the LORD thy God: <sup>13</sup>'for we have heard the fame of him, and all that he did in Egypt,

10 And all that he did to the two kings of the Amorites, that were beyond Jordan, to Sihon king of Heshbon, and to Og king of Bashan, which was at Ashtarothe.

11 Wherefore our elders, and all the inhabitants of our country, spake to us, saying, Take victuals with you<sup>8</sup> for the journey, and go to let my covenanting with God be deferred till I am settled in the world: and let no carnal concern hinder my regard to the one thing needful. If I am in the way of my duty God will grant me special protection. While I serve God with his own, and depend on the atonement of his Son as the foundation of all my reconciliation and relation to him, and fellowship with him—while I heartily believe and consent to his will—let me do everything in his worship exactly according to his prescriptions; and be careful that my wife, children, and servants be acquainted with his word, and attending on his worship, as well as myself.

CHAPTER IX. REFLECTIONS.—While the people of God are busied in their sacred devotions, the wicked of the world are often occupied in plotting or attempting their destruction. And while infatuated with malice and revenge, they are generally unanimous against God, his cause, and people. But God, in great wisdom and kindness, commonly restrains the more formidable attacks of his enemies till he has prepared his people to receive them. When alarmed by God's mighty works in favour of his people, men are sometimes ready to solicit their friendship, even by hypocrisy and deceit; while those who pretend to do us most honour are inwardly the readiest to impose upon us. Pretences of religion and antiquity are snares extremely meet them, and say unto them, We are your servants: therefore now make ye a league with us.

12 This our bread we took hot for our provision out of our houses on the day we came forth to go unto you; but now, behold, it is dry, and it is mouldy:

13 And these bottles of wine which we filled were new; and, behold, they be rent: and these our garments and our shoes are become old by reason of the very long journey.

14 And the men took of their victuals,<sup>9</sup> and asked<sup>m</sup> not counsel at the mouth of the LORD.<sup>1</sup>

15 And Joshua made peace with them, and made a league with them, to let them live: and the princes<sup>2</sup> of the congregation sware unto them.

16 ¶ And it came to pass, at the end of three days after they had made a league with them, that they heard that they were their neighbours, and that they dwelt among them.

17 And the children of Israel journeyed, and came unto their cities on the third day. Now their cities were Gibeon, and Chephirah, and Beeroth, and Kirjath-jearim.<sup>3</sup>

18 And the children of Israel smote them not, because the princes of the congregation had sworn unto them by the LORD God of Israel: and all the congregation murmured against the princes.

19 But all the princes said unto all the congregation, We have sworn unto them by the LORD God of Israel: now therefore we may not touch them.<sup>4</sup>

20 This we will do to them; we will even let them live, lest wrath be upon us, because of the oath which we sware unto them.

21 And the princes said unto them, Let them live; but let them be hewers of wood, and drawers of water, unto all the congregation;<sup>5</sup> as the princes had promised them.

22 ¶ And Joshua called for them, and he spake unto them, saying, Wherefore have ye beguiled us, saying, We are very far from you; when ye dwell among us?

<sup>2</sup> Without inquiring into the right of one nation to prevent another from making peace with a third, and accusing the associate kings, as we well might, upon this ground, we see in their conduct the exact counterpart of the anger of worldly men against all who make peace with God. Thus forty men bind themselves with an oath to slay Paul; and thus the whole power of Charles V. was directed at the Reformation to exterminate the Protestants; and thus every one that will live godly in Christ Jesus must suffer persecution. —

23 Now therefore ye are cursed; and there shall none of you be freed<sup>7</sup> from being bondmen, and hewers of wood, and drawers of water, for the house of my God.

24 And they answered Joshua, and said, Because it was certainly told thy servants, how that the LORD thy God commanded his servant Moses to give you all the land, and to destroy all the inhabitants of the land from before you, therefore we were sore afraid of our lives because of you, and have done this thing.

25 And now, behold, we are in thine hand: as it seemeth good and right unto thee to do unto us, do.

26 And so did he unto them, and delivered them out of the hand of the children of Israel, that they slew them not.

27 And Joshua made them that day hewers of wood, and drawers of water, for the congregation, and for the altar of the LORD, even unto this day, in the place which he should choose.

CHAPTER X.

1 Five kings war against Gibeon. 6 Joshua rescueth it. 10 God fighteth against them with hailstones. 12 The sun and moon stand still at the word of Joshua. 16 The five kings are discovered in a cave. 22 They are brought forth, 24 scornfully used, 26 and hanged. 28 Seven kings more are conquered. 43 Joshua returneth to Gilgal.

NOW it came to pass, when Adoni-zedek king of Jerusalem had heard how Joshua had taken Ai, and had utterly destroyed it; as he had done to Jericho and her king, so he had done to Ai and her king; and how the inhabitants of Gibeon had made peace with Israel, and were among them;

2 That they feared greatly, because Gibeon was a great city, as one of the royal cities, and because it was greater than Ai, and all the men thereof were mighty.

3 Wherefore Adoni-zedek king of Jerusalem sent unto Hoham king of Hebron, and unto Piram king of Jarmuth, and unto Japhia king of Lachish, and unto Debir king of Eglon, saying,

4 Come up unto me, and help me, that we may smite Gibeon: for it hath made peace with Joshua, and with the children of Israel.<sup>2</sup> deceiving; and when persons have once begun to lie, it is hard to say where they may stop. Good men may often be deceived by such pretences; for the wisdom of the serpent, even in them, is not always joined with the harmlessness of the dove. And those who are honest themselves, and forward in their actions, are more apt to be imposed on by solemn pretences to religion, and appearances of simple honesty, especially when they do not acknowledge the Lord that he may direct their paths. Covenants once made should be fulfilled with tenderness; and great care ought to be taken that peace and fidelity may go hand in hand. But how amazing are the dispensations of Providence in the superabounding of grace where sin did much abound! By fraud Jacob obtained the blessing which consecrated him and his seed to be the peculiar people of God: and by fraud these accursed Gentiles of Gibeon obtained a covenant, which issued in their attendance on the courts of God, as figures of the gathering of the nations to Christ and his gospel church. Him that cometh to Christ he will in no wise cast out; and if he receive us, we need never complain of the cross which he lays on us. If we serve him, we may bless the day in which carnal liberty is exchanged for spiritual subjection.

CHAPTER X. [Ver. 1. Inhabitants of Gibeon. We never heard of a king of Gibeon: hence there is a high probability that the four cities, ch. 9. 17, were small federative states, somewhat like the Hanse towns of Germany, and were not moved to make peace by cowardice or weakness, see ver. 2, but by faith in the divine commission of Moses, and the promise of God to bestow Canaan upon Israel. C.]

Ver. 3. [It is worthy of note that the termination of the name Adoni-zedek is identical with that of Melchizedek, who was king of Jerusalem in Abraham's time. The former signifies 'Lord of righteousness,' the latter 'King of righteousness.' The town of Jarmuth, now called Yarmuk, stands on the top of a hill at the western base of the mountain chain of Judah, about equidistant from Jerusalem and Hebron. Lachish and Eglon were situated on the plain of Philistia, on the leading road to Gaza. P.]

Ver. 11. [I read and examined with much care the details of this remarkable narrative on the battle-field. I was then for the first time fully able to understand it. On hearing the tidings of the alliance against Gibeon, Joshua made a forced night march up from the deep valley of the Jordan, to the summit of the ridge on which Gibeon stands; and ere the sun rose the Israelites defiled into the open plateau round the city. Their sudden appearance, and fierce attack, overwhelmed the Amorites, who were driven back in confusion across the plateau. Joshua pursued them 'along the way that goeth up to Bethoron,' i.e. up the gentle ascent from the plain of Gibeon to the rocky ridge east of Bethoron. Here they had outstripped their pursuers; but when they were in 'the going down of Bethoron'—when they were rushing down the stony declivities from the ridge to the town, and from the town to the deep valley of Ajalon westward—'the Lord cast down great stones from heaven upon them.'

MOSQUE OF WADY 'ALI—NEAR THE PLACE OF JOSHUA'S GREAT VICTORY OVER THE FIVE KINGS. [JOSHUA, x: 10.]—"And the Lord discomfited them before Israel, and slew them with a great slaughter at Gibeon, and chased them along the way that goeth up to Beth-horon, and smote them to Azekah, and unto Makkedah." In the neighborhood of this mosque of Wady 'Ali we are upon a part of the scene where the great battle occurred when Joshua routed the host of the five kings.

They are supposed to have fled from Gibeon down by the upper Beth-horon to the lower, and then southward. The places referred to in the tenth chapter of Joshua, which records his great victory, are still to be found in this neighborhood. The mosque of Wady 'Ali was dedicated to Imam Ali. It is a sacred Moslem shrine, overshadowed by a magnificent terebinth tree. The glen in which this mosque stands is beautiful.

5 Therefore<sup>a</sup> the five kings of the Amorites, the king of Jerusalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jarmuth, the king of Lachish, the king of Eglon, gathered themselves together, and went up, they and all their hosts, and encamped before Gibeon and made war against it.

6 ¶ And the men of Gibeon sent unto Joshua<sup>3</sup> to the camp to 'Gilgal, saying, 'Slack not thy hand from thy servants; come up to us quickly, and save us, and help us: for all the kings of the Amorites, that dwell in 'the mountains are gathered together against us.

7 So Joshua ascended from Gilgal, he, and all the people of war with him, and all the mighty men of valour.

8 ¶ And the LORD said unto Joshua, "Fear them not: for I have delivered them into thine hand; there shall not a man of them stand before thee.

9 Joshua therefore came unto them suddenly, and went up from Gilgal all "night."

10 And the LORD "discomfited them before Israel, and slew them with a great slaughter at Gibeon, and chased them along the way that goeth up to 'Beth-horon, and smote them to Azekah," and unto 'Makkedah.

11 And it came to pass, as they fled from before Israel, and were in the going down to Beth-horon, that the LORD "cast down great stones<sup>5</sup> from heaven upon them unto Azekah, and they died: they were more which died with hailstones,<sup>6</sup> than they whom the children of Israel slew with the sword.

12 ¶ Then spake Joshua to the LORD, in the day when the LORD delivered up the Amorites before the children of Israel, and he "said in the sight of Israel, Sun, stand<sup>7</sup> thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon.

13 And the sun stood still, and the moon stayed, until the people had avenged themselves upon their enemies. Is not this written in the book of "Jasher?"<sup>8</sup> So the sun stood still in the midst of heaven, and hasted not to go down about a whole day.<sup>9</sup>

14 And there "was no day like that before it, or after it, that the LORD hearkened unto the voice of a man: for the LORD fought for Israel.

3 The neck being the place of the yoke in the horse, ox, &c., which are, in the most literal sense, conquered captives, subdued by man's ingenuity or power, and held and sold at his will: 'to put the feet upon the neck of men' is the emblem of their total subjugation to the will of their conquerors. So David expresses his victories over his inveterate enemies, Ps. 134.20. The custom seems to have been universal. Soper, king of Persia, is said to have put his foot daily upon the neck of the Roman emperor Valerius, whom he had taken captive in battle. Quintus Curtius records an example of this kind, when Dioxippus, an Athenian, conquered in a single combat with Hecuba, a Macedonian, in presence of Alexander, and concluded with putting his foot upon the neck of his prostrate antagonist. To those who have formed their ideas upon European models, the custom may appear unnecessarily degrading; but to men of Asiatic ideas it conveys no such impression. It merely indicates the completeness of subjugation.—C.

15 And 'Joshua returned, and all Israel with him, unto the camp to Gilgal.

16 ¶ But these five kings "fled, and hid themselves in a cave at "Makkedah."

17 And it was told Joshua, saying, The five kings are found hid in a cave at Makkedah.

18 And Joshua said, "Roll great stones upon the mouth of the cave, and set men by it for to keep them;

19 And "stay ye not, but pursue after your enemies, and smite the hindmost<sup>2</sup> of them; suffer them not to enter into their cities: for the LORD your God hath delivered them into your hand.

20 And it came to pass, when Joshua and the children of Israel had made an end of slaying them with a very great slaughter, till they were consumed, that the rest which remained of them entered into fenced cities.

21 And all the people returned to the camp to Joshua at Makkedah in peace: "none moved his tongue against any of the children of Israel.

22 ¶ Then said Joshua, Open the mouth of the cave, and bring out those five kings unto me out of the cave.

23 And they did so, and brought forth those five kings unto him out of the cave, the king of Jerusalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jarmuth, the king of Lachish, and the king of Eglon.

24 And it came to pass, when they brought out those kings unto Joshua, that Joshua called for all the men of Israel, and said unto the captains of the men of war which went with him, Come near, "put your feet upon the necks of these kings. And they came near, and put their feet upon the necks of them."

25 And Joshua said unto them, "Fear not, nor be dismayed; be strong, and of good courage: for thus shall the LORD do to all your enemies against whom ye fight.

26 And afterward Joshua smote them, and slew them, and "hanged them on five trees: and they were hanging upon the trees until the evening.

27 And it came to pass at the time of the going down of the sun, that Joshua commanded, and they took them down off the trees, and cast

Joshua crossed the ridge in pursuit, and on gaining some prominent peak from which he saw the fleeing Amorites below, pursued by the wearied Israelites, he feared that night would come ere the victory was complete. Behind him, eastward, were the heights which covered Gibeon; before him, westward, was the deep valley of Ajalon. Here he uttered the remarkable prayer, 'Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon.' P.]

Ver. 12. [Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon. Were even philosophers better acquainted with the causes of the annual and diurnal movements of the heavenly bodies, they would be better able to judge of this miracle. Though all miracles are alike easy to Omnipotence, it may still be fact, that some order of exceeding simplicity effected what appears so stupendous to our eyes. Something perhaps more simple than the stopping of the pulsation of the heart, and consequent suspension of the circulation of the blood. Had syncope, or fainting, never been witnessed but once some thousands of years ago, it would appear as incredible to modern physiologists as the standing still of the sun to infidel philosophers. The objection derived from the words—stood still, or went not down—is unworthy of a school-boy, and indicates as little knowledge of language as of Scripture evidence. The words state a fact in relation to sight, and so are literally true; and if we may admit the translation of Dr. A. Clarke, which there seems no ground to question, then do they likewise accord with the Newtonian astronomy, and most probably develop a still deeper insight in the mysteries of nature. According to Clarke, the address, ver. 12, should be translated:—'Sun! upon Gibeon be dumb; and the moon in the vale of Ajalon.' The effect of which is related in the following words:—'And the sun was dumb; and the moon stood still.' In which words Joshua does not say to the sun, stand still, as if he had conceived him to be running his race round the earth; but be dumb, silent, or inactive, so as to stop the rotation of the earth. And the book of Jasher, in recording the event, speaks with equal philosophical correctness. In the first case he says, the sun was dumb, withheld his influences, but the moon stood still. It must be seen from the address to the sun, that it was near the setting when the words which seem a command to the sun, but are a prayer to God, were uttered. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Inveterate is the enmity of Satan and error against Jesus Christ, and even against those who are in a hopeful way of becoming

THE VALLEY OF AJALON—WHERE JOSHUA COMMANDED THE SUN AND MOON TO STAND STILL. [Joshua, x:12.]—"Then spake Joshua to the Lord in the day when the Lord delivered up the Amorites before the children of Israel, and he said in the sight of Israel, Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon." The meaning of this name is "place of gazelles." It is a broad and beautiful valley near the city of Ajalon. It is about 14 miles from Jerusalem. Ajalon was a Levitical city of Dan. It was also one of the cities of refuge, and the city doubtless stood in this noted valley. The modern name of Ajalon is Galo, which is situated on a long hill on the south side of the valley whose name it bears. On the ridge above this valley the Mediterranean and the plain of Sharon are in full view. Going up above it we find dwarf oaks, arbutus and other shrubs, with plantations of olive and carob trees. Flocks of goats may be seen browsing in the valley.

29 ¶ Then Joshua passed from Makkedah, and all Israel with him, unto <sup>5</sup>Libnah,<sup>5</sup> and fought against Libnah:

30 And the LORD delivered it also, and the king thereof, into the hand of Israel; and he smote it with the edge of the sword, and all the souls that were therein: he let none remain in it; but did unto the king thereof as he did unto the king of Jericho.

converts to him; and, like their great leader, the wicked likewise are unanimous and hearty in their wickedness, and in persecuting the people of God. But when spiritual or temporal enemies thrust sore at us, then we feel the necessity of looking up to Jesus, the Captain of the Lord's host, for salvation. If we have given up ourselves to him, we may be cast down, but cannot be destroyed: Jesus and his angels will flee to our relief: his power, his prayers, shall concur for our protection and deliverance! But how terrible is the danger of his enemies! Both heaven and earth conspire to effectuate their ruin! Every assistant, every retreat, shall prove but a refuge of lies; the meanest saint shall see them fail! And when the sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, Jesus shall come to sit in righteous judgment upon all them who know not God and obey not the gospel;—who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power! Oh! unparalleled day! then all the haters of the Lord shall go into everlasting despair; and the righteous, after finishing their fight of faith, and enriched with peace, shall, with Jesus at their head, return, and enter into life eternal in the camp of God above!

CASTLE AT CAESAREA PHILIPPI—NEAR HAZOR, KING JABIN'S CAPITAL. [JOSHUA, xi: 1-20.]—Only a little distance from this castle, Thomson learned of a very old ruin, which is thought to be the relic of the ancient capital of Jabin, king of Hazor, which was the chief city before the time of Joshua, of all the northern basin of the Jordan. In the eleventh chapter of Joshua we have an account of the battle of Israel with this king. We learn also from this chapter that 1,451 B. C., this Jabin, king of Hazor, had chariots and horses in his army. The great Subebah castle is a mile in circumference. It is about three miles from Caesarea Philippi and fifteen hundred feet above it. From the top of its towers there is an extensive and charming prospect. The castle is guarded on all sides by inaccessible gorges and only on the northeast is the hill upon which it stands connected with the main body of the earth.

8 And the LORD delivered them into the hand of Israel, who smote them, and chased them 'unto great Zidon,<sup>3</sup> and unto 'Mizrephoth-maim,<sup>5</sup> and unto the valley of Mizpeh eastward; and they smote them, until they left them none remaining.

9 And Joshua did unto them as the LORD bade him: he 'thoughted their horses, and burnt their chariots with fire.

10 ¶ And Joshua at that time turned back, and took 'Hazor,<sup>6</sup> and smote the king thereof with the sword: for Hazor beforetime was the head of all those kingdoms.

11 And they smote all the souls that were therein with the edge of the sword, utterly destroying them; there was not 'any left to breathe: and he burnt Hazor with fire.

12 And* all the cities of those kings, and all the kings of them, did Joshua take, and smote them with the edge of the sword; and he utterly destroyed them, 'as Moses, the servant of the LORD, commanded.

13 But as for the cities that stood still<sup>7</sup> in their strength, Israel burned none of them, save Hazor<sup>8</sup> only; that did Joshua burn.<sup>8</sup>

14 And all 'the spoil of these cities, and the cattle, the children of Israel took for a prey unto themselves; but every man they smote with the edge of the sword, until they had destroyed them, neither left they any to breathe.<sup>9</sup>

15 As<sup>9</sup> the LORD commanded Moses his servant, so did Moses command Joshua, and so did Joshua: 'he left nothing undone of all that the LORD commanded Moses.

16 So<sup>1</sup> Joshua took 'all that land, the hills, and all the south country, and all the land of 'Goshen,<sup>2</sup> and the valley, and the plain, and the 'mountain of Israel, and the valley of the same;<sup>3</sup>

17 Even from the mount Halak,<sup>4</sup> that goeth up to Seir, even unto 'Baal-gad in the valley of Lebanon, under mount Hermon; and all their kings he took, and smote them, and slew them.

18 Joshua made war 'a long time with all those kings.<sup>5</sup>

19 There was not a city that made peace with the children of Israel save 'the Hivites, the inhabitants of Gibeon; all other they took in battle:

20 For it was of the LORD 'to harden their hearts,<sup>6</sup> that they should come against Israel in battle, that he might destroy them utterly, and that they might have no favour,<sup>7</sup> but that he might destroy them, 'as the LORD commanded Moses.

21 ¶ And at that time came Joshua, and cut 'off the Anakims from the mountains; from Hebron, from Debir, from Anab, and from all the mountains of Judah, and from all the mountains of Israel: 'Joshua destroyed them utterly with their cities.

22 There was none of the Anakims left in the land of the children of Israel; only 'in Gaza, in Gath, and in Ashdod, there remained.

23 ¶ So Joshua took the whole land, 'according to all that the LORD said unto Moses; and Joshua gave it for an inheritance unto Israel, 'according to their divisions by their tribes. And the land 'rested from war.

Ver. 5. [Merom is identical with Samochonitis of Josephus, and the modern Bahret el-Hühle. It is a lake, triangular in form, 4½ miles long by 3½ broad. It occupies the southern end of a large plain or basin lying between the ridges of Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon. It is fed by numerous streams and fountains, the largest being the Jordan, which flows into it at the north-eastern angle, and leaves it again at its apex on the south, 10 miles above the Sea of Galilee. P.]

Ver. 13. [Cities that stood still in their strength. 'The cities that stood on the hills' is a more accurate translation. The meaning seems to be this:—Joshua burned the cities on the plains, where the northern Canaanites' cavalry, like the East Indian Mahrattas, could maintain strongholds, for they could make sudden incursions. But the cities on the hills, as inaccessible to cavalry, he preserved, with the exception of Hazor, as garrison towns for his own infantry, and the protection of the people. C.]

Ver. 18. [Mount Halak is used by Joshua to denote the southern border of Palestine, as Beersheba is used by later writers. It was probably the line of bare white cliffs or hills which runs across the Arabah some 20 miles south of the Dead Sea. Baal-gad must have been at or very near the site of Paneas, subsequently called Caesarea-Philippi. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—How madly do sinners rush headlong into ruin, notwithstanding repeated warnings by the destruction of others! The strength and multitude of their confederacy do but make their ruin the more notorious. But the greater the dangers which surround his people, the greater supports should they ask and expect from God: and the more entirely their heart is fixed on him as their strength, the more certainly shall their spiritual enemies be subdued before them. That to which sinners flee for help is often but a trap to ensnare them: and their destruction is certain, though sometimes slow; and always just and wise, however severe: the most powerful not excepted. But sure is the victory of his people over all their enemies; and happy is it when God's exact fulfilment of his promises, and our upright performance of our duty, unite together. And blessed indeed must that warfare be which issues in eternal triumph and rest to Christ and his people! —

CHAPTER XII. [Ver. 1. River Arnon. The Arnon rises in the mountains of Gilead, on the east of Jordan, and flows along the north border of Moab, separating it from the Ammonites, and empties itself into the Dead Sea. Burckhardt gives its modern name Modjeb, and assigns it a course of about 56 miles. In summer it is nearly dry, but in winter is an impetuous torrent. C.—The land from the Arnon to Hermon embraces the great plateau and mountain chains east of the Jordan. All the plain on the east' is in Hebrew 'all the Arabah;' i.e. the deep valley of the Jordan, east of the river. P.]

Ver. 2. [Jabbok. In summer a brook, in winter a torrent, arising in the mountains of Gilead, near Rabbath Ammon, and running in a westerly direction, joins the Jordan about 35 miles south of the Sea of Chinneroth. C.]

Ver. 3. [Salt Sea. Dead Sea, the site of Sodom and Gomorrah, more salt than any other sea. This special geographical description was given in order to prevent any disputes about the boundaries of the two and a half settled tribes. See ver. 6. C.—The first part of ver. 3 should be rendered as follows:—'And the Arabah to the Sea of Chinneroth eastward, and to the Sea of the Arabah—the salt sea, eastward.' The meaning is, that while Sihon's kingdom extended on the highlands only as far north as the Jabbok, it embraced the whole eastern section of the valley of the Jordan from the Sea of Galilee to the Dead Sea. P.]

Ver. 8. ['In the hill-country, and in the Shephelah, and in the Arabah, and in Ashdod, and in the Midbar (i.e. the pastoral plateau east of Jordan), and in the Negeb.' These are proper names, and mark the various sections of the country. See note on ch. 9. 1. P.]

Ver. 21. [Taanaach and Megiddo stood on the southern border of the plain of Esdraelon. They became famous in after-times in connection with the victory of Barak, and other battles. P.]

2 Sihon<sup>a</sup> king of the Amorites, who dwelt in Heshbon, and ruled from Aroer, which is upon the bank of the river Arnon, and from the middle of the river,<sup>2</sup> and from half Gilead,<sup>3</sup> even unto the river <sup>a</sup>Jabbok, which is the border of the children of Ammon:

5 And reigned in mount Hermon, and in Salcah,<sup>8</sup> and in all Bashan, unto the border of the Geshurites, and the Maachathites, and half Gilead, the border of Sihon king of Heshbon;<sup>9</sup>

6 Them did Moses, the servant of the LORD, and the children of Israel, smite: and Moses, the servant of the LORD, gave it for a possession unto the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manasseh.

7 And these are the kings of the country which Joshua and the children of Israel smote on<sup>10</sup> this side Jordan on the west, <sup>a</sup>from Baalgad in the valley of Lebanon, even unto the mount Halak, that goeth up to Seir; which Joshua gave unto the tribes of Israel for a possession, according to their divisions:

8 In the mountains, and in the valleys, and in the plains, and in the springs, and in the wilderness, and in the south country; the Hittites, the Amorites, and the Canaanites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites:

16 Modern readers of the Bible are often surprised at the number of kings reigning in so narrow a compass. A little reflection would remove this surprise, for were the early history of the European tribes as well preserved, there is little doubt that as many petty sovereignties would frequently be found in the same extent. Within the range of authentic history, a part of England furnished seven kingdoms.—C.

REFLECTIONS.—Former mercies from God, or services from men, must never be forgotten for the glare of present ones. How happy the saints who have possession of manifold blessings on this side the Jordan of death, even while their principal inheritance lies beyond it! How fruitful then was the promised land, which could support such multitudes of men! How fearful the guilt, and tremendous the curse, which for many ages have rendered it one of the most barren and useless spots on the earth! How confined was the ancient ambition of kings! and how good was God to Israel, who gave so many nations for their ransom, and people for their life!

CHAPTER XIII. [Ver. 3. Philistines. Descended from Mizraim, second son of Ham, Ge. 10: 14, by whom Egypt was peopled. They must have emigrated from that country at an early period. Though occupying a narrow tract of land bordering on the Mediterranean, and not above 60 miles in length, yet, through industry and arms, they soon became, and long continued, a famous people. They were the most powerful and the most inveterate of the enemies of Israel, whom they occasionally greatly oppressed. After the return from the captivity, the national animosities were revived; and they seem to have been finally conquered by the famous Maccabees. After this period, they either emigrated from the country, or became incorporated with the Jews, as they are never once mentioned in the New Testament, nor by any writer of ordinary history. C.]

Ver. 5. [Lebanon. Lebanon forms the basis of all the mountains of Palestine. Two parallel ranges of mountains descend from the north in Syria, inclosing a valley called Coele-Syria, or Hollow Syria. These form the Lebanon of the Bible, and the Libanus and Anti-Libanus of the Greeks. The Libanus, from its origin in Syria, inclines to the west, and terminates a few miles north of old Tyre. The Anti-Libanus, which is the eastern range, likewise inclines to the sea, and terminates in the noble cone of Hermon. Lebanon signifies whiteness; a name most probably derived from the snows which constantly lie upon the highest summit of the range. This would, in the climate of Palestine, give a probable height of 11,000 feet. C.—Lebanon toward the sun-rising is manifestly Anti-Lebanon; and the whole chain is here accurately described from Baal-gad (Banias) under Hermon on the south, to the entrance of Hamath—here signifying the opening from the valley of Coele-Syria to the plain of Hamath—on the north. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—The most successful conquerors must quickly bow and pay their tribute to death, the king of terrors; and the best have need to be reminded of their latter end. God graciously and wisely considers the frame of his people, and will not burden them with work beyond their strength. But pleasant are extensive views of what God has promised, though we should never see it accomplished. And it is prudent and necessary that such as rule in church or state should exert themselves to the utmost for leaving all things in good order at their death. With what pleasure God repeatedly mentions the honourable deeds of his people, as an example and inducement to others

RACE OF FREIGHT BOATS, JAFFA - THE SEAPORT TOWN OF JERUSALEM IN TIME OF SOLOMON, AND FROM HIS DAY TO THE PRESENT. [JOSHUA, xiii: 2.]—"This is the land that it remaineth: all the borders of the Philistines, and all Geshuri." We give this illustration here because Jaffa was a city of Philistia. Palestine is said to have originally meant the district inhabited by the Philistines. Philistia embraced the coast plain on the southwest of Palestine, extending from Jaffa on the north to the valley of Gera on the south, and from the Mediterranean on the west to the foot of the Judean hills on the east. The picture we give above is of a scene which will be very familiar to all tourists who have ever landed at Jaffa. As soon as ever the great steamers anchor out in the sea the little boats from the shore begin a race to see which can reach the steamer first. Happy is the traveler if his arrangements for landing have been made previously.

Sidonians, unto Aphek, to the borders of the Amorites;

5 And the land of the 'Giblites,<sup>6</sup> and all Lebanon,<sup>7</sup> toward the sun-rising, from Baal-gad under 'mount Hermon,<sup>7</sup> unto the "entering into Hamath;

7 Now therefore divide "this land for an inheritance unto the nine tribes, and the half-tribe of Manasseh;

8 With whom the Reubenites and the Gadites have received their inheritance, "which Moses gave them, beyond Jordan eastward, even as Moses, the servant of the LORD, gave them;

11 And Gilead, and the border of the 'Geshurites<sup>9</sup> and Maachathites, and 'all mount Hermon, and all Bashan unto Salcah;

12 All the kingdom of Og in Bashan, which reigned in Ashtaroth, and in Edrei, who remained of the remnant "of the giants: for these did Moses smite, and cast them out 13 Nevertheless the children of Israel "expelled not the Geshurites, nor the Maachathites; but the Geshurites and the Maachathites dwell among the Israelites until this day.

14 Only "unto the tribe of Levi he gave none inheritance;<sup>1</sup> the sacrifices of the LORD God of Israel made by fire are their inheritance, as he said unto them.

15 ¶ And Moses gave<sup>2</sup> unto the tribe of the children of Reuben inheritance according to their families.<sup>3</sup>

16 And "their coast was from Aroer, that is on the bank of the river Arnon, and the city that is in the midst of the river, and all the plain by Medeba;

17 Heshbon, and all her cities that are in the plain; Dibon,<sup>4</sup> and "Bamoth-baal, and Beth-baal-meon, 25 As Moses was himself of the tribe of Levi, he gave a special proof that he acted by divine authority, in thus overlooking his own family and his own tribe, for, though

Levites were well provided for, yet the security of that provision was so interwoven with Israel's adherence to the worship of God, that,

Canaan, "which Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel, distributed for inheritance to them.

2 By<sup>b</sup> lot was their inheritance, as the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses, for the nine tribes, and for the half-tribe.

3 For <sup>c</sup>Moses had given the inheritance of two tribes and a half-tribe on the other side Jordan;<sup>d</sup> but unto the Levites he gave none inheritance among them.<sup>1</sup>

4 For <sup>e</sup>the children of Joseph were two tribes, Manasseh and Ephraim: therefore they gave no part unto the Levites in the land, <sup>f</sup>save cities to dwell in, with their suburbs for their cattle and for their substance.

5 As<sup>g</sup> the LORD commanded Moses, so the children of Israel did, and they divided the land.

6 ¶ Then the children of Judah came unto Joshua in <sup>h</sup>Gilgal: and <sup>i</sup>Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenezite said unto him, Thou knowest the thing that the LORD said unto Moses <sup>k</sup>the man of God concerning me and thee in Kadesh-barnea.

7 Forty years old was I when Moses, the servant of the LORD, <sup>l</sup>sent me from Kadesh-barnea to espy out the land; and I brought him word again as it was in mine heart.

8 Nevertheless<sup>m</sup> my brethren that went up with me made the heart of the people melt; but<sup>n</sup> I wholly followed the LORD my God.<sup>2</sup>

9 And Moses swore on that day, saying, Surely<sup>o</sup> the land whereon thy feet have trodden shall be thine inheritance, and thy children's for ever, because thou hast wholly followed the LORD my God.

10 And now, behold, the LORD hath kept me alive, as he said, these <sup>p</sup>forty and five years, even since the LORD spake this word unto Moses, while the children of Israel wandered<sup>3</sup> in the wilderness; and now, lo, I am this day fourscore and five years old.<sup>4</sup>

11 As<sup>q</sup> yet I am as strong this day as I was in the day that Moses sent me: as my strength was then, even so is my strength now, for war, both to go out, and to come in.

THIS then was the <sup>a</sup>lot of the tribe of the children of Judah by their families; <sup>b</sup>even to the border of Edom the wilderness of Zin, southward, was the uttermost part of the south coast.

2 And their south border was from the shore of <sup>c</sup>the salt sea, from the bay<sup>1</sup> that looketh southward:

3 And it went out to the south side to <sup>d</sup>Maaleh-acrabbim, and passed along to Zin, and ascended up on the south side unto <sup>e</sup>Kadesh-barnea, and passed along to Hezron, and went up to Adar, and fetched a compass to Karkaa:

with a jealous people of avoiding all cause of jealousy from suspicion of favouritism. C.]

Ver. 6. [Caleb. The object of Caleb is to claim a right previous to the conquest, founded on God's promise, ver. 6, and Moses' oath, ver. 9, and so an exemption from the lot.—Note, Though the lot was a divine institution, it was not to be employed where the will of God is already declared. The sin of Balaam lay in knowing the declared will of God, and seeking by sacrifice to change it. God's will once declared, we must seek no other confirmation—God's will once known, we must allow neither delay nor evasion. C.]

Ver. 12. [This was a noble proposition upon the part of old Caleb. He had affirmed, on his return from spying out the land, that though the cities were strong, and the Anakim powerful and warlike, yet, by the help of the Lord, the Israelites could drive them out. Now he offers himself to put the truth of that affirmation to the test. Old as he was, he would lead the attack on the Anakim and drive them out. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Such as refer themselves to God to choose for them will never find cause to repent of their lot. Yea, it is not only useful but necessary to acknowledge God in all our ways, that he may direct our paths, and prosper the work of our hands; and to view everything that we obtain lawfully as coming from him.—How edifying is it to observe aged professors strong in the faith, giving glory to God! It is not pride, but due acknowledgment, to declare what a gracious God has done for us and by us. The more singular our fidelity has been towards God, it is the more commendable. And if we have served God in godly simplicity in our youth, we shall find the comfort and blessing of it when we grow old. The issues of our life are in God's hand. Neither age, nor sickness, nor sword can cut those who are faithful to Christ. Every year, therefore, through which we are spared is a new call for thankfulness to him who preserves our soul in life; and the death of others around should make us the more sensible of the mercy which preserves us. But indeed wonders of mercy and judgment will God work for performing his promise, in the most honourable manner, to such as by faith remarkably glorify him in an hour of temptation. Such as trust in him will never find themselves disappointed of their hopes. And with the utmost boldness we may insist upon having what he has promised, and dare to engage the most powerful opposer in order to obtain it.

CHAPTER XV. [Ver. 1. The lot of the tribe of the children of Judah. This lot to Judah seems disproportionately large, but is a fulfilment of Jacob's prophecy. Two things in it are very remarkable. (1) Two parts of it were subsequently given to Simeon and o Achor, pain, trouble. Here Achan underwent the terrible punishment of covetousness and disobedience. Yet the valley of Achor is pronounced as 'a door of hope' to Israel, Ho. 2. 15, and so it is, when trouble has shown to experience the folly and sin of loving the world, the soul is just prepared for cherishing the hope of better things.

Ver. 11. [This is one of the most minute and accurate examples of topography in any ancient writing extant. Almost every foot of the boundary line can still be traced. Commencing at the mouth of the Jordan it ran north-west to the site of Jericho; then up the steep pass of Adummim, on the south bank of Wady el-Kelt ('the river,' or rather torrent-bed); then along the highway to Jerusalem past the fountain of Haud (Enshemesh); then over Olivet to En-rogel, along Wady Hinnom, and across the mountain tops to Kirjath-jearim; then down to Bethshemesh, and across the plain to Mount Baalath, which lies between Ekron and Jabniel; and then to the Mediterranean. P.]

Ver. 19. [He gave her the upper springs and the nether springs. This peculiar record seems introduced, (1) To demonstrate the difference between the power that Caleb exercised over his possession, derived from his peculiar right, and how far it surpassed that of other Israelites. They, when there were sons in a family—as there were in Caleb's—had no right to alienate land to a daughter's husband, Nu. 27. 1–11. (2) The narrative seems intended to establish the right of rewarding extraordinary bravery in an extraordinary manner. (3) To instance the duty of parents to provide, according to their best ability, for the children God has given them. C.]

Ver. 21. [Uttermost cities. This list of cities and villages may appear to many very uninteresting, and perhaps useless. It is, however, highly interesting and useful: (1) As an internal evidence of the truth of the narrative; since nothing but truth could have drawn up such a narrative, and then given it interest to be preserved and read. (2) As a legal document to prevent litigation, by definition of property. C.]

Ver. 25. ['Hazor-hadattah, and Kerioth-hezron—it is Hazor.' There are but two cities in this verse. It seems probable also that 'Amam' in ver. 26 ought to be joined to Hazor, making one name. P.]

BEDOUIN CAMP, JEZREEL—WHERE GIDEON TRIUMPHED AND SAUL AND JONATHAN WERE OVERTHROWN. [Joshua, xvii:16.]—This is the great plain of Esdraelon. It extends across Central Palestine from the Mediterranean to the Jordan. It separates the mountain ranges of Carmel and Samaria from those of Galilee. The main body of the plain is a triangle. On the east it extends from Jenin to the foot of the hills below Nazareth. It is about 15 miles long; and the north side, formed by the hills of Galilee, are about 12 miles long. From any point of observation in this valley one may see the mountains Gilboa and Little Hermon. It is perhaps the richest valley in the world, and has also been called the great battlefield of the world. It is here that Gideon triumphed, and Saul and Jonathan were overthrown. It is the home of the wild Bedouin, and not more than one-sixth of its soil is cultivated.

Judah<sup>a</sup> shall abide in their coast on the south, and the house of Joseph shall abide in their coasts on the north.

6 Ye<sup>c</sup> shall therefore describe the land into seven parts, and bring the description hither to me, that I may cast lots for you here before the LORD our God.

7 But the <sup>a</sup>Levites have no part among you; for the priesthood of the LORD is their inheritance;<sup>2</sup> and <sup>b</sup>Gad, and Reuben, and half the tribe of Manasseh, have received their inheritance beyond Jordan on the east, which Moses, the servant of the LORD, gave them.

8 ¶ And the men arose, and went away: and Joshua charged them that went to describe the land, saying, Go and walk through the land, and describe it,<sup>3</sup> and come again to me, that I may he<sup>a</sup> cast lots for you before the LORD in Shiloh.

9 And the men went and passed through the land, and described it by cities into seven parts in a book, and came again to Joshua to the host at Shiloh.

10 ¶ And Joshua <sup>a</sup>cast lots for them in Shiloh before the LORD: and there Joshua divided the land unto the children of Israel, according to their divisions.

11 ¶ And the lot of the tribe of the children of Benjamin came up<sup>a</sup> according to their families: and the coast of their lot came forth <sup>b</sup>between the children of Judah and the children of Joseph.

12 And their border on the north side was from Jordan; and the border went up to the side of <sup>a</sup>Jericho on the north side, and went up through the mountains westward; and the goings out thereof were at the <sup>a</sup>wilderness of Beth-aven.<sup>c</sup>

13 And the border went over from thence toward <sup>a</sup>Luz, to the side of Luz, (which is Beth-el,<sup>2</sup>) southward; and the border descended to <sup>a</sup>Ataroth-adar, near the hill that lieth on the south side of the nether Beth-horon.

14 And the border was drawn thence, and compassed the corner of <sup>a</sup>the sea southward,<sup>5</sup> from the hill that lieth before Beth-horon southward;<sup>6</sup> and the goings out thereof were at <sup>a</sup>Kirjath-baal, (which is Kirjath-jearim,) a city of the children of Judah. This was the west quarter.

15 And the south quarter was from the end of Kirjath-jearim, and the border went out on the west, and went out to the well of waters of Nephtoah;<sup>a</sup>

16 And the border came down to the end

2 The frequency with which the disinheritance of the Levites is repeated, see Nu. 18. 21, 24. Jos. 13. 14. 14. 3, 4, &c., cannot be fully explained by any principle but their typical character. And truth it is, that of nothing does a believer require to be so often reminded, as that here he is a 'pilgrim,' has no certain dwelling place, but that the 'testimonies of the Lord are his inheritance.'—C.

4 The lot came up: with the exact mode of the lot we are unacquainted, the expression 'came up,' compared with Pr. 16. 33, and with the declaration of Joshua, that he would cast the lots before the Lord, suggests the idea that the names of the tribes were written and cast into the loose robe of the high-priest, and thence drawn up in succession.—C.

5 Neither the Dead Sea nor Mediterranean, but a lake or pool at Gibeon, 2 Sa. 2. 13, and which though narrow at the part where Abner and Joab met, must have been of considerable extent, being called 'the great waters' by Jeremiah, 41. 12. Some learned authors, however, instead of 'sea,' render it 'from the west'; but they seem to have been driven to this translation, from the difficulty of any reference to the sea in an inland province. But such lakes as that of Gibeon are called seas, both in the Old and New Testaments.—C.

The Hebrew word translated in the English version 'sea,' is very frequently used to signify 'west,' because with the Mediterranean was the western boundary of all Palestine. CHAPTER XIX. Ver. 1-48. From this, and the seven preceding chapters, it appears that the land of Canaan, into the possession of which Moses and Joshua put the Israelites, was pleasantly diversified with mountains and valleys, and well watered with a multitude of small rivers and brooks, which emptied themselves into the Mediterranean Sea on the west; or into Jordan, which, taking its rise in Mount Lebanon, at the north of the promised land, ran southward; and, after forming the two lakes of Merom and Chinnereth or Tiberias in its course, at last emptied itself into the Dead Sea, into which the country about Sodom was transformed, and which had no visible outlet. The length of Canaan, from Beersheba on the south to Dan on the north, was about one hundred and eighty miles.

7 Ain,<sup>a</sup> Remmon, and Ether, and Ashan: four cities and their villages.

8 And all the villages that were round about these cities to 'Baalath-beer, Ramath of the south. This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Simeon, according to their families.

9 Out of the portion of the children of Judah was the inheritance of the children of Simeon: for the part of the children of Judah was too much for them; therefore the children of Simeon had their inheritance within the inheritance of them.<sup>3</sup>

10 ¶ And the third lot came up for the children of Zebulun, according to their families; and the border of their inheritance was unto Sarid.

11 And their border went up toward *m*the sea,<sup>4</sup> and Maralah, and reached to Dabbasheth, and reached to the river that is before 'Jokneam;

12 And turned from Sarid eastward toward the sun-rising, unto the border of Chisloth-tabor, and then goeth out to 'Daberath, and goeth up to Japhia,

13 And from thence passeth on along on the east to Gittah-hepher, to Ittah-kazin, and goeth<sup>5</sup> out to Remmon-methoar, to Neah;

14 And the border compasseth it on the north side to Hannathon: and the outgoings thereof are in the valley of Jiphtah-el:

15 And 'Kattath, and Nahallal, and 'Shimron, and Idalah, and 'Beth-lehem:<sup>6</sup> twelve cities with their villages.

16 This<sup>7</sup> is the inheritance of the children of Zebulun, according to their families, these cities with their villages.

17 ¶ And<sup>8</sup> the fourth lot came out to Issachar, for the children of Issachar, according to their families.

18 And their border was toward 'Jezreel, and Chesulloth, and 'Shunem,<sup>9</sup>

21 And 'Remeth, and En-gannim, and En-haddah, and Beth-pazzez;

22 And the coast reacheth to 'Tabor, and Shahazimah, and 'Beth-shemesh; and the outgoings of their border were at Jordan: sixteen cities with their villages.

23 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Issachar, according to their families, the cities and their villages.<sup>8</sup>

24 ¶ And<sup>9</sup> the fifth lot came out for the tribe of the children of Asher, according to their families.

25 And their border was 'Helkath, and Hali, and Beten, and 'Achshaph, 26 And Alammelech, and Amad, and 'Mishael; and reacheth to 'Carmel<sup>10</sup> westward, and to Shihor-libnath;

27 And turneth toward the sun-rising to 'Beth-dagon, and reacheth to Zebulun, and to the 'valley of Jiphtah-el, toward the north side of Beth-emek, and Neiel, and goeth out to 'Cabul on the left hand;<sup>1</sup>

28 And 'Hebron, and Rehob, and Hammon, and *m*Kanah, even unto *m*great Zidon;

29 And then the coast turneth to 'Ramah, and to the strong city 'Tyre;<sup>2</sup> and the coast turneth to Hosah; and the outgoings thereof are at the sea, from the coast to 'Achzib;

30 Ummah also, and 'Aphek, and 'Rehob: twenty and two cities with their villages.

31 This<sup>3</sup> is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Asher, according to their families, these cities with their villages.

32 ¶ The<sup>4</sup> sixth lot came out to the children of Naphtali, even for the children of Naphtali, according to their families.

33 And their coast was from Heleph, from Allon to 'Zaanannim, and 'Adami, Nekeb, and 'Jabneel, unto Lakum; and the outgoings thereof were at Jordan:

34 And then the coast turneth westward to Aznoth-tabor, and goeth out from thence to Hukkok, and reacheth to Zebulun on the south

Its greatest breadth, from the Mediterranean Sea to the river Jordan, was about fifty miles; and about thirty more to the eastern boundary of the Reubenites, Gadites, and Manassites. On the east of Jordan, over against the territory of Benjamin and Ephraim, the Reubenites had their inheritance in a tract, including the mountains of Peor, Nebo, and Pisgah. On their north side lay the inheritance of the Gadites, in a soil more plain and fertile. Northward of Gad was seated the half-tribe of Manasseh, in that which was afterwards called Upper Galilee, or Galilee of the Gentiles, which was almost as large as both the two former portions. On the west side of Jordan, or rather the Dead Sea, lay the extensive inheritance of Judah. On the south-west hereof was the lot of Simeon; and on the north-west the lot of Dan. Eastward of the Danites, and northward of Judah, was the inheritance of Benjamin. The lot of the Ephraimites lay all along on the north of these of Dan and Benjamin. Next was the lot of the other half-tribe of Manasseh; and northward of them the inheritance of Issachar; and next to them was that of Zebulun. Each of these four last portions extended from Jordan on the east to the Mediterranean Sea on the west. Northward of Zebulun the tribe of Asher had their inheritance in the north-west of Canaan. The Naphtalites had their portion between the lot of Asher and the north end of the river Jordan. The Tyrians and Zidonians kept possession of a part of Canaan on the north-west of the Asherites. The Philistines kept possession of a narrow strip of territory on the west of the Simeonites and Danites. Egypt lay to the south-west of Canaan; Idumea on the south border of the lot of Judah; and still more southward was the country of the Amalekites and Arabians. On the east of the Dead Sea, and southward of the Reubenites, was the territory of the Midianites and Moabites. North-east of the Moabites, and eastward of the Reubenites, Gadites, and Manassites, dwelt the Ammonites and Hagarenes; and still eastward of these, beyond a large desert, and by the river Euphrates, the Chaldeans on the south, and Mesopotamia on the north. Persia was on the east and south-east of Chaldaea, and Assyria on the east of Mesopotamia. North-east of Persia lay Media; and north of Assyria were Armenia, Cappadocia, Pontus, &c. On the north-east of Canaan lay Syria; on the north of which was Lesser Asia, which contained Mysia, Lydia, Ionia, and Caria, on the east shore of the Mediterranean Sea; on the east of which were Bithynia, Phrygia, Pisidia, Pamphylia, Lycia; and, still further east, Paphlagonia, Galatia, and Lycaonia, which bordered on the east with Pontus, Cappadocia, and Armenia. To the north-west of Lesser Asia, but on the north side of the Mediterranean Sea, lay the countries of Greece and Rome; the former of which is about 850, and the latter 1200 miles north-west of Jerusalem.—A careful attention to this note will be of use to assist the reader in understanding the parts of Scripture history.

Ver. 16. [The territory of Zebulun stretched across the country from the Sea of Galilee on the east to the maritime plain of Phenicia on the west, embracing a large strip of Esdraelon, a portion of the plain of Akka, the whole of the rich upland plain of Battauf, with the fertile table-land between it and the basin of the Sea of Galilee. The beautiful wooded hills extending from Tabor by Nazareth westward were also in Zebulun. It touched Carmel on the south-west; and though it did not actually reach to the shore of the Mediterranean, its side joined the narrow maritime plain of Phenicia,

TIBERIAS—THE ANCIENT RAKKATH, ONCE THE CAPITAL OF THE PROVINCE OF GALILEE. [JOSHUA, xix : 35.]—"And the fenced cities are Ziddim, Zer, and Hammath, Rakkath, and Chinnereth." According to the Talmud, the city of Rakkath once stood upon the site now occupied by Tiberias. In the fourth century the Jews dropped the name of Tiberias and called the city by its ancient name of Rakkath. Herod Antipas built the Roman city and called it after the name of the emperor, Tiberias. It became the capital of the province of Galilee in which our Savior grew up, and was fortified by Josephus during the wars of the Jews. After the fall of Jerusalem, Tiberias was selected by the Sanhedrin as their headquarters. After that it became a principal seat of Jewish learning. Many of the most eminent Jewish rabbis connected with the history of the race lived and died here.

side, and reacheth to Asher on the west side, and to Judah<sup>4</sup> upon Jordan toward the sun-rising.

35 And the fenced cities are Ziddim, Zer, and Hammath, Rakkath, and Chinnereth, 36 And Adamah, and Ramah, and Hazor,

37 And Kedesh, and Edrei, and En-hazor,

38 And Iron, and Migdal-el, Horem, and Beth-anath, and Beth-shemesh: nineteen cities with their villages.

39 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Naphtali, according to their families, the cities and their villages.

40 ¶ And<sup>h</sup> the seventh lot came out for the tribe of the children of Dan, according to their families.

41 And the coast of their inheritance was Zorah, and Eshtaol, and Ir-shemesh, 42 And Shaalabbin, and Ajalon, and Jethlah,

43 And Elon, and Thimnathah, and Ekron,

44 And Eltekeh, and Gibbethon, and Baalath,

45 And Jehud, and Bene-berak, and Gath-rimmon,

47 And the coast of the children of Dan went out too little for them; therefore the children of Dan went up to fight against Leshem, and took it, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and possessed it,<sup>6</sup> and dwelt therein, and called Leshem, 'Dan, after the name of Dan their father.

48 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Dan, according to their families, these cities with their villages.<sup>7</sup>

4 A city, not a tribe. (The Sept. omits the name of Judah, most probably from supposing that as Asher, in the text, was a tribe, that Judah must likewise be a tribe. But that tribe having no possessions on the Jordan, the translators omitted Judah, supposing it to be the error of a transcriber. There is, however, no need of such unwarranted violence to the text. Judah upon the Jordan may well have been the name of a city or territory.—C.)

children of Israel gave an inheritance to Joshua the son of Nun among them.<sup>8</sup>

50 According to the word of the LORD, they gave him the city which he asked, even Timnath-serah in mount Ephraim: and he built the city, and dwelt therein.

51 These are the inheritances which Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel, divided for an inheritance by lot in Shiloh before the LORD, at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. So they made an end of dividing the country.

CHAPTER XX.

1 God commandeth, 7 and the children of Israel appoint the six cities of refuge.

THE LORD<sup>a</sup> also spake unto Joshua, saying,

2 Speak to the children of Israel, saying, Appoint out for you cities of refuge, whereof I spake unto you by the hand of Moses;

3 That the slayer that killeth any person unawares, and unwittingly,<sup>1</sup> may flee thither: and they shall be your refuge from the avenger of blood.

4 And when he that doth flee unto one of those cities shall stand at the entering of the gate of the city, and shall declare his cause in the ears of the elders of that city, they shall take him into the city unto them, and give him a place, that he may dwell among them.

5 And if the avenger of blood pursue after him, then they shall not deliver the slayer up into his hand; because he smote his neighbour unwittingly, and hated him not before-time.

6 And he shall dwell in that city, until he stand before the congregation for judgment, and until the death of the high priest that shall be in those days: then shall the slayer return, and come unto his own city, and unto his own house, unto the city from whence he fled.

to which Jacob gave the name of its chief city Zidon—'And his side will be to Zidon.' Its opposite extremity resting on the Sea of Galilee, the words of the patriarch were fulfilled—'Zebulun shall dwell on the coast of seas.' P.]

Ver. 21. [En-gannim, 'the fountain of the gardens,' lay at the northern base of the mountains of Ephraim, at the opening of a picturesque valley into the great plain of Esdraelon. It is still a large village, and is called Jenin. P.]

Ver. 22. [Tabor. This city was situated on a famous mountain of the same name. It is a solitary cone with the top struck off, about a mile in height and half a league in diameter. It is richly covered with trees and odoriferous plants, and is ascended by a winding path cut in its sides. The top is covered with ruins of fortresses and palaces, and vast subterranean cisterns for holding water. It is generally supposed to be the 'high mountain' upon which our Lord was transfigured; but there is no certainty, and the probabilities are rather in favour of some other mountain, of which the country affords many. C.]

Ver. 30. [Twenty and two cities with their villages. The names are twenty-six. But Carmel was a mountain, and Jiphthah-el a valley; and it is probable, according to the interpretation of Michaelis, that Tyre and Sidon were only the boundary landmarks, and not included as cities to be conquered. This opinion seems to be fully sustained by ver. 29, where, after passing

Sidon, Tyre, and Hosah, 'the outgoings' of the line are for the first time stated to be 'at the sea from the coast to Achzib.' The chief objection to this view lies in Ju. 1. 31, where the Sidonians are mentioned as a people the Asherites did not expel. But this is not conclusive against the number of cities ceded to Asher, ver. 30; and may be well explained by the very natural supposition, that the Sidonians had colonized within the territory of Asher, from which they should have been expelled. C.]

Ver. 39. [The boundaries of Naphtali on the east were the Jordan and the lakes Merom and Galilee; on the south, Zebulun; on the west, Asher; and on the north, the river Leontes. The tribe possessed a greater variety of soil, scenery, and climate than any of the others. Its northern portions are the highlands of Palestine. The scenery is here rich and beautiful, presenting a marked contrast to the naked rocky hills of Judah and the south. P.]

Ver. 48. [Inheritance of the tribe of the children of Dan. The territory allotted to Dan lay on the Mediterranean coast, south of Ephraim, including those strongholds of the Philistines Ashdod, Ekron, Gath, &c. Laish was situated in the extreme north of Canaan, near Mount Lebanon and the springs of the Jordan, and about 140 miles from the Danite settlement in the south. Alas! the moment Providence gave them a goodly land, they forgot the God of their fathers and established idolatry.—Note. While the advantages of emigration and colonization are many to an over-populated and commercial country, it is both the bounden duty and the highest interest of the mother-country to provide religious instruction to her colonies. Not a single Levite seems to have accompanied the emigrants. They accordingly fell from the Mosaic institutions, and commenced that idolatry which was perpetuated by Jeroboam, and extended from one tribe to ten, and finally brought on captivity and the other judgments of an offended God. Let Britain, the fruitful mother of so many colonies, take warning, and learn, that though colonization without religion may enrich a country, it may, and will, in the end ruin a country. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is useful and becoming when men look upon, and care for, the things of others, as well as their own, and give to such as lack a share of their superfluity, or even sufficiency. And it is a mercy to be connected with those who are in favour with God, and closely devoted to his service, though our outward accommodations should be smaller. For rare is that lot on earth in which there is not somewhat remarkable by an accurate observer of Providence. But it is honourable when rulers who do most for their people, covet least from them, and prefer the happy settlement of their subjects to their own.

CHAPTER XX. REFLECTIONS.—In these cities let me behold Jesus, God's holy One, made of God unto us sanctification; Jesus, on whose shoulder

7 ¶ And they <sup>2</sup>appointed <sup>1</sup>Kedesh in Galilee in mount Naphtali, and Shechem in mount Ephraim, and Kirjath-arba (which is Hebron) in the mountain of Judah.

8 And on the other side Jordan, by Jericho eastward, <sup>2</sup>they assigned Bezer in the wilderness upon the plain out of the tribe of Reuben, and Ramoth in Gilead out of the tribe of Gad, and Golan in Bashan out of the tribe of Manasseh.

9 These were the cities appointed for all the children of Israel, and for the stranger that sojourneth among them, that whosoever killeth any person at unawares might flee thither,<sup>3</sup> and not die by the hand of the avenger of blood, until he stood before the congregation.<sup>4</sup>

CHAPTER XXI.

<sup>1</sup> Eight and forty cities given by lot, out of the other tribes, unto the Levites. 43 God gave the land, and rest unto the Israelites, according to his promise.

THEN came near the heads<sup>1</sup> of the fathers of the Levites unto <sup>2</sup>Eleazar the priest, and unto Joshua the son of Nun, and unto the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel;

2 And they spake unto them at <sup>3</sup>Shiloh in the land of Canaan, saying, <sup>4</sup>The LORD commanded, by the hand of Moses, to give us cities to dwell in, with the suburbs thereof for our cattle.

3 And the children of Israel gave unto the Levites <sup>4</sup>out of their inheritance, at the commandment of the LORD, these cities and their suburbs.

4 And the <sup>1</sup>lot came out for the families of the Kohathites: and the children of Aaron the priest, which were of the Levites, had by lot out of the tribe of Judah, and out of the tribe of Simeon, and out of the tribe of Benjamin, thirteen cities.<sup>2</sup>

5 And <sup>1</sup>the rest of the children of Kohath had by lot out of the families of the tribe of Ephraim, and out of the tribe of Dan, and out of the half-tribe of Manasseh, ten cities.

6 And <sup>2</sup>the children of Gershon had by lot out of the families of the tribe of Issachar, and out of the tribe of Asher, and out of the tribe of Naphtali, and out of the half-tribe of Manasseh in Bashan, thirteen cities.

7 The<sup>3</sup> children of Merari, by their families, had out of the tribe of Reuben, and out of the tribe of Gad, and out of the tribe of Zebulun, twelve cities.

It is useless to describe their positions, as they cannot be comprehended without a map, and those who are furnished with that important companion to the study of the Bible do not need descriptions. It is, however, important to observe, that they were so dispersed throughout the land, that the manslayer in any part of the land might reach one of them in twelve hours or less.—C.

f These three tribes furnish a greater number of cities for the Levites than any equal number of the tribes; and that, both because their territory, especially that of Judah, was larger than that of the others, and because being near to Jerusalem, where God purposed finally to organize his church, his providence allotted to the servants of his sanctuary habitations near to the scene of their duties. Of these thirteen cities, Judah and Benjamin furnished twelve, and in them the whole sacerdotal family resided, even though at this time the tabernacle was in Shiloh, which was in the tribe of Ephraim. By this prospective arrangement, God provided for the future preservation of Judah and Benjamin from the apostasy of the other tribes, and for the consequent preservation of his word and ordinances.—C.

x Anathoth, being so emphatically mentioned by the prophet Isaiah, Is. 10. 30. Je. 11. 23; 29. 27; 32. 7, is entitled to some more special notice than those other cities of which we know little but the name. According to Eusebius it was situated about three miles north of Jerusalem, and twenty furlongs according to Josephus; a discrepancy easy to be accounted for by the difference of the points from which each calculated the measurement: one from the temple, another from the north city wall.—I.

y Note. Though great cities often attain an infamous celebrity for their luxury and wickedness, villages have no patent of exemption from a proportionate share of the same character. Anathoth stands a sad example of religious privileges abused, poverty endured, wickedness practised, and judgment inflicted.—C.

8 And the children of Israel <sup>1</sup>gave by lot unto the Levites these cities with their suburbs, as the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses.

9 ¶ And they gave out of the tribe of the children of Judah, and out of the tribe of the children of Simeon, <sup>2</sup>these cities which are here mentioned<sup>3</sup> by name, 10 Which the children of Aaron, being of the families of the Kohathites, who were of the children of Levi, had: for theirs was the first lot.

11 And they gave them <sup>4</sup>the city of Arba, the father of Anak, (which city is Hebron,) in the hill-country of Judah, with the suburbs thereof round about it.<sup>4</sup>

12 But <sup>5</sup>the fields of the city, and the villages thereof, gave they to Caleb the son of Jephunneh for his possession.

13 ¶ Thus they gave to the children of Aaron the priest <sup>6</sup>Hebron with her suburbs, to be a city of refuge for the slayer, and <sup>7</sup>Libnah with her suburbs,

14 And Jattir<sup>8</sup> with her suburbs, and Eshtemoa with her suburbs,

19 All the cities of the children of Aaron, the priests, were thirteen cities with their suburbs.

20 ¶ And the families of the children of Kohath, the Levites which remained of the children of Kohath, even they had the cities of their lot out of the tribe of Ephraim.

21 For they gave them <sup>16</sup>Shechem with her suburbs in mount Ephraim, to be a city of refuge for the slayer; and Gezer with her suburbs,

Let me behold him as a divinely appointed, a near, an accessible, ever-open, large, well furnished, and eternally safe refuge from the power and deep guilt of sin, the destructive and awful remorse of sin, the fury of a raging devil, and the ruinous challenges of a guilty conscience—a refuge to sinners of mankind, who have ignorantly, and in unbelief, spiritually murdered themselves, their neighbours, and even the great God their Saviour! And, oh, what profitable instruction and complete peace we have in him! Haste then, my soul; escape to him for thy life; tarry not in all the plain, lest the avenger of blood overtake thee. And never, never, while Jesus our great High-priest lives, dare to be found without.

CHAPTER XXI. [Ver. 41. Forty and eight cities with their suburbs. This would seem a large number of cities and a great extent of ground for so small a tribe, which, when the census was taken on the plains of Moab, had only 23,000 males, including;

27 ¶ And unto the children of Gershon, of the families of the Levites, out of the other half-tribe of Manasseh, they gave 'Golan in Bashan with her suburbs, to be a city of refuge for the slayer; and Beeshterah<sup>9</sup> with her suburbs: two cities.

28 And out of the tribe of Issachar, 'Kishon with her suburbs, Dabareh with her suburbs:

Galilee is given to a by their families, which were remaining of the families of the Levites, were, by their lot, twelve cities.

41 All the cities of the Levites, ‘within the possession of the children of Israel, were forty and eight cities with their suburbs.<sup>3</sup>

42 These cities were every one with their suburbs round about them: thus were all these cities.

43 ¶ And the LORD ‘gave unto Israel all the land which he swore to give unto their fathers;<sup>4</sup> and they possessed it, and dwelt therein.

44 And the LORD ‘gave them rest round about, according to all that he swore unto their fathers: and there stood not a man of all their enemies before them; the LORD delivered all their enemies into their hand.

45 There<sup>m</sup> failed not ought of any good thing which the LORD had spoken unto the house of Israel; all came to pass.

CHAPTER XXII.

1 The two tribes and half with a blessing are sent home. 10 They build the altar of testimony in their journey. 11 The Israelites are offended thereat. 21 They give them good satisfaction.

THEN ‘Joshua called the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manasseh,

2 And said unto them, Ye have kept all that Moses, the servant of the LORD, ‘commanded you, and have obeyed my voice<sup>1</sup> in all that I commanded you:

3 Ye ‘have not left your brethren these many days<sup>2</sup> unto this day, but have kept the charge of the commandment of the LORD your God.

4 And now the LORD your God ‘hath given rest unto your brethren, as he promised them: therefore now return ye, and ‘get you unto your tents,<sup>3</sup> and unto the land of your possession, which Moses, the servant of the LORD, gave you on the other side Jordan.

5 But ‘take diligent heed to do the com-children. And it would seem a contradiction to the statement so frequently made both by Moses and Joshua, that the Levite had ‘no inheritance’ in Israel. But let it be remembered, that though what in modern phrase may be called the lordship of those cities was granted to the Levites, yet whether it was exclusive, does not appear. David dwelt in Hebron with all his court, and it is not likely a king would be a mere tenant in his own monarchy; Saul not merely dwelt in Gibeath, but it is called ‘Gibeath of Saul.’ These considerations will lead to such deductions as will reduce the possessions of the Levites to very moderate bounds. But the best answer to any cavil upon the subject is, that the Israelites themselves—a people that seldom overlooked grievances—never made any complaint, but gave the cities cheerfully for the service of the tabernacle and the temple. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Those pleadings are ever successful at a throne of grace which are founded on God’s promises. God largely provides for his ministers, that they may attend on his service disentangled from the cares of this life. And yet it becomes them to be modest and reserved in seeking for themselves. It is prudent, indeed, that ministers’ incomes should be connected with the welfare of the church; but it is likewise proper that all such as are taught should communicate to their teachers in all good things. God can easily turn a well-deserved curse into a distinguished honour and blessing; and make the scattering of the Levites in Israel an honour to themselves and a certain mean of instruction to the other tribes. How commodiously the priests are settled for their future attendance at Jerusalem, where God did not place his name till about four hundred years after! But inviolable are the promises of God, who cannot lie; and it is pleasant, profitable, and dutiful to trace out in providence the exact fulfilment thereof.—But was not this Canaan, now disposed of to the Hebrew tribes, a figure of the gospel rest in the New Testament church; a figure of a spiritual state, and of our better country above? These are the lands which are chosen and provided by God for us: remarkably, under his inspection and care, watered with his heavenly rains and dews, and fertile of the choicest blessings, flowing with milk and honey. How holy! how pleasant! how inhabited by God and his children! And by what marvellous grace, wisdom, and power are we brought into them, through much tribulation! Not our bow, nor our sword, but JEHOVAH’S arm, favour, and countenance, get us the land: and he that truly enters it shall in no wise, nor ever, be cast out.

CHAPTER XXII. [Ver. 8. Divide the spoil of your enemies with your brethren. Such texts form the perpetual targets of infidelity, and although no arrow can pierce them, yet still the bow is bent anew, and another shaft expended, not in the hope of gaining a victory, but with the mere expectation of raising a fool’s laugh, or giving annoyance to pious minds. Such men delight to represent Joshua as a robber. Now the answer to such misrepresentations is plain. Joshua was God’s avenger against nations sunk into hopeless wickedness. See, ye infidel objectors, the indictment of your protégés, Le. xviii. passim, and especially ver. 27: and when he had cast them out, or rather when ‘the land had spued them out,’ for their wickedness, such things as were left behind must, as matter of course and necessity, find possessors in the present occupants of the country. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—However desirable our home may be, God’s work must be preferred to it. Yea, we ought to stay contentedly out of heaven itself, till our work on earth be finished, and Jesus dismiss us from our warfare with his blessing. And O! what abundant honour and extensive happiness shall we then obtain, as the gracious reward of our exact fulfilment of our dangerous but dutiful engagements! Our right to fellowship with God and his people should be clearly but prudently attested and commemorated, that neither we nor our posterity may lose or neglect the means of grace. And with godly jealousy professors mandment, and the law, which Moses, the servant of the LORD, charged you, to love the LORD your God, and to walk in all his ways, and to keep his commandments, and to cleave unto him, and to serve him with all your heart, and with all your soul.<sup>4</sup>

6 So Joshua <sup>9</sup>blessed them, and sent them away.<sup>5</sup> and they went unto their tents.

7 ¶ Now to <sup>10</sup>the one half of the tribe of Manasseh Moses had given possession in Bashan; but unto the other half thereof gave Joshua among their brethren on this side Jordan westward. And when Joshua sent them away also unto their tents, then he blessed them;

8 And he spake unto them, saying, 'Return with much riches unto your tents, and with very much cattle, with silver, and with gold, and with brass, and with iron, and with very much raiment: divide the spoil of your enemies with your brethren.<sup>6</sup>

9 And the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, returned, and departed from the children of Israel out of <sup>11</sup>Shiloh, which is in the land of Canaan, to go <sup>12</sup>unto the country of Gilead, to the land of their possession, whereof they were possessed, according to the word of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

10 ¶ And when they came unto the borders of Jordan, that are in the land of Canaan, the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, <sup>13</sup>built there an altar by Jordan,<sup>7</sup> a great altar to see to.

11 ¶ And the children of Israel <sup>14</sup>heard say, Behold, the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, have built an altar over against the land of Canaan, in the borders of Jordan, at <sup>15</sup>the passage of the children of Israel.

12 And when the children of Israel heard of it, the <sup>16</sup>whole congregation of the children of Israel gathered themselves together at Shiloh, to go up to war against them.<sup>8</sup>

13 And the children of Israel <sup>17</sup>sent unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the half-tribe of Manasseh, into the land of Gilead, <sup>18</sup>Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest,

14 And with him ten princes, of each chief

15 And they came unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the half-tribe of Manasseh, unto the land of Gilead, and they spake with them, saying,<sup>1</sup>

16 Thus saith the <sup>11</sup>whole congregation of the LORD, What trespass is this that ye have committed against the God of Israel, to <sup>12</sup>turn away this day from following the LORD, in that ye have builded you an altar, that ye might rebel this day against the LORD?

17 <sup>13</sup>Is the iniquity of Peor too little for us, from which we are not cleansed until this day, although there was a plague in the congregation of the LORD, 18 But that ye must turn away this day from following the LORD? and it will be, <sup>14</sup>seeing ye rebel to-day against the LORD, that <sup>15</sup>to-morrow he will be wroth with the whole congregation of Israel.

19 Notwithstanding, if the land of your possession be <sup>16</sup>unclean, then pass ye over unto the land of the possession of the LORD, wherein the <sup>17</sup>LORD's tabernacle dwelleth, and take possession among us: but <sup>18</sup>rebel not against the LORD, nor rebel against us, in building you an altar, besides the altar of the LORD our God.

20 Did<sup>c</sup> not Achan the son of Zerah commit a trespass in the accursed thing, and wrath fell on all the congregation of Israel? and that man perished not alone in his iniquity.

21 ¶ Then the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, <sup>19</sup>answered and said unto the <sup>20</sup>heads of the thousands of Israel, should watch over one another. But all, especially ministers and magistrates, ought to manifest a warm but charitable zeal against every appearance of evil, particularly false worship; for who knows how far and wide, if once admitted, it may spread its baleful influence. And such as have smarted for sin may justly dread the thoughts of renewing their provocation. In this state of imperfection, even in zeal for God, heavy charges are often brought against the innocent: and therefore with great meekness and candour, and, if need be, with solemnity, ought we to explain our conduct, for the satisfaction of our brethren who have mistaken it: and be concerned, not only that our intentions be innocent, but that our brethren may have no occasion to mistake us. And with readiness and pleasure should we receive men's candid exculpation of themselves, and thank God for it. Happy would it be for churches and nations if all their differences were conducted with so much prudent zeal for the glory of God, that it should be, as here, hard to find fault with either party.

CHAPTER XXIII. [Ver. 7. Neither make mention of the name of their gods. Christian legislators and judges do not hesitate to introduce superstitious and idolatrous modes of swearing, on the principle that every man is to swear in the mode that will most bind his conscience. This is a plausible but unsound argument, as it renders a judicial respect to superstition or idolatry that never should be rendered, and tends to elevate and perpetuate those evils which every true Christian must, by all means, labour to root out. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Happy is that nation, the rulers of which not only establish the true religion, but also mightily promote it with their example and advice.—Accurate observers of providence may in every age remark manifold grounds of thankfulness, and reasons for exactness in holy obedience: and God's kind favours, as well as his fearful judgments, whether past, present, or future, ought powerfully to influence us to holiness and circumspection of life. But while we are surrounded with temptations, we had need constantly to watch and pray; and to maintain a constant love to God as a mean of preservation from evil. Scarcely any snare is more fatal than affinity or intimacy with

SECOND VIEW OF THE SOURCE OF THE JORDAN. [JOSHUA, xxii:25.]—"For the Lord hath made Jordan a border between us and you, ye children of Reuben and children of Gad." It is about 200 miles from this particular source of the Jordan which flows from the roots of Anti-Lebanon to the Dead Sea, about 136 miles in a straight line. It is the river of the great plain of Palestine. The view we get here of the source of the Jordan is in the ancient city of Cæsarea Philippi. Frequent mention is made of the River Jordan in the Scripture, as a boundary. It was the limit of the Holy Land on the eastern side. The Jordan has several sources near Cæsarea Philippi. It passes through the lakes of Merom and Galilee. Two remarkable features about the Jordan are its descent and its windings. Between the Lake Galilee and the Dead Sea there are 2 rapids. At Lake Galilee the river is 653 feet beneath sea level, and at the Dead Sea it is 1316 feet beneath sea level.

What have ye to do with the LORD God of Israel?

25 For the LORD hath made Jordan a border between us and you, ye children of Reuben, and children of Gad; ye have no part in the LORD: so shall your children make our children cease from fearing the LORD.

26 Therefore we said, Let us now prepare to build us an altar, not for burnt-offering, nor for sacrifice:

27 But that it may be a witness between us and you, and our generations after us, that we might do the service of the LORD before him with our burnt-offerings, and with our sacrifices, and with our peace-offerings; that your children may not say to our children in time to come, Ye have no part in the LORD.

28 Therefore said we, that it shall be, when they should so say to us, or to our generations in time to come, that we may say again, Behold the pattern<sup>3</sup> of the altar of the LORD, which our fathers made, not for burnt-offerings, nor for sacrifices; but it is a witness between us and you.

29 God<sup>m</sup> forbid<sup>4</sup> that we should rebel against the LORD, and turn this day from following the LORD, to build an altar for burnt-offerings, for meat-offerings, or for sacrifices, besides the altar of the LORD our God that is before his tabernacle.

30 ¶ And when Phinehas the priest, and the princes of the congregation, and heads of the thousands of Israel which were with him, heard the words that the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the children of Manasseh spake, "it pleased them.<sup>5</sup>

31 And Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest said unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the children of Manasseh, This day we perceive that the LORD is among us, because ye have not committed this trespass against the LORD: now<sup>6</sup> ye have delivered the children of Israel out of the hand of the LORD.

32 ¶ And Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest, and the princes, returned from the children of Reuben, and from the children of Gad, out of the land of Gilead, unto the land of Canaan, to the children of Israel, and brought them word again.

33 And the thing pleased the children of Israel; and the children of Israel blessed God, and did not intend to go up against them in battle, to destroy the land wherein the children of Reuben and Gad dwelt.

34 And the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, called the altar Ed.<sup>7</sup> for it

Paul explained both privately and publicly to his hearers the manner of preaching the gospel, and Peter explained his conduct in the case of Cornelius, (Ga. 2. 2. Ac. 11. 4. So the tribes here do not angrily take fire at the mistaken charge of their brethren, nor doggedly refuse an account, but calmly explain their conduct till they fully satisfy their brethren. ## CHAPTER XXIII.

1 Joshua's exhortation before his death, 3 by former benefits, 5 by promises, 12 and by threatenings in case of disobedience.

AND it came to pass, a long time<sup>1</sup> after that the LORD had given rest unto Israel from all their enemies round about, that Joshua waxed old, and stricken in age.<sup>2</sup>

2 And Joshua called for all Israel,<sup>3</sup> and for their elders, and for their heads, and for their judges, and for their officers, and said unto them, I am old and stricken in age:

3 And ye have seen all that the LORD your God hath done unto all these nations because of you; for the LORD your God is he that hath fought for you.<sup>4</sup>

4 Behold, I have divided unto you by lot these nations that remain, to be an inheritance for your tribes, from Jordan, with all the nations that I have cut off, even unto the great sea westward.<sup>5</sup>

5 ¶ And the LORD your God, he shall expel them from before you, and drive them from out of your sight; and ye shall possess their land, as the LORD your God hath promised unto you.

6 Be ye therefore very courageous to keep and to do all that is written in the book of the law of Moses, that ye turn not aside therefrom to the right hand or to the left;

7 That ye come not among these nations, these that remain among you, neither make mention of the name of their gods,<sup>6</sup> nor cause to swear by them, neither serve them, nor bow yourselves unto them:

8 But cleave unto the LORD your God, as ye have done unto this day.

9 For the LORD hath driven out from before you great nations and strong; but as for you, no man hath been able to stand before you unto this day.

10 One man of you shall chase a thousand: for the LORD your God, he it is that fighteth for you, as he hath promised you.

11 Take good heed therefore unto yourselves,<sup>7</sup> that ye love the LORD your God.

12 ¶ Else, if ye do in any wise go back, and cleave unto the remnant of these nations, even these that remain among you, and shall make marriages<sup>8</sup> with them, and go in unto them, and they to you:

13 Know for a certainty, that the LORD your God will no more drive out any of these nations from before you; but they shall be snares and traps unto you, and scourges in your sides, and thorns in your eyes, until ye perish unbelievers; and it often happens that our tempters are arrested in sin, and our knowledge and remembrance of the mercies which we rejected a mean of tormenting us when we are deprived of them. It is therefore greatly unbecoming for professed Christians to regard so little the religion of those whom they marry or make their intimates: or to lard their speeches or writings with the names of idols, or even to deck their houses or gardens with their images for ornament.

from off this good land which the LORD your God hath given you.

14 And, behold, this day I am going the way of all the earth: and ye know in all your hearts, and in all your souls, that not one thing hath failed of all the good things which the LORD your God spake concerning you; all are come to pass unto you, and not one thing hath failed thereof.

15 Therefore it shall come to pass, that as all good things are come upon you, which the LORD your God promised you; so shall the LORD bring upon you all evil things, until he have destroyed you from off this good land which the LORD your God hath given you.

16 When ye have transgressed the covenant of the LORD your God, which he commanded you, and have gone and served other gods, and bowed yourselves to them; then shall the anger of the LORD be kindled against you, and ye shall perish quickly from off the good land which he hath given unto you.

6 And I brought your fathers out of Egypt: and ye came unto the sea; and the Egyptians pursued after your fathers with chariots and horsemen unto the Red sea.

The mention of anger in God has often been seen of infidel or (so-called) philosophical reprehension. For this, however, there is no ground. The Scriptures attribute not to God the unreasonable anger of men, but a holy displeasure at sin and sinners; of which, if there be a philosophy, it is that would deprive God, there is then a philosophy that deprives God of glory. A God that does not abhor sin cannot love holiness; and the moral agent that loves no holiness is himself wicked, and cannot be God.—C.

1 It will be remembered that the great national assembly of the Israelites in Canaan was held in the valley of Shechem, between Ebal and Gerizim. That locality was much better adapted for such an assembly than Shiloh. Shiloh stood on the rugged side of a hill, with a deep winding glen beneath it, and no spot capable of accommodating a large number of people met for a common object. The valley of Shechem, on the other hand, lying between Ebal and Gerizim, forms a great natural amphitheatre, and would afford ample space for a vast multitude met in council. There is no valid reason, therefore, for attempting to disturb the Massoretic text, or for supposing that Shiloh was meant, and not Shechem.—P.

<sup>13</sup> Did those great signs in our sight? How long Joshua survived the passage of the Jordan is not particularly recorded. Josephus reckons it 25, the Jewish chronology 27, Dr. Hales 26 years. We learn from ver. 20 that he died in his 110th year, from which deducting 26 after the death of Moses, and 40 years in the wilderness, we find he left Egypt in his 44th year. Therefore every man now present who was above 66 years of age had been in Egypt and had seen the signs which God wrought there; the rest had witnessed with their own eyes all that he wrought in the wilderness. These miraculous events, witnessed from the first in the most public manner and inseparably intertwined with burdensome national institutions, family privileges, and personal rights, form a mass of evidence for the divine mission of Moses and Joshua, which no history can furnish for the human commission of any of its distinguished characters.—C.

them; and your eyes have seen what I have done in Egypt: and ye dwelt in the wilderness a long season.

8 And I brought you into the land of the Amorites, which dwelt on the other side Jordan; and they fought with you: and I gave them into your hand, that ye might possess their land; and I destroyed them from before you.

9 Then Balak the son of Zippor, king of Moab, arose and warred against Israel, and sent and called Balaam the son of Beor to curse you:

10 But I would not hearken unto Balaam; therefore he blessed you still: so I delivered you out of his hand.

11 And ye went over Jordan, and came unto Jericho: and the men of Jericho fought against you, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Girgashites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites; and I delivered them into your hand.

12 And I sent the hornet before you, which drove them out from before you, even the two kings of the Amorites; but not with thy sword, nor with thy bow.

13 And I have given you a land for which ye did not labour, and cities which ye built not, and ye dwell in them; of the vineyards and oliveyards which ye planted not do ye eat.

14 ¶ Now therefore fear the LORD, and serve him in sincerity and in truth: and put away the gods which your fathers served on the other side of the flood, and in Egypt; and serve ye the LORD.

15 And if it seem evil unto you to serve the LORD, choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served, that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but as for me and my house, we will serve the LORD.

16 And the people answered and said, "God forbid that we should forsake the LORD, to serve other gods;

17 For the LORD our God, he it is that brought us up and our fathers out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage, and which did those great signs in our sight, and preserved us in all the way wherein we went, and among all the people through whom we passed.<sup>6</sup>

18 And the LORD drove out from before us all the people, even the Amorites which dwelt in the land; therefore will we also serve the LORD, for he is our God.

CHAPTER XXIV. [Ver. 1. Shechem. Several commentators of high repute are for displacing Shechem in this and every other part of the chapter except ver. 32, and supplying Shiloh, because the ark was at Shiloh and not at Shechem. Various reasons are assigned for this proposal, which we hold it unnecessary to repeat. There is no sufficient authority for the proposal, except the conjecture of the proposers, founded on an imaginary difficulty, which can have no weight against the almost uniform evidence of the Hebrew MSS. and early translations. If the ark was necessary to this great transaction, where was the difficulty in its 19 And Joshua said unto the people, 'Ye cannot serve the LORD: for he is <sup>an</sup> holy God; he is a jealous God; he will not forgive your transgressions nor your sins.

20 If ye forsake the LORD, and serve strange gods, then he will turn and do you hurt, and consume you, after that he hath done you good.

21 And the people said unto Joshua, 'Nay; but we will serve the LORD.

22 And Joshua said unto the people, 'Ye are witnesses against yourselves that ye have chosen you the LORD, to serve him. And they said, We are witnesses.

23 Now therefore put away (said he) the strange gods which are among you, and incline your heart unto the LORD God of Israel.

24 And the people said unto Joshua, 'The LORD our God will we serve, and his voice will we obey.

25 So Joshua made a covenant with the people that day, and set them a statute and an ordinance in Shechem.

26 And Joshua wrote these words in the book of the law of God, and took a great stone, and set it up there under an oak that was by the sanctuary of the LORD.

27 And Joshua said unto all the people, Behold, this stone shall be a witness unto us; for it hath heard all the words of the LORD which he spake unto us: it shall be therefore a witness unto you, lest ye deny your God.

28 So Joshua let the people depart, every man unto his inheritance.

29 And it came to pass after these things, that Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of the LORD, died, being an hundred and ten years old.

30 And they buried him in the border of his inheritance in Timnath-serah, which is in mount Ephraim, on the north side of the hill of Gaash.<sup>9</sup>

31 And Israel served the LORD all the days of Joshua, and all the days of the elders that overlived Joshua,<sup>1</sup> and which had known all the works of the LORD, that he had done for Israel.<sup>2</sup>

32 And the bones of Joseph, which the children of Israel brought up out of Egypt, buried they in Shechem, in a parcel of ground which Jacob bought of the sons of Hamor, the father of Shechem, for an hundred pieces of silver;<sup>3</sup> and it became the inheritance of the children of Joseph.

33 And Eleazar the son of Aaron died; and they buried him in a hill that pertained to Phinehas his son, which was given him in mount Ephraim.

temporary removal to Shechem, and its subsequent restoration to Shiloh?—Presented themselves before God. Upon the expression 'before God' the idea of the presence of the ark at Shechem is founded. The subsequent use of the phrase, and which in Scripture is generally the best resource of interpreters, does not warrant this conclusion. See Ac. 10. 33. C.]

Ver. 23. [Put away, said he, the strange gods which are among you. We cannot too often repeat our astonishment at the obstinate adherence of Israel to idolatry; nor too carefully draw the comparison between Jews and Christians in this point of view. Idolatry is a pliant sin, and can take many forms. The idolatry of the understanding—the idolatry of the imagination—the idolatry of the passions, are forms more common, and therefore less noticed, but not therefore less real nor less hateful in the sight of God, than the idolatry of the senses. He that places upon any object one particle of the love he owes to God, is as much an idolater as he who bows down to the sun, or worships a beast or an image of wood or stone. C.]

Ver. 26. [The word 'there' must necessarily refer to the place named immediately before; that is, Shechem, where the assembly was held and the covenant made. We may therefore conclude that the ark and tabernacle had been removed temporarily from Shiloh and set up at Shechem. There is, however, another probable explanation given by Masius:—'I think that that spot is called the Sanctuary of God which was the first in all Canaan to be consecrated by Abraham, when he erected an altar and offered worship by the tree which was standing there, and when he received from God his most welcome announcement.'—'The Book of the Law of God' is undoubtedly the Pentateuch, and we gather from the statement here that the words written by Joshua were considered of equal authority, and therefore a continuation of the divine oracles. P.]

Ver. 31. [Israel served the Lord all the days of Joshua. That is, Israel as a nation served God all the days of Joshua and the elders who outlived him. As individuals Joshua's own words testify that many were idolaters, of which fact they soon gave melancholy evidence. C.]

Ver. 32. [The bones of Joseph. The entire stream of history bears records of the tomb of Joseph. It is mentioned by Jerome, and continues to be pointed out to every modern traveller. It is now a Turkish oratory, with a whitened dome. It lies in the opening of the valley of Shechem, between the mountains of Ebal and Gerizim, and only a few hundred yards north of Jacob's Well. C. and P.]

Ver. 33. [About 5 miles south-east of Nablus, on the side of the ridge which bounds the upland plain of Mukhna on the east, stands the village of Awertah. In it is the traditional tomb of Phinehas, surrounded by a rude wall, and partially covered by the branches of a great vine. Some distance from the village, on a hill, stands the tomb of Eleazar, with a cave beside it, to which the name of Elijah is attached. It is overshadowed by large oaks, probably the remains of an ancient sacred grove. These tombs are held in great veneration by both Jews and Samaritans, a fact which goes far to prove their authenticity. Mohammedans also esteem them sacred. The district around them may thus be the place called by the historian in this verse the hill of Phinehas. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Faithful ministers and magistrates are loath to leave this world without spending their last breath in the service of God, and manifesting a deep concern to have religion flourish among their friends after their death. Marvellous and gracious are the transactions of God with respect to his people: and great cheerfulness and gratitude ought to take place in our service of him and in cleaving to him alone. And the most solemn engagements, with a deep sense of the purity, power, and profitableness of religion, should always be maintained, to render us duly diligent and constant in it. It is pleasing to see those who inculcate religion upon others, from choice become noted patterns of it themselves and in their families, and daring to be singular therein; and when people, the greatest not excepted, seem fond of attending solemn opportunities of fellowship with God, and edification to their souls. The glory indeed and influence of the great and good on earth is quickly stopped by death. But when our fathers fail, and since our prophets do not live for ever, what a mercy is it that our Redeemer liveth, and will be with us always, even unto the end of the world!

And was not Joshua a noted type of him, our Captain of salvation, who brings many sons and daughters to glory! God solemnly called him to, and fitted him for, his mediatorial office: and in his baptism at Jordan's banks began to magnify him before the people; nor did he ever fail him or forsake him. Made under and trained up in servitude to Moses' broken law, he became fit for his work; and even his name is pregnant with manifold and everlasting salvation. Through what Jordans of trouble and death does he bring his church into her gospel form, and her true members into their spiritual and celestial state! He circumcises their hearts, and feasts them on his flesh and blood, to prepare them for their spiritual warfare on earth. He powerfully intercedes for them, and makes up all breaches between God and them. Miraculously and wisely he conquers all their enemies, treads them under their feet, and enriches them with their spoil. He purchased and prepares for them the promised, the heavenly Canaan; and in due time puts them into the full and quiet possession thereof, according to his Father's purpose and promise. Having come into the bond of the covenant, he weans them from their idolatry, and makes them serve the Lord, and walk as he also walked.—Readily he receives returning harlots and prodigals—accursed sinners of the Gentiles—and consecrates them to the service of God. But no obstinate and hardened opposer is able to stand before him all the days of his life. Fire, hail, and furious storms he did and will rain upon his Jewish, heathen, antichristian, or other implacable enemies. Nor till his victories be finished shall the luminaries of heaven, or those of his church, withdraw their shining.
